Temple, March 7, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 17th ultimo, and to previous correspondence upon the subject of the action brought against the Queen Insurance Company at Rio de Janeiro, and the order issued by the Brazilian Court for the imprisonment of that Company's agent, Mr. Hammond was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter, and its inclosure, from Mr. McLagan, M.P., from which I should see that the Company are under the impression that there is no power of appeal against the sentence of imprisonment pronounced upon their agent, but only in the matter of the action against the Company.

The previous papers relating to this case, together with a memorandum on the subject which has been drawn up in the Foreign Office, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instruction which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the proper course for Mr. Taylor to adopt, as far as I understand the statement of Dr. Correja as to the law of Brazil, would be to surrender himself and apply to the proper Tribunal for a writ of habeas corpus, upon the return of which the legality of his imprisonment would be judicially decided by the proper Tribunal. I do not think that your Lordship can well intervene diplomatically upon the strength of the opinions of Brazilian lawyers, that the order for Mr. Taylor's imprisonment is illegal, however eminent those lawyers may be.

Temple, April 25, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin,* upon the subject of the proceedings of the Brazilian Law Courts in regard to an insurance effected by Messrs. Figueredo, Brothers, of Rio de Janeiro, in the Queen Insurance Office, and that we would see by those papers that there were two questions involved in the case. First, as to the ruling of the Brazilian Courts that the Company are liable for the full amount of the sum insured without regard to the actual loss sustained by Messrs. Figueredo; and second, as to the orders issued by the Brazilian Courts for the imprisonment of Mr. Taylor and Mr. Lyde, agents of the Company.

Lord Tenterden was pleased also to say that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government should take any, and if so what, steps in the matter to which they relate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the result of the voluminous papers sent to us in this case appears to be that on both the points as to which your Lordship desires our opinion a gross injustice has been done by the Brazilian Courts. We have not the actual words of the policy before us, nor, except from the opinions of Brazilian lawyers apparently of great eminence, can we assert what is the Brazilian law on either point. It is, however, incredible that a fire insurance should be in any civilized country anything but a contract of indemnity, as, were it otherwise, the temptation to fraud and the probability of its commission under such contracts would be enormous. It seems to us a very gross violation of natural justice to compel a company to pay the whole amount insured on a fire policy without reference to the loss actually sustained by the assured. And the conduct of the Courts in sentencing first Mr. Taylor, and afterwards Mr. Lyde, appears upon the facts before us wholly unjustifiable also on grounds of justice. There appears no pretence for the suggestion that they were either of them so sentenced on the ground that they were about to leave Brazil and that it was necessary to secure them.

Mr. Cobbold's despatches seem also to show that in that gentleman's view there has been a great miscarriage of justice, and that he is by no means satisfied with the manner in which his remonstrances are met by the Minister for Foreign Affairs in Brazil.

We think your Lordship may properly remonstrate strongly and urgently against the course pursued by the Brazilian Courts, and endeavour to obtain redress from the Brazilian Government for the injustice done by their Tribunals to British subjects. The extent to which your Lordship may think it right to push your interference, and the particular steps you may see fit to take, and what language to employ, are matters of which your Lordship must be the best judge, but we think that diplomatic interference is no longer improper or uncalled for.

And that your Lordship cannot, according to the law of this country or the comity or law of nations, as received it this country, direct that the marines be sent back for trial at Rio.

Draft Consular Convention with Brazil: Article as to wrecks.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th February last respecting a draft of Articles which Her Majesty's Government were about to propose to the Government of Brazil, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio Janeiro on the subject; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take them into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the modifications of the draft Articles desired by the Brazilian Government.

That we would observe that the Article about wrecks and salvage actually submitted to the Brazilian Government differed from that in the draft which was before us in February; and in explanation he (Mr. Hammond) was to state that the Board of Trade and Mr. Mathew (then in England) having subsequently come to the conclusion that it was of importance to British interests that provision should be made for the delivery to a Consul of articles saved from a wreck, an Article was substituted similar in purport to Article XX of the Treaty between Great Britain and Colombia of the 16th February, 1866, which would be found in Hertslet's Treaties, vol. xii, p. 377.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to

That having read and carefully considered the despatch of Mr. Mathew of the 26th September last, we are of opinion that there is no objection to the modifications of the draft Articles being agreed to, the second alternative in Article IV being adopted, but the whole Convention will then require to be confirmed by Act of Parliament.

Draft Convention with Brazil: Duties of Consular Administrators.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 5th instant on the subject of a draft Convention under negotiation between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Brazil, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio Janeiro, in which he (the Minister) inclosed a draft of a Memorandum or Protocol detailing the steps to be taken under Brazilian law by administrators, and which the Brazilian Plenipotentiary wished to be signed, in order to explain what would be required in Brazil under the IVth Article of the draft Convention. The Brazilian Plenipotentiary requested that he might be furnished with a corresponding statement of what was necessary to be done in this country, and your Lordship directed him (Lord Tenterden) to request that we would have the goodness to prepare the same, and transmit it to your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to

Report—

That the duties of a Consular Administrator in this country are—

1. To bury the deceased in a manner suitable to the estate which he has left behind him.

2. To take out letters of administration of the estate and effects of the deceased; but before the letters of administration will be granted to him, he will be required to swear to the probable amount of the personal estate and effects of the deceased in this country, and to enter into a bond with two sureties for the due administration of such estate.

3. To make, or cause to be made, a true and perfect inventory of all the goods and chattels, as well movable as not movable, whatsoever that belonged to the deceased at his death.

4. To collect all the goods and chattels so inventoried, including debts due to the deceased.

5. To sell such parts of the intestate's property as may be required to raise sufficient money to meet payments after mentioned.

6. To pay out of the estate of the deceased, and before any debt or duty whatsoever, the funeral expenses, and after the funeral expenses the costs of obtaining letters of administration.

7. To pay all the debts of the deceased so far as the assets in his hands will enable him to do so.

8. To retain the surplus of the estate (if any) for the benefit of such person or persons as may be entitled thereto.

We beg leave to point out to your Lordship that by the law of this country an Administrator is only concerned with the distribution of personal property, which in this country includes leaseholds.

My Lord, Temple, March 9, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two despatches, and their inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, reporting the circumstances under which Mr. Frank Turner, a British subject, in the employment of the Honduras Oceanic Railway Company, has been arrested and imprisoned by the authorities of San Pedro; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the case into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the compensation which should be demanded for Mr. Turner from the Honduras Government on account of the indignities to which he has been subjected.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship will be justified, in my opinion, in demanding from the Government of Honduras compensation not merely for the imprisonment of Mr. Frank Turner, but also for the stoppage of the works of the Railway Company, which were necessarily suspended in consequence of his incarceration. It will be advisable, I think, before your Lordship decides upon the amount of compensation which should be demanded, to ascertain what were the losses incurred by the Company, and what is the measure of compensation which would be satisfactory to Mr. Frank Turner. Your Lordship will thereupon have some data upon which a proper calculation may be made.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 27.)

My Lord, Temple, July 26, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was to transmit to us a copy of a Treaty concluded in 1856 between Great Britain and Honduras, an Additional Article to which contains stipulations in regard to a railway to be constructed from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean through the territories of Honduras. By the second section of that Additional Article, Her Majesty's Government, in consideration of certain concessions, guarantees the neutrality of the said road, and engages, "when the said road shall have been completed," to protect the same from interruption, seizure, or unjust confiscation.

That he was also to inclose a memorandum, drawn up in the Foreign Office in 1869, showing what had passed up to that date in regard to the proposed road.

That, since the date of the memorandum, contracts had been entered into by the Honduras Government, and the railroad is now in process of construction.

That, a war having recently broken out in Central America between the Republics of Guatemala and Salvador on the one hand, and that of Honduras on the other, it had been apprehended that the contending parties might use for belligerent purposes such portions of the railroad as were completed, and the question had therefore arisen whether the guarantees given by Her Majesty's Government could be held to apply to the railroad in its present incomplete state, or whether such guarantee would only come into force when the road had been completed from sea to sea.

And that the immediate danger had now passed away, peace having been concluded between the belligerent Republics, but, as similar circumstances are not unlikely to occur, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the construction to be placed upon the Additional Article to the Treaty of 1856.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the second paragraph of the second clause of the Additional Article defines the time when the guarantee shall come into force, and that such guarantee does not take effect until the railroad has been completed from sea to sea.

My Lord, Temple, March 16, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that with reference to the Report of Her Majesty's Advocate-General of the 18th April, 1866, relative to the claim of Thomas Williams, a British subject, for compensation from the Nicaraguan Government for ill-treatment he received at the hands of the Commander of Fort San Carlos in 1864, Mr. Hammond was directed to transmit to me, together with all the previous correspondence on the case, the accompanying letter from the Nicaraguan Minister at this Court, requesting to be informed what are the views of Her Majesty's Government in regard to the settlement of the case; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the matter into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Señor Marcoleta, and as to the amount of compensation which under the circumstances it would be right and proper to demand for Thomas Williams.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the amount of compensation demanded by Thomas Williams is, in my opinion, highly exaggerated, as he appears to have merited punishment, if it had been inflicted upon him after a proper judicial inquiry. I should think 5,000 dollars would be a fair sum for your Lordship to demand from the Government of Nicaragua.

That we would see from the papers that, on the 30th March last, your Lordship, by the advice of the Queen's Advocate, stated to the Nicaraguan Minister at St. James' that Her Majesty's Government were of opinion that 5,000 dollars would constitute a proper compensation to Williams, and that the Nicaraguan Government deeming that sum too high, had offered to pay Williams 1,000 dollars and to make him a grant of some lands besides.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the offer of the Nicaraguan Government should be accepted.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the offer of the Nicaraguan Government should not be accepted, unless the lands offered, together with the 1,000 dollars, bring an amount nearly equivalent to the 5,000 dollars claimed for Thomas Williams by Her Majesty's Government. The value of this land is not stated by the Nicaraguan Minister.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Nicaragua, together with the former papers respecting the claim of Mr. Goussen, a native of Jamaica residing in Nicaragua, to British nationality; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take these papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether, under the facts related, Mr. Goussen could be considered to have forfeited his claim to British nationality, and to what extent he was entitled to British protection against the consequences of the allegiance claimed from him by the Nicaraguan Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Goussen does not appear to have done any act to preserve his British nationality at the time he acquired property in Nicaragua and married a Nicaraguan woman, but if the statement made by him in his letter to Mr. Corbett of the 5th June, 1872, be true, that on the 27th March, 1863, he procured from the British Vice-Consul a certificate of his being a British subject, that he presented this certificate to the Nicaraguan Minister, who, under his official seal, recognized him to be a British subject, we are of opinion that Mr. Goussen recovered his British nationality, and is entitled to the protection of Her Majesty's Government as a British subject.

If the statement of Mr. Goussen above referred to be erroneous, Mr. Goussen has, in our opinion, lost his claim to British nationality.

My Lord, Temple, November 29, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, relative to the distribution of certain sums which had lately been paid to Her Majesty's Representative in Central America, on account of British claims on Honduras, under the Chatfield-Cruz Convention of 1852.

That the circumstances connected with those claims, and the sums hitherto received and distributed on account of them, were explained in the drafts to the Treasury, and the memoranda of August 21 and October, sent therewith.

That we would see by the accompanying papers that, in consequence of the incapacity, through illness, of Mr. Chatfield, since dead, to continue the duty which he formerly discharged of distributing the sums in question, your Lordship requested the Lords of the Treasury to allow their Solicitor to undertake the duty, but their Lordships had finally declined to accede to your Lordship's request.

And that your Lordship therefore proposed to address to their Lordships a letter (draft inclosed), suggesting that the duty should be intrusted by you to some practical accountant, or other person competent to undertake the same, who should act under the general supervision of the Solicitor to the Treasury, and should be remunerated, as Mr. Chatfield was, by a suitable commission on the amount distributed; but before doing so your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether you were empowered by the Convention of 1852 to adopt the course suggested.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is nothing in the Convention of 1852 which is against your Lordship's adopting the course suggested in letter to the Treasury.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson, relative to the seizure and detention by the Chilian local authorities of a vessel called the "Elgiva," belonging to their clients, Messrs. Wolf and Co., of Liverpool, and requesting Her Majesty's Government to take steps for protecting Messrs. Wolf's interests, and obtain for them compensation for the damage they have sustained in consequence of the detention of their ship.

The previous correspondence relating to this matter, in which the circumstances attending the seizure and subsequent release of the vessel are fully reported, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any steps which should be taken with a view to obtain compensation for the owners.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That this is not a case, in my opinion, in which your Lordship can properly make any demand upon the Chilian Government for compensation to Messrs. Wolf for the damage which they have sustained in consequence of the detention of their ship by the authorities at Puntas Arenas, unless Her Majesty's Government is prepared to dispute the right of the Chilian Republic to exercise jurisdiction over the island called "Quarter-Master." The owners of the barque "Elgiva" ought not, in my opinion, to have dispatched their vessel on such an expedition before they had ascertained, by application to your Lordship, that the islands where they contemplated collecting guano were not under the jurisdiction of any Power recognized by Her Majesty's Government.

The former papers in this case were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the despatch of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago of the 2nd February, 1872, which induces me to alter the opinion which I have already expressed to your Lordship in my previous Report, having regard either to general principles or to the provisions of the Chilian law cited by Mr. Thomson.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 20.)

My Lord, Temple, April 20, 1872.

That we would see this vessel was seized by the Chilian authorities while preparing to load guano at Quarter-Master's Island, in the Straits of Magellan; that she was subsequently released by the Chilian Courts; and that a claim to compensation for her detention had been put forward by her captain and by her owners, which claim, however, appeared, by Mr. Thomson's despatch No. 18 of the 1st ultimo, to have been renounced by Captain Keay.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration and inform your Lordship whether the two last despatches from Mr. Thomson (Nos. 17 and 18) contained anything to cause us to differ from the opinion on the case expressed by the late Queen's Advocate in his Reports of the 11th and 18th ultimo, viz., that it was not a case in which Her Majesty's Government could support a claim for compensation.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are clearly of opinion that this is not a case in which Her Majesty's Government can support a claim for compensation. Irrespective of the reasons stated by the late Queen's Advocate, we observe that Captain Keay has accepted a cargo of guano on advantageous terms from the Chilian Government, and, in substance, has abandoned all claims against that Government by admitting that the seizure of the vessel was just; so that, in reality, though not in form, there has been a compromise of such claims.

Lord Enfield was pleased to transmit to us a copy of the Instructions to Her Majesty's Consuls in regard to the Solemnization of Marriages (pp. 25, 185, and 194), together with copies of the Marriage Act and of a Circular to Her Majesty's Consuls, dated the 20th August, 1853, relating to the solemnization of marriages by Acting Consular officers, and to request that we would take the matter into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the point raised by Mr. Thomson.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received May 29.)

My Lord, Temple, May 29, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 23rd instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch from the Attorney-General of Hong Kong on the subject of the administration of the estates of aliens dying in the Colony. The despatch also contained suggestions with regard to the custody in transitu of foreigners accused or convicted of crime who had been deported from China or other places.

That the Colonial Office had obtained from the Chief Justice of Hong Kong a report on the despatch (inclosed); and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration and report to him our opinion on the two points raised by Mr. Pauncefote.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That in reference to the administration of the estates of aliens dying in the Colony, we are of opinion that it is very desirable to have some one person in the Colony whose official duty it is to at once take possession and care of the estates of aliens there dying, and hold it till the Consul or other person entitled to the grant apply for administration.

We can see no reason why the Consul should object to give the bond required, and particularly as the Supreme Court has the power to waive the bond if desirable as stated by the Chief Justice of Hong Kong.

In this first matter, therefore, we think no alteration need be made.

2. In regard to the custody in transitu of foreigners accused or convicted of crime and deported to the Colony, we are of opinion that some arrangement with foreign Governments might with advantage be come to under which, on application of the Consul at Hong Kong, the prisoners, subjects of the Government, might be detained in transitu at the expense of the Government of which they are subjects.

We have, &c.

My Lord, Temple, July 1, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 29th May, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a draft Ordinance enabling the Government of Hong Kong to deal with foreign prisoners in transitu, which it was proposed to send to the Colony for enactment; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take that paper into consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion upon it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That provision should be made for the absence of the Governor from the Colony; and this might be done by an interpretation clause defining Governor to include "the officer for the time being administering the Government of Hong Kong."

In other respects the Ordinance is, in our opinion, properly prepared for your Lordship's concurrence.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received August 8.)

My Lord, Temple, August 8, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, of the 30th March, 1872, from Mr. Caine, Her Majesty's Consul at Swatow, stating that, while in charge of the Consulship at Hankow, he had applied the sum of 1,941*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* out of the public funds in his hands to the payment of his private debts. Mr. Hammond also said that he inclosed a letter from the Treasury of the 5th August, 1872, to which Department the case was referred, requesting that steps might be taken for the arrest of Mr. Caine, in order that criminal proceedings should be instituted against him; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the course recommended by the Treasury should be adopted.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that a copy of the Order in Council for the government of Her Majesty's subjects in China and Japan was inclosed for convenience of reference, and that your Lordship would be glad to receive our Report in time to enable you to instruct Her Majesty's Minister and Sir E. Hornby by the mail leaving London on the 9th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there can be no doubt at all of the gravity of this case, nor of the completion of the offence of fraudulent misappropriation by Mr. Caine. Indeed his own letter shows that he is perfectly aware he has committed a crime, and is at the mercy of the Government. Speaking as lawyers only there can be no doubt of the legal propriety of the course recommended by Mr. Lingen. Whether on other and general grounds dismissal from office, and consequent ruin, may not be punishment enough for Mr. Caine, is for your Lordship, and not for us, to determine; but should your Lordship take this view of the matter it would not be necessary to proceed criminally.

In any view the money must be regarded as lost, and the question is one, therefore, of punishment only.

My Lord, Temple, December 2, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong relative to the deportation to that Colony of British subjects belonging to other Colonies, under the warrant of the Supreme Court for China and Japan; and he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the alterations in the Order in Council of 1865 suggested by the Governor and the Colonial Office, in order to prevent the inconvenience and expense entailed upon the Colony by the practice referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Colonial Office and the Governor of Hong Kong are best able to appreciate the inconvenience and hardship which the Order in Council of 1865 in its present shape inflicts upon the Colony of Hong Kong, and we are of opinion that the alterations suggested in Mr. Holland's letter may properly be made.

My Lord, Temple, December 5, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 8th August last, relative to the misappropriation of public funds in the Consular chest at Hankow by Mr. Caine, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, inclosing one from Sir E. Hornby on the subject of the proceedings to be taken against Mr. Caine; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer on that despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we agree with Sir E. Hornby that there may be great difficulty in securing a conviction of Mr. Caine if he be criminally prosecuted.

The failure of a Government prosecution may be more mischievous than the conviction of Mr. Caine will be beneficial, and the risk, therefore, not worth running.

But this is a question rather for your Lordship than for us, although we have already intimated, in our Report of the 8th August, 1872, how we should be disposed to answer it if it were for us.

My Lord, Temple, December 6, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Secretary to the Archbishop of Canterbury, inclosing an application from his Grace to the Queen for Her Majesty's licence to consecrate the Rev. Mr. Russell to be a Bishop in North China; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to report to your Lordship our opinion whether, having regard to the provisions of the Jerusalem Bishopric Act, Her Majesty could be properly advised to comply with the Archbishop's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no legal objection under the provisions of the Jerusalem Bishopric Act, 5 Vict., cap. 6, to Her Majesty's being advised to comply with the application of the Archbishop.

It is desirable that the Order in Council of 1849, though practically inoperative, should be revoked.

Temple, February 17, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 14th February instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Copenhagen (No. 10, February 6, 1872), inclosing copy of a letter addressed to him by the Chaplain to the Legation respecting the construction to be placed upon certain words in the declaration required to be made by persons applying to be married at Her Majesty's Legation.

Lord Enfield was pleased to inclose copies of the declaration and of the two Acts of Parliament referred to, and to say that as it was of great importance that no difference of practice should exist in Her Majesty's various Embassies and Legations upon the point raised he was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be issued respecting it to the heads of Her Majesty's Missions abroad.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the practice is sound, according to which marriages are only solemnized in Her Majesty's Legation when both the parties are British subjects, or where the man at least is a British subject.

We do not doubt, however, of the validity of a marriage for British pursoses of a marriage so solemnized where the woman only is a British subject, but as such a marriage may not be valid according to the law of the man's country, and the man will be at liberty to apply to the Tribunals of his own country to have his marriage declared null and void, it would be obviously unsafe for the woman to contract such a marriage, as the wife acquires her husband's domicile. With regard to the Rev. Mr. Ellis' objections to the form of declaration, we are of opinion that they are rather hypercritical, as we consider that the expression "as British subjects" would be satisfied in both the above-mentioned cases, the woman acquiring by marriage the national character of her husband, and becoming subject to British law during her coverture. But we see no objection to a modification of the form, so that the description of the national character of the respective parties should be inserted at the commencement of the declaration after their respective names, and the present words "as British subjects" should be omitted.

We think that it is of importance that the national character of the woman should be stated equally with that of the husband, as a marriage should in no case be solemnized in any of Her Majesty's Legations when the woman is the subject of the country in which the Legation is established, unless the woman has previously complied with all the requirements of its law as to notice and residence, it being obviously contrary to comity, where these requirements have not been fulfilled, to permit the marriage to be solemnized.

We may add that a declaration may, in our opinion, be properly substituted in future for an affidavit.

Temple, February 28, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in your Lordship's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that you had thought it advisable, upon consideration of the opinion expressed in our letter of the 17th instant, to issue a Circular instruction to Her Majesty's Representatives abroad explaining, in a way which should admit of no misconception, the prevailing practice as to the celebration of marriages at Her Majesty's Missions and Consulates.

Your Lordship kindly inclosed a draft prepared with that object; and your Lordship further stated that you would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether it correctly and clearly described the practice, or whether we would suggest any alterations in it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have made a few verbal alterations in the draft instructions, subject to which we are of opinion that they correctly and clearly describe the practice which should be observed in celebrating marriages in Her Majesty's Missions. We are not clear whether the practice at Her Majesty's Consulates under the "Consular Marriage Act" is identical with the prevailing practice in Her Majesty's Legations.

Temple, February 15, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 25th September last, suggesting that the charges preferred by the Egyptian Government against Mr. Petherick, formerly Her Majesty's Consul at Khartoum, should be referred to that gentleman for any reply he might have to make to them, he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further correspondence which had passed with that gentleman containing his reply to those charges, together with a work entitled "Travels in Central Africa," to which he referred in corroboration of his statements.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether or not Mr. Petherick had succeeded in refuting the charges brought against him by the Egyptian Government, and if we are now enabled to form a definite opinion on the case, and that your Lordship suggested that the reasons on which we base our decision should be very fully stated in order that they might be communicated for the satisfaction of the party against whom the decision was given.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Petherick has, in our opinion, established, by such evidence as the case would reasonably admit of, a state of facts as regards his conduct at the period during which he has been accused by the Egyptian Government of dealing in slaves, which is inconsistent with the truth of those charges, and may, in our opinion, be regarded as a refutation of them. We think it proved that natives were attacked and captured as slaves by persons who were in the employment of Mr. Petherick, but that such captures were made without his knowledge and in spite of his orders to the contrary, and that whenever he became aware of them he did his best to cause the captors to be punished for their misconduct. We find it difficult to particularize all the facts which lead us to this conclusion, the evidence on Mr. Petherick's behalf being chiefly circumstantial and consisting partly of statements contained in letters published by him in a book of travels before any accusation was brought against him. We think the most convenient course for your Lordship to adopt would be to inform the Egyptian Government that, upon a careful consideration of a variety of facts, the truth of which has been established to your Lordship's satisfaction, your Lordship is of opinion that the assertions implicating Mr. Petherick personally, which have been made by several of the witnesses whose statements have been transmitted to your Lordship by the Egyptian Government, are not trustworthy.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Thomson, having infringed the law by setting up and working a steam mill, cannot avail himself of the negligence of the Préfet of Police in not causing the mill to be closed at an earlier time, and in a regular manner.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt respecting a question raised in that country as to the appearance of the Sheik-el-Islam as a witness in a case before the British Consular Court against certain Maltese; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, more especially with reference to the 64th Article of the Order in Council of 1863 (Hertslet's Treaties, vol. xi), and report to your Lordship our opinion at our earliest convenience as to the instructions which should be sent to Colonel Stanton thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that, whether the Sheik-el-Islam were present at and heard the assault on his servant and the insults towards himself or not, his own evidence is not essential or necessary, and the fact and words may be proved by bystanders.

That copies of the Act of Concession for the Suez Canal, and of the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Turkey of 1861, were also inclosed; and that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Consul Stanton on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Consul Stanton may properly be instructed to state, in replying to Nubar Pasha, that coals imported to Port Saïd, and there put on board vessels about to pass through the Suez Canal, are not to be considered as goods in transit, and consequently are not exempt from duty.

Temple, July 23, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers (see margin of said letter) relative to an alteration in the rate of tonnage dues charged by the Suez Canal Company.

That the questions which arose on the present case appeared to be twofold, first, the meaning of the words in the concession, "tonneau de capacité des navires," and the proper solution of the difference which had arisen on the subject; and, secondly, the jurisdiction to which disputes in connection with the Company were to be submitted.

And that he (Lord Enfield) was to request that we would take the matter into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

That the inclosed extract from the "London Gazette" contained the provisions of the Danube Public Act relative to the Danube Tariff of navigation dues referred to in some of the papers referred to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in the absence of any information to be derived from the negotiations preceding the Act of Concession which may interpret the words "tonneau de capacité des navires" occurring in Article 18, sub-section 3, of the Act of Concession of the 5th January, 1856, we think the construction which the Suez Canal Company have, as appears from the papers forwarded to us, put upon them is a fair one, namely, the gross tonnage of the vessel after deduction has been made of space for the engine and coal bunkers.

This is the way in which the tonnage is calculated in the enactments of the European Commission of the Danube.

And the papers forwarded to us apparently show that the Suez Canal Company has adopted the existing English mode of measurement.

With respect to the second question, we are of opinion that the Suez Canal Company is, as admitted by M. de Lesseps in his letter dated Ismaïla, 12th May, 1872, to Sheriff Pasha (Inclosure 1, Sir H. Elliot's despatch on Egyptian Company), and that disputes in connection with the Company must in Egypt be submitted to that Tribunal which has jurisdiction over the defendant.

No. 47.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received August 29.)

Temple, August 28, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to the Reports of the Law Officers dated 22nd February, 21st May, and 7th July, 1870, respecting judicial reforms in Egypt, he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that the question has now arrived at a stage when foreign Powers must deal with it.

That the memoranda and other papers which Mr. Hammond inclosed would serve to bring before us the origin and progress of the discussions on this question until they were interrupted by the Franco-German war.

That the Viceroy of Egypt has from time to time since that period renewed his representations, with a view to obtain the consent of the Sultan and of the Powers interested to the inauguration of the new system; and that lately at Constantinople he appears to have come to an understanding with the Porte on the subject, the effect of which would be to adopt the plan agreed upon between the Porte and the Viceroy in April 1870 as the basis of further proceedings.

That the French Government, on the other hand, prefer the plan which they put forward in May 1870, and which the Law Officers considered might be adopted.

That we should see from Sir Henry Elliot's despatch No. 108 that the Ambassador and Sir Philip Francis incline to the Turco-Egyptian plan of April 1870.

That, on examining the Vizirial letter authorizing the new system, inclosed in Sir Henry Elliot's despatch No. 114, the arrangements appeared to be so vague that it seemed necessary, before proceeding further, to ascertain clearly what law it was proposed should be administered in the new Courts, and what form of procedure observed.

That the result of that inquiry was contained in Sir Henry Elliot's telegram of the 9th instant, and it appears that the laws to be administered are contained in the Codes inclosed in Lord Lyons' despatch No. 621 of the 20th June, 1870.

Mr. Hammond finally stated that before any definite reply is returned to the French Ambassador's memorandum of the 30th July, or any notification made to the Porte or Viceroy of the decision of Her Majesty's Government, your Lordship would wish to receive from us advice as to the course to be pursued, founded on a review of the whole correspondence now submitted to us, and that he was therefore to request that we would take it into our early consideration and report our opinion to your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the above-mentioned correspondence into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Ottoman and French projects, both based upon the recommendations of the International Commission, differ little from each other. The scheme proposed for its internal government by an independent Power would, for obvious political and social considerations, be preferable to any scheme proposed by a foreign Power.

On the 22nd July, 1870, in writing to M. de Lavalette your Lordship stated that Her Majesty's Government was prepared with the Imperial Government to accept the system of judicial reform for Egypt prepared and presented by the French Government, but without being pledged to accept the details of the five Codes then drawn up by the instructions of the Porte.

The expression of this agreement between the French and British Governments your Lordship directed, on the 1st August, 1870, should be communicated to Sir H. Elliot, and to other Representatives of Her Majesty resident at the Courts of those Powers which had taken part in the International Commission sitting at Cairo.

Your Lordship at the same time stated that it would rest with the Porte and the Pasha of Egypt to take the necessary steps for the construction of the new Tribunals and the inauguration of the new system.

On the 8th August in the present year your Lordship, in your note of that date to M. d'Harcourt, stated that Her Majesty's Government saw no reason to depart from the opinion expressed in your letter to M. de Lavalette in July 1870, but that, in consequence of some doubts which you had as to the meaning of the Vizirial letter of the 19th July last, you had required further explanation of the law to be administered in Egypt under the new system, and the form of procedure to be observed in the Courts constituted under it; and that foreign Powers had now certain rights connected with an existing system which your Lordship believed to be bad, but which could not be changed without the concurrence of foreign Powers, and that you were desirous of knowing what it was proposed to establish in lieu of the present system.

This explanation and information your Lordship received from Sir H. Elliot in his telegram dated the 9th August.

So far, and with the qualifications above referred to, your Lordship has expressed the agreement of Her Majesty's Government with the views of the French Government in 1870 and 1872.

Sir P. Francis, in his memorandum inclosed in Sir H. Elliot's despatch of the 23rd July last, whilst regretting that the French Government should have drawn up a separate project, and himself rather preferring the Ottoman project, considers the difference between the two so unimportant as not to justify a rejection of either of them.

In the telegram of the 9th August of this year Sir H. Elliot says that, at a meeting of the Heads of Missions at Constantinople, and in answer to the French Ambassador, Nubar Pasha explained that the Vizirial letter of the 19th July last merely authorized the Khedive to carry into effect the judicial reforms proposed by the Commission at Cairo and embodied in the Ottoman project; that the laws to be applied were those of the Codes of which the different Governments had already expressed their approval, and which would be in force during five years.

With respect to the criminal jurisdiction, the remarks of Nubar Pasha (Inclosure 3 in Sir H. Elliot's despatch of the 23rd July last), in our opinion, deserve the greatest attention. We agree with him in the opinion that it would be most injurious to the authority of the Civil and Commercial Tribunals that they should not at once have the power of punishing contempts of Court and resistance to their orders and decrees.

The new Tribunals are to contain not merely a European element, but a judicial and professional European element.

In our opinion, a Tribunal so composed, and after the proposed experience for a year of the administration of justice in civil matters by a similarly composed Tribunal, is more fit to be intrusted with a criminal jurisdiction than the system now in operation, and of which your Lordship, as we understand, expressed your disapprobation in your letter to M. d'Harcourt already referred to.

That system has outlived the times which made it either necessary or convenient for the administration of justice in the case of foreigners in Egypt.

We have troubled your Lordship with these observations, because, whilst forming our own opinion that the Ottoman project is the best, and therefore recommending the adoption of that project to your Lordship, we are aware that such a course may not meet the expectations which the French Government may have formed.

Should your Lordship's opinion coincide with ours, we have the honour to suggest—

That your Lordship should inform M. d'Harcourt that the differences between the French and Ottoman projects are so unimportant in principle that, out of consideration for the self-respect and independence of the Porte, your Lordship, after considering the proposed schemes and the Codes, prefers the Ottoman project, and hopes that the French

Government and other Governments interested will be able to agree with you, since the consent of those Powers is, as stated in the note verbale, necessary to the inauguration of the new state of judicial administration in Egypt.

The omission of any mention of such consent in the Ottoman project, as pointed out in the note verbale, clearly arises from the idea that the project and the five Codes had been approved of by the Powers, and is no reason now for rejecting or amending the project if the Powers consent.

The French project did not refer to a criminal or penal jurisdiction. The consideration of that branch of the subject is new.

The constitution, however, of the new Tribunals, which makes the attendance of skilled European Judges necessary, is a sufficient guarantee and protection for a sound exercise of a criminal jurisdiction, and the more so since that part of the scheme is not to come into operation till one year after the establishment of the Civil and Commercial Tribunals. And that these last Courts should at once have a sufficient penal jurisdiction to punish contempts and to enforce obedience, is necessary to the exercise of the powers to be intrusted to them.

That your Lordship is the more anxious to obtain the assent of the French Government because the scheme is only tentative and temporary, and that you quite agree with M. d'Harcourt that no changes or modifications should hereafter be made without the consent of the several Powers interested.

My Lord,
Temple, August 29, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st August, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 10th instant and previous correspondence, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us several further despatches from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople relating to judicial reforms in Egypt; and that he was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, together with those already before us, and report to your Lordship our opinion on the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, previous to receiving Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st August last, with the inclosures from Sir H. Elliot, dated the 8th and 12th August, we had formed our opinion and reported to your Lordship that the Turkish project for judicial reforms in Egypt was, on the whole, preferable to the French project.

Having now considered the further papers forwarded to us, we are confirmed in the opinion at which we had previously arrived.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence with Her Majesty's Acting Consul at Alexandria, relative to a claim preferred by Messrs. Willis Manché and Co. against Her Majesty's Government in respect of a deposit made by them with Dr. Zarb, who was at the time British Consular Agent at Port Saïd, but was removed from that post on becoming a bankrupt;* that there did not seem any probability of Dr. Zarb meeting that claim upon him; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could be held responsible for the money deposited.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Dr. Zarb, as British Consular Agent, had no official authority or duty to receive deposit, and we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot be held responsible for the money deposited with him.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in a memorandum from Viscount Enfield stating that, with reference to his letter of the 25th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a farther letter from Messrs. Clarkson, Son, and Co. relative to the collision between the steamers "Batavier" and "Charkieh."

Viscount Enfield also inclosed a note from the Turkish Ambassador at this Court claiming exemption from arrest for the "Charkieh," on the ground of her belonging to the Ottoman Government, and requested that the papers might be taken into the consideration of the Law Officers at their earliest convenience, together with the letter on the same subject already before us; and that your Lordship might be favoured with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Clarkson may be informed that the Turkish Government has claimed the "Charkieh" as belonging to the Imperial Marine, and that she must be released.

And that, in reply to M. Musurus, your Lordship may, after saying that the "Charkieh" shall be released, say that you hope the Turkish Government will not refuse its consent to the case being tried.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 2nd instant, respecting the collision between the steamers "Batavier" and "Charkieh," he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a farther, letter and its inclosures, from Messrs. Clarkson, Son, and Co., tending to prove that the latter vessel was a passenger steamer, and not, as was contended on the part of the Turkish Government, a ship of war; and he was to request us to take the letter, with the previous papers, into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the farther steps to be taken in the matter.

Viscount Enfield was also pleased to inclose a farther note from the Turkish Ambassador for our observations thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the documents inclosed in the letter from Messrs. Clarkson of the 12th November are proofs that the "Charkieh" was not a public vessel entitled to immunity from arrest, and we are of opinion that your Lordship may direct that the Turkish Ambassador be informed that these documents tend to show that, in claiming that the "Charkieh" be released as a public ship, M. Musurus may have been misinformed, and that your Lordship cannot, unless the papers be explained, interfere farther to protect her from detention.

It appears to us that your Lordship cannot comply with the request made by the farther note from the Turkish Ambassador.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th November instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further note from the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires at this Court,[*] asserting that, notwithstanding that the vessel "Charkieh" had paid light and pilotage dues on her arrival in the port of London, and had carried passengers and merchandize, she is the property of the Egyptian Government, and as such is entitled to be considered as belonging to the Imperial Ottoman navy, and therefore not liable to arrest.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he inclosed at the same time the previous correspondence respecting the case,[†] and that he was to request that we would again take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further steps which should be adopted in regard thereto.

Lord Tenterden added that a further note, likewise inclosed, had just been received from the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires,[‡] returning copies of the printed notices respecting the "Charkieh," which accompanied Messrs. Clarkson, Son, and Greenwell's letter of the 12th instant, together with an extract of a letter from Fédrys Pasha, an Agent of His Highness the Khedive.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That a ship engaged in trade as the "Charkieh" is, cannot, although she may be the property of a Government, be considered a public ship and exempt from arrest.

M. Musurus may therefore, in our opinion, be informed by your Lordship that you cannot interfere in the matter as he desires.

Your Lordship will be best able to judge whether you should express any opinion upon the expressed willingness of M. Musurus to submit the case to arbitration, a course to which we see no objection, and which may relieve the Egyptian Government from any fancied humiliation in being brought before a Court of Justice. The consent, however, of the owners of the "Batavier" must be obtained for a reference to arbitration.

a draft of a letter which, upon the receipt of our Report of the 5th ultimo, was addressed to Messrs. Glehn and Sons as to the course which it would be proper for them to take to prosecute their claim against the French Government.

Viscount Enfield was also pleased to inclose a letter from Messrs. Glehn in reply, in which the question was raised as to the liability of the City of Paris, against whom they had proceeded in that matter, to make good the losses which formed the subject of their claim, and urging the importance, under the circumstances, of diplomatic interference being now exerted on their behalf.

Viscount Enfield was also pleased to inclose the former papers in the case, and stated that he was to request that we would again take the matter into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Glehn's renewed application.

Temple, January 16, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 11th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing the reply of the French Minister to the notes addressed by Mr. West to the French Government on the 18th October last, respecting the increased duties levied by the French authorities on mineral oils of British origin; and that he was to request that we would take the papers then inclosed (January 13) into our consideration in framing our Report upon the papers already before us relating to that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the argument of M. Rémusat that the merchandize referred to in Article XVI of the Treaty of 23rd January, 1860 (Hertslet, vol. xi, p. 166), must be taken to be identical with the articles enumerated in Article I, is, in our opinion, not tenable. It is provided by Article XIII of the Treaty that "the ad valorem duties established within the limits fixed by the preceding Articles of the Treaty shall be converted into specific duties by a Supplementary Convention, which shall be concluded before the 1st of July, 1860." The provision, therefore, in Article XVI which forbids the imposition of any ad valorem duty higher than 25 per cent. on merchandize of British production or manufacture after 1st October, 1864, would be idle and inconsistent with Article XIII unless it was intended to apply to merchandize which would not be subject at such time to specific duties, in other words, to articles of British production and manufacture other than those enumerated in Article I. This view of the Treaty is confined, in our opinion, by the provisions of the Supplementary Convention itself concluded in accordance with Article XIII of the Treaty (Hertslet, vol. xi, p. 183) on 12th October, 1860; which, after establishing a Tariff of specific duties on certain articles of British production, and including all those enumerated in Article I of the Treaty, proceeds to make regulations for the importation of articles of British origin or manufacture taxed ad valorem. The circumstance to which M. Rémusat alludes, that the Tariff of 12th October, 1860, includes other articles than those enumerated in Article I of the Treaty of Commerce, so far from supporting his conclusion, appears to be adverse to it, as it shows that the list of goods enumerated in Article I of the Treaty was not intended to be an exhaustive list.

With regard to the Belgian Treaty of Commerce, we are of opinion that it does not assist the case of Her Majesty's Government, as the admission of rectified oil of petroleum of Belgian origin at the duty levied on "essence de houille" would appear to have been a matter of administrative arrangement, and not to have rested on any Treaty engagement, to the benefit of which Her Majesty's Government might rightfully make claim by reason of the most favoured-nation-clause in Article XIX of the Treaty of 23rd January, 1860.

That the Secretary of State for the Colonies, as we would perceive, was desirous of ascertaining your Lordship's opinion as to the answers which Governor Hill proposed to return to Captain Brown's questions, to some of which your Lordship suggested certain modifications.

That especial reference was made in the Colonial Office letter to the Report of the Law Officers of the Crown of the 24th March, 1859 (which we found in the manuscript volume annexed), and to various other documents bearing upon the particular points in question, contained in the four series of printed papers annexed.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take the correspondence into our early consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the several matters adverted to in the Colonial Office letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the whole of the correspondence into consideration and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly concur in the answers which Governor Hill proposes to return to the questions submitted to him by Captain Brown, of Her Majesty's ship "Danae," subject to the modifications suggested by the Earl of Kimberley in the respective answers to the fourth, fifth, and sixth questions.

terms of the original cessions made to France in that quarter, that country possessed the title to dispose of such territory to another Power by sale, or whether her rights were not confined to those of possession.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion, having regard to the terms of the British Declaration of the 3rd September, 1783, that the French Counter-Declaration of the same day (Hertslet, vol. i, p. 245) is equivalent to a pledge or engagement on the part of the French Government to use the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon for the purpose for which they were ceded, and to prevent them from becoming an object of jealousy between the two nations, and that it would be a breach of such engagement for the French Government to dispose of those islands to a third Power if Great Britain objected to it.

We consider the rights of France are rights of property under Article IV of the Treaty of Versailles, but that such rights cannot, consistently with the Declaration and Counter-Declaration, be used by France to the prejudice of Great Britain.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that upon the receipt of my Report of the 30th ultimo, respecting Mr. Stuart Mackenzie's claim against the French Government, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris was instructed to send home a copy of the Decree of the 15th June, 1871, to which I was desirous of referring, in order to ascertain whether both the classes of damage sustained by him are within the scope of it, Lord Enfield was now to transmit to me a despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing the Decree in question, together with copies of a further correspondence with Mr. Mackenzie; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, with the former papers also inclosed, and that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to what answer should be returned to his last communications.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Stuart Mackenzie should be informed that the circumstance of his being a foreigner would not relieve him, being resident in France, from the obligation of making himself acquainted with the Decree of the National Assembly of the 21st June, 1871, which appears to have been posted up in every commune, for the information of the parties interested, and that he ought, in accordance with that Decree, to have sent in his claim for compensation, within a given time, to the Prefecture of the department or the Sous-Prefecture of the arrondissement within which he was resident; and that as he has failed to comply with the law applicable to his case, and the Préfet of the Cher has, on that ground, refused to entertain his claim, your Lordship regrets that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere to obtain a reversal of the Préfet's decision.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, representing, as it would appear, that Vice-Chancellor Malins had issued certain orders for the deposit in Chancery of funds emanating from the French Treasury in the hands of Messrs. Morgan and Co., bankers, of London, and that he had subsequently refused to remove the attachment laid on those funds.

That the French Chargé d'Affaires observed that no question was raised as to the ownership of the funds in question, which were merely attached for the security of debts said to be owing by the French Government, but they (the French Government) protest against the proceedings in question, on the ground that it is contrary to international law that the French Government should be called upon to defend itself against private persons in a foreign Court of Law, and be thus deprived of the control over its own funds.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take M. Gavard's letter, and its inclosure, into our early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it, or as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That if the statement that no question was raised as to the ownership of the funds in question were correct, the judgments referred to would not be justified, being plainly contrary to international law. Not having the pleadings and evidence before us we are unable to state positively that this is incorrect; but, from inquiries made (by the Solicitor-General) it seems that the plaintiffs alleged, and the Judge considered it to be proved, that the funds in question had been deposited in the hands of Messrs. Morgan as trustees for the plaintiffs; in other words, that the then Government of France had so dealt with these funds as to have equitably assigned them to the plaintiffs. If this is correct in fact, the French Government would have ceased to be the owner of the funds, and the judgments would not be contrary to international law, the suit being brought, not against the Government, but against a trustee for the plaintiff, and the Government being only made a party by reason of this claiming the funds.

If the reasons of the judgment are correctly stated above, but the facts on which such judgment proceeds were not proved in evidence, then Messrs. Morgan or the French Government should appeal against the decision of the Vice-Chancellor; but we see no ground for other interference, as the law of England as to the incompetency of a Tribunal to entertain a claim against a foreign Government is the same as that of France.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Lord Lyons,[*] inclosing a Report of a debate in the French National Assembly on the imposition of duties on raw material,[†] in the course of which M. Thiers claimed a right, on the part of the French Government, to impose a tax on raw materials under the provisions of the IXth Article of the Treaty of Commerce of the 23rd January, 1860, and IIIrd Article of the Second Supplementary Convention of the 16th November, 1860, and also to impose additional duties as "droits compensateurs" on manufactured goods, in the manufacture of which such raw materials entered; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the construction put upon those Articles by M. Thiers and the other speakers who addressed the Assembly.

That we would observe that there was nothing to show that it was contemplated to impose an excise tax or inland duty upon articles of French production, and that some of the articles, as for instance cotton, were not of French production at all.

That, moreover, it was a question how far Article IX of the Treaty was limited by the words "comprised among the preceding enumerated articles," and Article III of the Second Supplementary Convention by the expression "duties of excise now imported."

Lord Tenterden kindly inclosed copies of the Treaty of Commerce, Additional Articles, and Supplementary Conventions, with a report of the preceding debate in the Assembly.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Article IX of the Treaty of Commerce applies only to the articles enumerated in Article I of the same Treaty, with the additional proviso that they shall be of French production or manufacture, and, consequently, that no increase of customs duties can be imposed on such articles of British origin or manufacture, unless a corresponding excise tax, or inland duty, is previously imposed on similar articles of French production or manufacture.

We are further of opinion that, as to Article III of the Second Supplementary Convention, no increase of customs duties, beyond those specified in the Article itself, can be imposed upon articles of British origin and manufacture, except in the event of such a modification of the excise duties actually levied at the date of the Convention upon French manufactures as would cause a corresponding increase in the cost of similar articles of French manufacture.

It follows from this that the proposal of M. Thiers referred to in the despatch of Lord Lyons of the 16th January is, in our opinion, incompatible with the terms of the existing Treaties.

Lord Tenterden inclosed a memorandum, drawn up in the Foreign Office, containing a list of the most recent and important Treaties which France had concluded with foreign countries, and showing the bearing of those Treaties upon the question of differential duties, and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the rights which British shipping might possess in French ports under existing Treaties, bearing in mind the benefits which France might have accorded by Navigation Treaties to other countries.

And that the French Law of 1866, and other papers bearing upon the question, would be found, as noted in the margin.†

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That with regard to the question referred to in the correspondence between your Lordship and Lord Lyons as to the Bill now pending before the French Assembly for the imposition of differential duties, and which we presume was intended to be submitted to us in the letter of Lord Tenterden of the 3rd February, we are of opinion that, as the duties proposed to be imposed are to be levied not on the ships but on the cargoes according to weight, they are duties on the importation of goods within the meaning of the Vth Article of the Convention of the 16th November, 1860, and that, having regard to the Treaties with Austria and Sweden, no such duties can be imposed on goods imported in British ships while such Treaties remain in force.

Temple, February 13, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 28th August last, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing further correspondence respecting Mr. Caudwell's complaints against the Tribunal at Boulogne, and to request that I would take the papers into my consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Lord Lyons in the case. The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, transmitting a further despatch, and its inclosures, upon the same subject received from Lord Lyons.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons should be instructed to inform Mr. Caudwell that, before your Lordship can pronounce any opinion on the subject of his complaint against the administration of justice by the Tribunals of Boulogne, your Lordship requires to be furnished with a statement in detail drawn up by Mr. Caudwell's avoué, and verified by him as to the precise points in the case in regard to which Mr. Caudwell impugns the conduct of the French Judges, and asserts that the law of France has been violated by them to his prejudice, and that your Lordship further requires to be informed whether there was not an appeal to the Superior Court at Rouen open to Mr. Caudwell, and if so why Mr. Caudwell did not avail himself of the right of appeal.

Temple, February 17, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the accompanying letter from Mr. Farrer, commenting on our Report of the 12th instant, together with a despatch upon the receipt of which that Report was addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris respecting the duties imposed on shipping by the Marine Marchande Law recently passed by the French Assembly; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request we would take the same into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether Mr. Farrer's observations induced us to alter the views expressed in our Report.

Lord Tenterden inclosed all the correspondence for reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we agree with Mr. Farrer that it was not the intention of the framers of the Vth Article of the Supplementary Convention of 1860 to give to British ships any advantage at all; but Mr. Farrer appears to us to have missed the point upon which our Report to your Lordship of the 12th February bore, which was that the proposed French duties are not properly duties imposed upon shipping, but duties imposed on merchandizes, being duties imposed on the goods which are in each case the subject of freight, and not on the tonnage of each ship according to measurement. The motive for imposing the duties may be, in fact, to give a preference to French shipping, but they are, in our opinion, proposed to be levied on the merchandize and not on the ships, and as such are not navigation dues but customs duties.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Board of Trade on the duties imposed under the recent French Marine Marchande Law.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to inclose copies printed of the previous letters from that Department adverted to in this communication, together with the Treaty of 1860, and its several Annexes, as already placed before us; the Correspondence presented to Parliament in 1867, referred to by the Board of Trade; and the recent Marine Marchande Law and Customs Circular; and in acquainting us that Lord Lyons had been instructed in the sense of our previous Reports; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the matter into reconsideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with such further observations as we might have to offer.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the only questions upon which we advised was the constructions of the Treaties, and we see no reason to alter our former opinion as to this point. The Board of Trade persists in regarding the "surtaxe de pavillon" as a tax upon shipping, whereas it is a tax upon merchandize, although the motive for imposing it is to secure protection to French shipping, and, therefore, the tax is levied by reason of the flag under which it is imported being a foreign flag. At the same time, we must observe that the letter of the Board of Trade of the 17th instant raises a totally new point, namely, a question of good faith on the part of Her Majesty's Government in insisting upon our construction, having regard to the intentions of the negotiators of the Treaty, as now stated in that letter. If the facts therein mentioned are accurately stated, we must remark that, if our construction is insisted on, the French would be entitled to complain of advantage being attempted to be taken of the wording of the Treaty to impose obligations on them which it was known to the negotiators on both sides were not intended to be enforced; and, assuming that the intention of the English negotiators is known to our Government to have been opposed to what we consider the true construction of the Treaty, then we could not recommend such a course to be taken.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, on receipt of my Report of the 13th ultimo, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris was instructed by your Lordship to require Mr. Caudwell to furnish the information on various points connected with his complaint against the legal Tribunal at Boulonge which were specified in that Report; and Mr. Hammond was now to transmit to me the reply which has been received from Lord Lyons on the subject, inclosing copies of a correspondence which has passed between his Excellency and Mr. Caudwell; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions with which it is desirable that Lord Lyons should now be furnished in regard to his communications with Mr. Caudwell upon this subject.

The former papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Caudwell should be informed that the question upon which your Lordship's intervention has been requested by him is, in your Lordship's opinion, a question of French law to be decided by the competent French Tribunal, and that your Lordship is not satisfied, upon the representations hitherto made by Mr. Caudwell, that your Lordship would be justified in intervening diplomatically in his behalf.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter, and its inclosures, from Mr. Insley, a British resident at St. Malo, in France, complaining of the manner in which a claim, which he has preferred against the French Government for provisions furnished by him during the late war for the revictualling of Paris, has been dealt with, and requesting that Her Majesty's Ambassador in that capital may be instructed to interfere in his behalf; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the claim in question is one which can properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government, and, if so, what instructions should be addressed to Lord Lyons on the subject.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris and Her Majesty's Consul at Calais. These despatches related primarily to a question which had been raised as to the supposed right of British subjects holding real property in France to dispose of the same by will according to the provisions of English law; and next, to the question (arising out of the former) of entering into negotiation for the conclusion of a Consular Convention with France.

That your Lordship was of opinion that it would at present be of no practical utility to open a negotiation with the French Government on the last-mentioned point; but your Lordship would be glad if we would take the other point into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which your Lordship should return to the despatches of Lord Lyons and Mr. Consul Hotham.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it must be regarded as a settled principle of international law that immovables are to be disposed of according to the laws of the country where they are situate. This principle governs the rights of parties equally as the modes of transfer and the solemnities which should accompany them, and it is recognized in English Courts of Law. Lord Lyons and Mr. Consul Hotham may accordingly be informed that British subjects hold real property in France subject as regards every disposition of it, whether by will or act inter vivos, to the law of France alone.

My Lord,

was to be proceeded with before the Tribunal Correctionnel at Lille, on Tuesday, the 19th instant, in which a firm in London, as well as several other British subjects, appear as misdemeanants, being charged with complicity in certain alleged frauds by a French army contractor, in respect of acts done and sales made in England.

We would perceive that the matter was one of great urgency, as the trial was appointed to come on at Lille on Tuesday next, and that he was therefore to request that we would take the matter into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion as to the instructions which might be given to Lord Lyons thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That criminal proceedings in France against English subjects resident in England for a crime alleged to be committed here are contrary to the law of nations, and as far as we are able to form an opinion appear not to be warranted by French law. We think Lord Lyons may be properly instructed to represent to the French Government that the service in England on an Englishman of a citation to appear before a French criminal Tribunal for an alleged offence committed here, and the attempt to try him in his absence for such an offence are contrary to the comity of nations, and would not be permitted by English law as regards French subjects, and a request should be made for information as to whether the acts complained of are lawful according to the laws of France.

Temple, March 27, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter dated the 23rd March, 1872, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Lord Lyons on the question of the liability to payment of "surtaxes de pavillon" in the case of vessels which may have sailed before the enactment of the French laws on the subject, a copy of which was also inclosed, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Lord Lyons on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no reason to doubt the correctness of M. Treitt's exposition of the French law on the subject; indeed the English law is the same, and in the absence of express exemption, even goods already in bonded warehouses would pay customs duties afterwards imposed, whether they were higher or lower than the duties existing when the goods were warehoused, and the same rule, of course, applies to goods shipped, but not arrived, before the alteration in the duties. Merchants must be taken to be aware that it is possible that the customs duties or navigation dues of a country may be changed between the time of the shipping and arrival of their goods at the port of destination, and that the Legislature of the country imposing such duties may decline to make any exemption in favour of goods previously shipped, and therefore we think that the only instructions which can be properly addressed to Lord Lyons on this subject is to inform him that the claim of M. Benecke is unfounded in law, and that, as there does not appear any reasonable ground for supposing that the French Government would apply to the Chambers to alter their legislation on the subject, it is not necessary to bring the claim before the French Government, unless your Lordship should be of opinion that as a matter of policy it would be well to inform that Government of the complaint, and to direct its attention to it as a case of hardship.

Temple, March 28, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th March, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th January, he was directed by your Lordship to state that you were desirous of consulting us again on the question of the duties levied by the French Government on mineral oils of British origin, and he was requested to transmit therewith a selection of papers, but that, should those papers not be sufficient for purposes of reference, the whole correspondence would be communicated to us.

That we would perceive from the last instruction (dated the 20th March) addressed to Lord Lyons the course which he had been directed to pursue in regard to the three points, of maximum of duties to be levied, of differential treatment of American oils, and of British contracts anterior to the new French law.

That your Lordship now wished to inquire whether we have any remarks to offer on the instructions given on these points; and further, to ascertain our opinion as to the precise amount of duty which the French Government was warranted in levying on mineral oils of British origin, and as to the steps which might be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take with respect to that part of the question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We have no remark to offer on the instructions given to Lord Lyons on the three points above referred to. There being, as we understand, no excise duty in France on mineral oils, and no less duty than 25 per cent. charged to a third Power, we are of opinion that the French Government is warranted in levying 25 per cent. ad valorem as duty on the importation of mineral oils, and no more. With respect to the steps to be taken, we think that energetic remonstrances should be made to the French Government in the sense of Mr. Farrer's two letters and of your Lordship's own instructions to Lord Lyons, in such manner as your Lordship may think most likely to prove effectual, and that claim should be made for the return of all duty over 25 per cent. ad valorem already charged. If these steps should prove ineffectual, there will remain only the usual remedies resorted to by a nation aggrieved by a breach of Treaty committed by another to its prejudice.

WE are of opinion that M. de Rémusat may properly be informed that any administrative intervention of whatever kind on the part of the French Government, having for its object the deportation of French criminals to England, would be regarded by Her Majesty's Government as a serious breach of international comity. Whatever may have been the case in former times, it cannot now be tolerated that any country should send its convicts to the territory of a friendly neighbouring Power without previously ascertaining the willingness of such Power to receive them; the continuance of such proceedings would naturally compel the friendly nation in self-defence to enact such laws as would prevent its right of asylum being abused.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons, together with the papers therein referred to, calling attention, with reference to the question of duties in France on British mineral oils, to what appeared to have been the intention of the French National Assembly with respect to increased duties on sugar, namely, that such duties would be chargeable to the buyer in France; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, with reference to the points in connection with duties on British mineral oils which had formed the subject of our several Reports respecting these duties, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the French Tribunals are stated to have decided that a man who contracts to deliver mineral oil in Paris at a given price must perform his contract, although the French import duties have been increased between the date of the contract and the date fixed for the delivery. At or about the same time, it seems a statement was made by a French Minister in the Chamber to the effect that, by the French law, the purchaser must pay the increased duty on sugar. We have no doubt that the decision of the Tribunals is correct; and, indeed, any other decision would be against the well-settled principles of the law of contracts. A vendor who contracts to deliver goods at a given place, on a given day, at a given price, must, of course, pay all sums necessary to be paid in order to procure the goods and to cause them to be transported to the place of delivery; and these sums include not merely the cost of production and transport, but all duties of export and import, and all other charges. If the charges for freight, for example, were, by reason of war or otherwise, suddenly increased, the vendor must bear the loss; and so he must if duties are increased, in all cases when the goods are to be delivered duty paid. In the same way, if freights or duties were diminished, the purchaser would have no right to call upon the vendor to accept a reduced price. It is for the Government imposing the duty to consider whether a sudden large increase in duty is not such a hardship on vendors under existing contracts, who had no reason to expect such increase, as to give such vendors a fair claim to exemption from the payment of such increased duty.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 9.)

Temple, April 8, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence, as marked in the margin, which had passed between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of France having reference to the circumstances under which Mr. D'Arcy, the British Vice-Consul at St. Valery-sur-Somme, was compelled in the month of September 1870 to abandon his post and, together with his family, to seek refuge elsewhere in consequence of the excited state of popular feeling in that town.

That Mr. D'Arcy, it would be seen, had been accused of having uttered cries of "Vive la Prusse, à bas la France!" and it was the alleged utterances of these cries at a time when the occupation of the surrounding country by the German army had strongly excited popular feeling in France that was stated to have given rise to the disturbances which compelled Mr. D'Arcy to quit his post.

And that a further charge of habits of intemperance was also brought by the French authorities against Mr. D'Arcy.

That these charges Mr. D'Arcy emphatically denied. And we would see that, with the view to arrive at the merits of this case, Her Majesty's Government and the Government of France agreed to appoint a joint Commission to ascertain what foundation there was for the charges preferred against Mr. D'Arcy.

And that the Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into this case was annexed, from which it would be seen that several French witnesses deposed to having heard Mr. D'Arcy utter the obnoxious cries; but, on the other hand, beyond the idea stated to be prevalent in the town of St. Valery that Mr. D'Arcy was addicted to habits of intemperance, there did not appear to be a shadow of evidence in support of such a charge.

That, under these circumstances, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government should rest satisfied with the result of the investigations made by the joint English and French Commission in this case, and if not, what further steps it would be advisable that they should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government should rest satisfied with the result of the investigation made by the joint English and French Commission in this case. It seems to us that the French authorities having instituted two regular inquiries into the matter, and the witnesses who made depositions having been afterwards, in the presence of the Commission, confronted with Mr. D'Arcy without varying their statements, the fact that he uttered the cries in question must be taken as sufficiently proved, at all events, as between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of France. The French Government might have insisted on the finality of its own judicial proceedings, and probably would have done so if the depositions had not been mislaid in the first instance, but having, at the request of Her Majesty's Government, agreed to a further investigation before a Mixed Commission, and the Commissioners having taken evidence and having all arrived at the same result, it seems to us impossible for Her Majesty's Government to reopen the question. We think, too, having regard especially to Mr. West's Confidential communication of the 11th March last, that it is by no means improbable that a person who could act in the manner which Mr. D'Arcy did before the Commission might be led away by excitement to say things which he did not intend, and he might have made use of the expressions attributed to him without exactly knowing what he was saying, and without, therefore, being open to a charge of untruthfulness because he had afterwards forgotten that he had made use of them. There is nothing to rebut the positive assertions of the French witnesses, and, apart from the reason we have given for accepting the Report of the Commission, we see no ground to doubt the correctness of their conclusions.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us drafts of two despatches which your Lordship proposed to address to Lord Lyons in regard to the question of duties in France on mineral oils of British origin; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the proposed instructions into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, in our view, they rightly stated the case as it should be presented in the remonstrance to be addressed by Her Majesty's Government.

Viscount Enfield further stated that he was directed to point out that, in our observations as to the steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government, no reference was made to claims for damages by British firms in consequence of the change of duty, and he was to request that we would further state what, if any, addition to the instructions to Lord Lyons we would suggest on that point.

And lastly, that he was to add that, as it was desired to send the instructions by Wednesday's messenger, it would be a great convenience if our reply could be received to-morrow (to-day).

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the despatches your Lordship proposes to address to Lord Lyons are such as may properly be sent to him. With respect to damage payable to British firms in consequence of the change of duty, we are of opinion that such firms could not claim as damages a larger sum than the sum which they have had to pay for the increased duty, and the return to them of this sum your Lordship appears to have already instructed Lord Lyons to ask for.

Temple, April 11, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a correspondence (respecting the case of a Mr. Caudwell, a British resident at Boulogne-sur-Mer, who had been in communication with the British Embassy at Paris respecting a lawsuit in which he had been engaged in France to enforce the fulfilment of a contract for the purchase of a house belonging to him at Boulogne, and in regard to which lawsuit he stated that he had been unable to obtain justice at the hands of the legal Tribunal before which the case had come.

That the instructions which had been addressed to Lord Lyons from the Foreign Office upon the subject had been founded upon reports received from the late Advocate-General, in accordance with which Mr. Caudwell had lately been informed that the question upon which he had requested the interference of Her Majesty's Government was one of French law, such as could be decided by a competent Tribunal; and that your Lordship was not satisfied by the representations hitherto made by Mr. Caudwell that you would be justified in interfering diplomatically on his behalf.

That we would perceive, in the correspondence inclosed in Lord Lyons' despatch No. 399 of the 1st instant, that, in addition to other matters of complaint, Mr. Caudwell stated that the Tribunals had not only come to no decision in his case, but had struck the case off the roll, by which means he had been deprived of appeal to any other Court, in consequence of which he renewed his application for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government on his behalf.

And that under these circumstances he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Lord Lyons with reference to his last despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think Lord Lyons may be properly instructed not to take any further proceedings in this matter, it not being a subject for diplomatic interference.

Mr. Caudwell makes three complaints—

1. Of a corrupt denial of justice by the French Tribunals at Boulogne, by reason of the President and Judges being under the influence of the wife of his opponent.

2. Of corrupt conduct on the part of his attorney ("avoué") conspiring with his opponent's attorney to institute a frivolous suit, for the purpose of making costs.

3. A denial of justice by the Tribunal at Boulogne irregularly and illegally striking his case out of the list of causes ("radiation"), and thus dismissing the suit without the possibility of appeal.

As to the first two complaints Mr. Caudwell produces no evidence whatever except his own assertion, and that assertion is merely vague and general, without stating any dates, places, or other facts which could form the subject of inquiry, and although requested to send confirmatory evidence, he has not done so; it is evident that no action could be taken with reference to such serious charges without evidence.

As to the third complaint we see no reason to doubt M. Treitt's exposition of the French law and practice as contained in his opinion of the 25th January last. This "radiation" is a judicial proceeding, and Mr. Caudwell was requested to furnish a statement by a competent French lawyer to explain why and under what circumstances it took place, and whether there was any ground of complaint for irregularity or otherwise. This Mr. Caudwell has not furnished, and he has not even stated any reason whatever in support of his general allegation of injustice being committed by such "radiation," and it is not possible for us to find out from the papers that he has any ground of complaint at all; indeed, from a letter of his "avoué," M. Varlet, we should suppose that the case was struck out because the proceedings were not proceeded with in due time, being like the dismissal of a suit in England for want of prosecution, which is a mere matter of course after a certain lapse of time.

We may add that we entirely concur in the views which have been taken of this matter by M. Treitt and Sir T. Twiss.

Moses, in the City, as represented by Mr. Underdown, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Underdown, inclosing a copy of a letter addressed to his clients by the French Consulate-General in London, inviting them to call at or send to the Consulate, in order to receive some judicial document in connection with these proceedings.

That Mr. Underdown appeared to be in doubt as to the exact legal meaning or value of the document received by his clients, which, however, they thought might be open to serious objection; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take this point into consideration, together with the papers now before us, and that we would favour your Lordship with any observations thereupon which we might have to make.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Temple, April 16, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 19th ultimo, upon the case submitted by Mr. Underdown on behalf of his clients, Messrs. Moses, against whom proceedings had been taken before the French Tribunals at Lille for complicity in certain alleged frauds by a French army contractor in respect of acts done and sales made in England, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Underdown, with various inclosures, upon the subject, in which he urged the gravity of the position of his clients, and repeated his protest against their being legally liable to be tried in France for acts alleged to have been committed in this country.

That it did not appear that any other action had been taken in the matter, but Mr. Underdown asked for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government, through Lord Lyons, in order that the proceedings already instituted might be quashed if proved to be illegal, and stated that he was about to proceed to Paris on that business, and solicited Lord Lyons' assistance.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what further steps Her Majesty's Government could take with a view to complying with Mr. Underdown's application.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose our former Report, and stated that the documents attached to Mr. Underdown's original representation had been forwarded to Paris.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think no farther step can be taken until an answer has been returned to the communication which we understand Lord Lyons has been instructed by your Lordship to make in accordance with our former Report. If that answer should be that the proceedings are not in accordance with the law of France, we think the Government of France may then be asked to quash them.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 11th January last, and to previous opinions with which we had furnished your Lordship on the subject of Messrs. V. Glehns' claims upon the French Government on account of the destruction, in consequence of the fire at La Vilette, of a quantity of coffee belonging to them, then lying in the bonded warehouse of the Magasins Généraux, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from that firm in reply to one communicating to them the purport of our Report of the 11th January last, in which they inclosed a letter from the French Ministry of Finance declining to entertain their claim, on the ground that the warehouses destroyed were not Government property, and that no duty had been levied by the Government upon the goods received there.

That, under those circumstances, Messrs. V. Glehns desired to know whether they should still persist in legal proceedings or not, and urge their claim to the intervention of Her Majesty's Government with a view of obtaining information as to who is responsible to them for the loss which they have suffered.

Mr. Hammond was pleased further to say that he was therefore to request that we would take Messrs. V. Glehns' present application into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the facts stated in M. Pouyer-Quertier's letter, assuming them to be correct, do not appear to us in themselves at all conclusive as to the liability of the French Government; that liability must depend upon other considerations; and your Lordship may, we think, properly inform Messrs. V. Glehns that you are so advised. But the demand of these gentlemen that Her Majesty's Government should interpose diplomatically to ascertain for them the proper persons for them to sue seems to us to be altogether unreasonable, and one which your Lordship may properly decline to accede to; they must, as any French subject would have to do, find it out for themselves. The materials before us do not enable us to advise your Lordship with certainty as to the probable result of such inquiry.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 15th January and the 26th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing a copy of a note from M. de Rémusat, from which we would perceive that the French Government declined to allow British mineral oils sent to France in pursuance of contracts entered into before the recent alteration of duty to be admitted under the former scale of duty; that the papers connected with this part of the question, as well as the instructions lately addressed to Lord Lyons, and which he had not yet acted on, were therewith inclosed.

And he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take this matter again into consideration, and, at our early convenience, inform your Lordship whether the present note from the French Government induced us to alter the opinion we had already expressed, and, if so, in what respect; and also with any further observations we might have to offer, either on the instructions to Lord Lyons or on other points.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have again taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the present note from the French Government does not induce us to alter the opinions already expressed by us in any respect. We think that the last instructions sent to Lord Lyons comprise all that we could usefully suggest in relation to this subject.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a draft of a letter which, upon receipt of the Queen's Advocate's Report of the 15th ultimo, was addressed to Mr. Insley, declining to instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris to support his (Mr. Insley's) claim against the French Government on account of provisions supplied by him, during the late war, for the revictualling of Paris.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose Mr. Insley's reply, in which he urged a reconsideration of the above decision, and expressed his conviction that the presentation by Lord Lyons to the Minister of Commerce of the documents accompanying his present letter would lead to a favourable result.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take this case (the former papers being annexed) into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which it would be advisable that Her Majesty's Government should take therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We concur in the opinion of the late Queen's Advocate that this claim cannot be properly supported officially by Her Majesty's Government. The claim is for the value of certain casks of butter delivered to the French Government through a mistake of Mr. Insley's agents, and which were ordered by the Government to be redelivered to Mr. Insley or his order. He alleges that they were not so delivered by reason of the refusal of some one at the Halles Centrales, and that the French Government are responsible for such refusal; but they do not admit that they are liable. Under these circumstances, as there is a legal question bonâ fide raised, and properly triable by the French Tribunals, Mr. Insley must have recourse to them; and as there is no pretence of a denial of justice, there seems to us to be no ground for diplomatic interference on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a copy of a correspondence which he had had with the Rector of the Irish College at Paris in regard to a pecuniary claim advanced by that establishment against the French Government for compensation for damage alleged to have been sustained by a country house at Arcueil attached to the college in consequence of its occupation by Government troops during the late war, the premises having been placed by the college in charge of a Government officer, who is stated to have abandoned them to their fate.

Mr. Hammond further stated that it appeared that the case had been referred, with others, to the Commission appointed to take cognizance of claims arising out of the war, but the Rector urged its claims to exceptional consideration, and, under the circumstances, Lord Lyons was desirous of being instructed as to the propriety of his interfering in the matter. And that he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Lord Lyons on the subject.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that a copy of the papers refered to by his Excellency as having been laid before Parliament was annexed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that, however inconvenient the present state of things may be to the Irish College, there is nothing in the circumstances to warrant the diplomatic interference of Her Majesty's Government for the purpose of removing the case from the decision of the French Tribunal.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th instant, respecting the proceedings instituted at Lille against the firm of Messrs. Moses, of this city, as represented by Mr. Underdown, and the communication addressed to Messrs. Moses from the French Embassy; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris,* inclosing a copy of the answer which he had received to the representation made to the French Government by his Excellency, as instructed in Viscount Enfield's despatch No. 103 of the 18th March, founded upon our Report of the 19th ultimo, and which purported to be a reply to Lord Lyons' remonstrance against the proceedings in question.

And he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take Lord Lyons' despatch into our consideration, with the previous papers therewith transmitted, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to any steps which should now be taken by Her Majesty's Government, or any advice which could now be tendered by them to Mr. Underdown on behalf of his clients in this business.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this despatch, together with the previous papers, into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we think the note of M. de Rémusat does not contain a satisfactory reply. He does not answer the question as to whether by French law criminal proceedings can be taken in France in absence against an Englishman domiciled in England, and who has never been in France, for a crime alleged to have been committed in England; it does not appear to us that it is an answer to say that the crime committed in England would constructively be a crime in France because it was so connected with a crime committed by Frenchmen in France as to make the Englishmen accomplices in the latter crime; for the question is whether a French Tribunal has any jurisdiction to try in his absence a foreigner domiciled abroad for acts done by him out of France; and we think Lord Lyons should press for an explicit answer as to the law of France on this point. We observe that M. de Rémusat makes some observations as to the charge against a Mr. Mansfield, but none as to the charge against Messrs. Moses. We think his attention should be directed to this fact, that the matter complained of is the charge against Messrs. Moses. We think also that an explicit answer should be requested as to the proceedings of the French authorities in serving process on Englishmen in England in a criminal case, an attempt to exercise criminal jurisdiction which is against the comity of nations, and we think that M. de Rémusat may be requested to consider the propriety of quashing the proceedings against Messrs. Moses on this ground. We think Mr. Underdown may properly be informed that an answer has been received from the French Government, and that further representations have been made, and that no step to receive the paper at the French Consulate should be taken until a further answer has been received.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris relative to complaints and suggestions made by Mr. Sichel, a British merchant, resident at Paris, respecting the present system of valuation of goods by experts.

That the provisions of the Treaty of Commerce on the subject are contained in the Convention of the 12th October, 1860 (copy inclosed); and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon, with more especial reference to the course which Her Majesty's Government would be justified in pursuing with regard to any alteration of the existing system.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the system of valuation by experts adopted is in exact conformity with the stipulations of the existing Treaty, and, therefore, there is no legal ground of complaint. The fact seems to be that the French Custom-house officials purposely work the present system in a manner hostile to the interests of British merchants, and that the local Tribunal appoints an umpire who, though honest, is not competent. We think that, although Her Majesty's Government has not any strict right to complain diplomatically, yet, if your Lordship thought it desirable, you would be justified in instructing Lord Lyons to call the attention of the French Government to the complaints of the British merchants, and to request that, if on investigation these complaints proved well founded, the French Government would take measures to secure the appointment of capable and unprejudiced experts.

Whether, considering the views of the present French Government as regards commercial intercourse with England, it is sufficiently likely that any such representations would be of any avail as to make it worth while to make them, is for your Lordship to decide.

WE think the banishment of these persons, and the payment of their passage by the English Government to the several places to which they elected to go, could not be fairly used by the French Government as a justification of their proceedings, and we do not wish in any way to alter or modify the opinion we have already written in this case. All the Fenian convicts who were sent abroad, with the exception of two, were sent to the United States, the Government of which was not only willing, but desirous, to receive them. The cases of the other two were very special. The convicts, after being pardoned, went to Belgium temporarily only, and there was no complaint on the part of the Belgian Government; and, having regard to their position in life, the nature of their crime, and the temporary duration of their sojourn, it was not reasonable to expect that the Belgians would object to their coming.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the ships of Great Britain are entitled to the same advantages as the ships of Portugal with reference to the "surtaxe de pavillon." Not having the exact terms of the Treaty between France and Portugal before us, we cannot advise with confidence as to the effect of it; but having regard to the terms of it as stated in Consul Bernal's letter, and the statement of Baron de Seisal, it appears to us that, as no

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 24th February, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a note from the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court in reply to the representations which Her Majesty's Government had addressed to the French Government respecting the recent French Mercantile Marine Laws; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the note into consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon, more especially with regard to that part which related to the exact nature of the duties levied as "surtaxes de pavillon."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the arguments adduced by M. Gavard do not really affect the question on which we previously advised. The "surtaxe de pavillon" is a customs duty levied on goods imported because they are imported in a particular vessel, and, indeed, M. Gavard does not deny that it is a duty on the importation of goods, which is all it is necessary to contend for to bring the subject within the terms of the Vth Article of the second Supplementary Convention. M. Gavard contends that the "surtaxe" as levied produces a similar effect to a tax on a ship, but this is beside the point; neither the motive for levying a duty on the importation of goods, nor the indirect effect of levying it, makes it more or less a duty on goods. The second point taken by M. Gavard is that the said Vth Article applies only to English goods, by which he means it does not apply to goods the produce of a third country, for, of course, it would apply to French goods. Now there is nothing in the Article limiting it to such goods only as are the produce of Great Britain or France, and the privilege to be accorded to a third Power would not naturally be restricted to such goods, but would probably include the produce of the country of such Power; indeed, the clause could not be so limited in construction, for if a reduction were made in the duty on any of the articles mentioned in the Treaty, wherever produced, when imported by a third Power, it could not fairly be contended that a similar reduction should not be extended to England. Besides, this clause comes under the category of most-favoured-nation clauses, which are always drawn in the most general terms, and are intended to have a wide and general application. The IIIrd Article of the Treaty of January 1860 would, of course, be got rid of under this clause if other nations were relieved from the differential duties.

My Lord,

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the previous despatches referred to by Sir C Murray, the despatch from Lord Lyons inclosing M. Treitt's opinion, a copy of th Treaty between France and Portugal, and of the French Decrees extending its provision to this country, and also the Treaty of Commerce of 1860 and its Annexes.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to state that the general question, as set forth in the representations made by Her Majesty's Government to the Government of France, formed the subject of another reference to us dated the 16th instant, and that any other papers which might appear to us useful for reference would at once be forwarded. And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the particular point of the application of the Treaty between France and Portugal to this country into early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the position which your Lordship would be justified in taking with regard to it in the further representation on the general question which you proposed to address to the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship would be justified in taking the position that the French (Imperial) Government had, by the Decree of the 28th July, 1867, authoritatively declared that, according to the true construction of the Commercial Treaty of 1860, England was entitled to the benefit of the whole of the Treaty with Portugal, and as such Treaty contained express provisions as to the "surtaxes de pavillon" (Article XXIII) and other provisions as to navigation dues (Articles XVIII, XXV, and XXVIII), and thereby Portuguese ships have, since the 1st January, 1862, been exempt from the "surtaxes de pavillon," such Decree amounted to a formal acknowledgment by the Government of France that the construction now contended for by Her Majesty's Government of the Treaty and Conventions of 1860, viz., that their provisions extend to the present "surtaxes de pavillon," is the correct construction.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, in which he states that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosure, from Messrs. Hatton and Cookson, complaining of duty having been levied by the French authorities at Gaboon on palm oil which was simply transhipped from one vessel to another; and that he was to request that we would take this subject into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the legality of the levy of these duties.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Mr. Hammond's letter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That without more information than the letters before us convey it is impossible for us to say that the levying of duty on transhipment is actually illegal. The levying of such a duty, however unwise and unjust, is within the competency of the authorities at Gaboon, and upon our present information we can do no more than suggest that your Lordship may properly remonstrate with the French Government upon the conduct of their colonial authorities.

Before, however, doing so much as this, it would be well to ascertain a little farther the history and exact facts as to these duties.

Temple, June 19, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of a despatch which, upon the receipt of our Report of the 25th April last, respecting Messrs. Moses' case, was addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, instructing his Excellency to press for an explicit answer from the French Government as to French law in regard to criminal proceedings taken in France against Englishmen domiciled in England, for an offence alleged to have been committed in this country, and also in regard to the proceedings of the French authorities in serving process on Englishmen in England in criminal cases, Lord Lyons being at the same time instructed to request the French Government to consider the propriety of quashing the proceedings in question.

And he (Mr. Hammond) inclosed, together with some further papers, a despatch from Lord Lyons containing the answer of the French Government to Lord Lyons' representation, and Mr. Underdown's application on behalf of his clients for leave to present a memorial on their case to the French Government through Lord Lyons; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further steps, if any, which Her Majesty's Government should take in this matter, and as to the propriety of acceding to the Messrs. Moses' request.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the earlier papers in the case for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the answer of the French Government, contained in the despatch of Lord Lyons of the 3rd June last, is sufficiently explicit but not satisfactory. No sufficient excuse is given for serving criminal process of a French Court in England, and the English law on this subject is evidently misunderstood and wrongly stated. The 33 and 34 Vict., cap. 52, sec. 24, which is referred to has no bearing on the question; it relates merely to taking evidence of witnesses in England in relation to a case pending before a criminal Tribunal.

We think, however, that it is not necessary for your Lordship to take further action in the matter at present, as your Lordship's demand on behalf of Messrs. Moses has been complied with in substance, although not in form, inasmuch as the Minister of Justice proposes to demand the acquittal of Messrs. Moses. We think, however, your Lordship should, while expressing satisfaction at this result, intimate that your Lordship does not recognize the right of the French Government to serve criminal process in England.

2. We think that, under the circumstances, your Lordship should decline to accede to Mr. Underdown's application as to the memorial.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 25th April, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence, marked in the margin, relative to the question of examination by experts in France.

That we would perceive the question concerned disputes as to the description, and also as to the value of goods; and we would find, in the letter from the Treasury of the 29th ultimo, a statement respecting the practice in this country in such cases. Copy of the Convention of the 12th October, on the subject of such examination, was annexed.

And Viscount Enfield was to request us to take the matter again into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in the disputes which may arise between the French Customs authorities and British importers as to the description and value of goods, we cannot suggest any more satisfactory solution than that suggested by Lord Lyons in his despatch dated the 3rd May, 1872, and in the note inclosed in that despatch handed to M. de Rémusat.

The Bradford Tariff Committee have a practical knowledge on these subjects, which makes any opinion there formed of great weight, but it occurs to us, and we state it for your Lordship's consideration, that the production by the importer of the original invoice bearing the signature of the exporter may be open to the suspicion of collusion, and objected to by the French Customs authorities on that ground.

The practice of this country is based upon ideas so totally divergent from those which seem to exist in France upon the subject of customs duties that we are not able to advise any one of English experience in the hopes of inducing the French Government to change any part of the system prevailing in France.

We are still of the opinion expressed in the Report of the 25th April last, that the practice prevailing in France is strictly within the Treaty and Conventions.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to our several Reports on the question of duties in France on British mineral oils, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosures, from the agent of the Coatbridge Oil Company at Dunkirk, preferring a claim against Her Majesty's Government for losses sustained by the Company in consequence of the change in the duty in France last year on that commodity, to the amount of 13,594*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.*

That the letter being confined to the above specific point, the only papers now transmitted to us were the Treaty of 1860, the instruction to Lord Lyons summing up the position taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter, and the note which, in pursuance of that instruction, he addressed to the French Government on the subject, but to which as yet no answer had been received. And that should we require farther papers they would be forwarded.

And finally that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the letter from the Coatbridge Oil Company into consideration, and inform your Lordship what answer should, in our opinion, be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Wilson, the agent of the Coatbridge Oil Company at Dunkirk, should be informed by your Lordship that Her Majesty's Government cannot recognize the claim made by his letter, but that your Lordship is in communication with the French Government on the subject of the import duties levied in France on mineral oils of British origin.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches which had been addressed to your Lordship by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris on the subject of the 9th Article of the new French Army Bill, relating to the liability of foreigners to military service in France; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to make thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as the only representation which your Lordship could with propriety make at present to the French Government would be identical with the remarks of Lord Lyons to M. de Rémusat on the 28th June, we are of opinion that your Lordship need not move in this matter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, with a copy of the Treaty of Commerce of 1860, a despatch from Lord Lyons inclosing copy of the Report of a debate in the National Assembly on the taxation of raw materials, and calling attention to the speech of M. Thiers on that occasion; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the construction placed by M. Theirs on the IXth Article of the Treaty of 1860.

That our Report of the 20th January last, and the correspondence thereupon, in connection with the subject would be found in the inclosed copy of the correspondence respecting proposed modifications of the Anglo-French Commercial Treaty of 1860.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we understand M. Thiers to assert that, according to the true construction of the IXth Article of the Commercial Treaty, if the French put on a new customs duty on the importation of raw cotton, they will be entitled to lay an additional customs duty on English manufactured cottons which will be of such an amount as to place the French manufacturer in the same relative position to the English, as regards the cost of production, as he would have been if no new duty had been levied on raw cotton. We think this is not the true construction of the IXth Article; this Article appears confined to matters of home production or manufacture, which raw cotton is not as regards France, and is also restricted to the case of the imposition of an excise or inland duty, and therefore does not extend to a customs duty; lastly, the new duty is to be imposed on the foreign imported article of the same description. Now, cotton manufactured goods are not articles of the same description as raw cotton, and could only be taxed under this clause of the Treaty if an excise or inland tax were levied on the manufacture in France of cotton goods.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Kell and Co., of Huddersfield, respecting a claim which they preferred against the French Government on account of four cases of goods, destined for Zurich, which they forwarded viâ Boulogne-sur-Mer on the 27th July, 1870, by the French "Compagnie du Nord," and which had been subsequently "requisitioned" by the Communist troops, the goods at that time being deposited at the bonded warehouse of the "Compagnie de l'Est" at Paris, who had received them from the "Compagnie du Nord," and had failed in their endeavour to deliver them at their destination.

That Messrs Kell and Co. were anxious for the support of their claim against the French Government by the British Embassy at Paris; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it was one in which Lord Lyons should be instructed to intervene and, if so, to what extent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly direct Lord Lyons to bring the facts stated in the letter of Messrs. Kell before the French Government, and to press upon that Government the claim of Messrs. Kell for compensation for the loss which they have sustained by the seizure of their property by the de facto authorities in Paris, for which loss it appears the French Tribunals are unable to give any redress.

Temple, August 16, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating we would recollect that, in our Report dated the 28th July, 1871, regarding the claim of Miss Galloway on the French Government for losses incurred during the late Communist insurrection, we stated that British subjects established in France could not, in respect to such losses, claim privileges beyond those accorded by the French Government to loyal citizens, and we suggested that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris should be told to inform Miss Galloway and similar applicants, subject of course to special cases being treated specially, that he (the Ambassador) cannot undertake to bring any claim on their behalf before the French Government until he had been able to ascertain what course that Government proposed to adopt with reference to the claims of loyal French subjects.

That our Reports on the case of Messrs. Carver, Darbishire, and Co., Mr. Hewett, Mr. Metcalfe, and Mr. Myers, dated respectively the 10th, 20th, 21st, and 26th June, 1871, were conceived in similar terms, and in none was it stated that Lord Lyons could properly be instructed to press such claims on the French Government.

That such, however, was not the case in our more recent Report, dated the 2nd instant, on the claim preferred, on grounds similar to the above, by Messrs. Kell and Co., against the French Government, for your Lordship was therein advised that Lord Lyons should be instructed to press the claim of the Messrs. Kell on the French Government, the French Tribunals having been unable to give any redress. And that your Lordship would be glad to know, before instructing Lord Lyons in the sense of our last Report, on what grounds we considered the case of Messrs. Kell differed from the others above referred to, and called for official interference; and he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request us to favour your Lordship with a Report on that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That where British subjects establish themselves in France they must, with the advantages of such adopted residence, accept and become subject to the inconveniences which other voluntary residents in France may be exposed to, and we adhere to the opinion which we gave in our previous Reports on such cases.

The facts in Messrs. Kell's case were different from those to which Mr. Hammond refers in this material respect, that Messrs. Kell had their property detained in France against their will, and the property was seized and lost to them whilst it was so detained.

We consider the case of Messrs. Kell to be one of those special cases which might arise and call for your Lordship's good offices, as we suggested in our Report on Miss Galloway's application.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 23.)

Temple, September 23, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to request us to favour you with our opinion on the following point.

The French Government gave notice, in March last, for the termination of the Treaty of Commerce of 1860 on the 15th March next, and had now made proposals to Her Majesty's Government for the renewal of a Commercial Treaty, one of the conditions being that new customs duties in excess of those authorized by the Treaty of 1860 should be levied on certain classes of British goods before the 15th March next. In connection with this proposed stipulation a question arose, in regard to contracts between British subjects and persons in France, would Her Majesty's Government be liable to any claims for indemnity from persons who might allege themselves to suffer loss in regard to contracts entered into from such alteration in the Treaty engagements between the two countries, before the Treaty as it now stands expired? What distinction should be drawn between contracts now existing and those which might be entered into between any specific date (such as the date when Chambers of Commerce were consulted in regard to the French proposals, when negotiations were really commenced, or when the Treaty was signed), and contracts entered into after that date, and the day when the Treaty of 1860 would otherwise expire?

That supposing any special stipulation to be introduced into a new Treaty in order to prevent such persons from suffering loss, what provisions should, in our opinion, be made with regard to existing contracts, first, as to the date up to which they should be recognized, and secondly, as to the proof to be required of their bonâ fide character?

That as bearing on that question he (Mr. Hammond) was to call our attention to the 9th section of the Act 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 97, which contained provisions for dealing with cases of increase of duty in respect to contracts in this country; and he was to inquire whether, should Her Majesty's Government think such a stipulation expedient on grounds of policy, any similar provision in the new Treaty would meet the difficulty, and in that case in what terms might it be drawn.

And that, in conclusion, he was to repeat that it would be a great convenience to receive our Report on that matter as early as possible, and he was to add that your Lordship would be glad to receive any suggestions which, in considering the question, might occur to us on points mentioned in that letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would not be liable to any claims for indemnity from persons who might allege themselves to suffer loss from such alteration as proposed of the Treaty engagements between the two countries before the Treaty as it now stands expired. Two countries which have entered into a Treaty by which one of them is restricted from increasing the customs duties levied on the goods of subjects of the other are as much entitled to put an end to such Treaty by mutual agreement as they are to determine any other Treaty.

The British Government has entered into no engagement with British merchants not to avail itself of its ordinary rights, to modify or put an end to the Commercial Treaty with France, the only effect of the twelve months' notice clause in the Treaty being to enable one party to put an end to it without the other's consent, and such a notice does not affect the right of both parties by consent to determine the Treaty at any time.

Any merchant who enters into a contract in the belief that the Treaty will not be determined before his contract is fulfilled does so at his own peril, and has no legal right to complain if the Treaty is previously abrogated. At the same time, it is both reasonable and usual not to alter customs duties without fair notice, so as not to inflict loss on parties who conduct their business in this expectation. We think it, therefore, proper that protection should be given to persons who entered into contracts before they had notice of any intention of changing the terms of the Treaty, and we think a period should be fixed for this purpose by the Treaty. What the period should be must be determined by Her Majesty's Government, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the object being, as above mentioned, to protect all those who entered into contracts without notice of a change being intended to be made. We think that a proper date would be the publication of the notice of the Treaty in the "London Gazette," but as this would be inconvenient, a stipulation might be inserted in the Treaty to protect all contracts entered into before its signature, the Government in the meanwhile giving notice to the Chambers of Commerce that some such change was contemplated, so as to put our merchants on their guard. We think only contracts in writing should be recognized, but that no special stipulations need be inserted as to proof of their bonâ fide character, that being left to be shown in the ordinary way.

The provisions in 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 97, are not, in our opinion, applicable to the change in the customs duties nuder the French Treaty; and since that change is made at the instance and for the benefit of the French Government we think the new Treaty should contain a stipulation on the part of the French Government to indemnify the persons who by the change have lost on their contracts made in writing and within the time above pointed out.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating, with reference to the correspondence which had passed between ourselves and the Foreign Office on the subject of various claims preferred by English subjects against the French Government for losses incurred during the late war, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, inclosing a letter from Mr. David Jones relative to the seizure of his house and property at Blois by the French authorities for the purpose of manufacturing munitions of war on the premises, to the damage done to his property on the capture of the place by the German army, and asking that his claim for compensation be pressed on the French Government by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris.

That we would perceive that Mr. West called attention to the fact that that case differed from others which had been under our consideration, and notably from that of Mr. Stuart Mackenzie, upon which Her Majesty's Advocate-General reported on the 27th October last year.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with a Report thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the claims of Mr. David Jones for compensation on the ground of damage done to his house and property at Blois cannot, in our opinion, be pressed on the French Government.

But your Lordship may instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Paris to bring the circumstances of the case, which are peculiar, to the favourable consideration of the French Government, whose officers, by making the premises a military storehouse, were in great measure the cause of the damages subsequently done by the Prussians.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received October 9.)

Temple, October 9, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 8th day of October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between this country and France, and to request that we would take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion in regard to the stipulations of its several Articles, and to call our more particular attention to Articles VI (prohibitions of importation and exportation); VII (inland and compensatory duties); XXVI to XXIX (the settlement by means of a Joint Commission of questions in regard to existing contracts and duties on mineral oils of British origin); matters which had been already referred to us; and XXXII and XXXIV (for securing most-favoured-nation treatment).

Lord Enfield was also pleased to request that we would state our opinion as to whether the assent of Parliament is required in respect of any of the stipulations of the proposed Treaty, and to say that a copy of the Treaty of 1860, and the Conventions supplementary thereto, was also annexed, and added that, should we wish to receive specific information on any points connected with the stipulations of the draft Treaty, Mr. Kennedy, the head of the Commercial Department of the Office, would attend any meeting we might appoint to-morrow.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to say that he was to request that we would be so good as to cause our Report to be delivered at the Foreign Office before 12 o'clock on Thursday, the 10th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as to Article II, we think that this Article, as it stands, will involve the British Government in a great deal of trouble. There are different rules in England and France for deciding the nationality of an individual, and in consequence, a man may be an Englishman by the law of England and a Frenchman by the law of France; he might be, therefore, a British subject living in France by our law and a subject of France by French law, or a British subject living in England by our law and a French subject by French law.

We think the best course would be to add a proviso "that this Article shall not apply to any person who, by the law of the country of his residence, shall be a natural-born or naturalized subject of such country."

With respect to military requisitions, again, our law makes no difference between natives and foreigners. If a foreigner keeps a public-house, he is liable to have soldiers billeted upon him, and a foreign landowner ought not to be allowed to prevent his land being taken for a fort or barracks under the Ordinance Acts, or to hinder the troops passing over his land for the autumn manuœuvres, receiving compensation. We think words should be added to except as to billeting of soldiers and other military requisitions to which subjects of the country are liable under similar circumstances.

As to Article III, we think the words in the second line should be "acquire and possess;" it is not intended that they shall have greater right of disposal than other foreigners. As to the second sentence, there is in most cases no special English law as to dispositions by foreigners, and therefore we think the words should not be confined to "established by the law of the country," but should extend to the words which the laws of the country permit any foreigners to use.

With respect to imposts and taxes, the words "other or" we think should be omitted; according to English law, legacy duty depends upon domicile, not residence or place of death, and therefore the legatees of a Frenchman dying in England, but not domiciled there, would not be liable to legacy duty.

With respect to export, we think foreigners cannot be allowed greater privileges than subjects; where exportation is prohibited to the one it should be to the other, and the right should be limited to those enjoyed by the subjects of the country under similar circumstances. See the exception in Article VI.

Articles VI and VII: we think this should be "foreign nations," so as to prevent any question as to the Colonies and the dominions of the Queen.

Article XIX would appear to require Parliamentary sanction. We are not aware of any enactment exempting transfer from customs duties, but inquiry should be made of the Customs authorities.

Article XXIII also requires Parliamentary sanction; it interferes with the rights of the Crown and of certain Lords of the Manor and others who are owners of the foreshore, or, under grants of wreck or by custom, have a right to take wreck, jetsam or flotsam, cables, &c., for their own use. We think that it is not likely, however, that any such privilege would lead to opposition to so humane a provision.

The provisions as to duties would require the repeal of section 499 of the 17 and 18 Vict., cap. 104.

Article XXIX we understand has been amended so as to make the language grammatical.

Article XXXIV should, we think, be confined to the Treaties; similar Treaties may be made hereafter, and the renunciation of the privileges should not be absolute in terms. We have made some alterations in the margin of the draft Treaty, and have initialed such alterations.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of this date, stating, with reference to his letter of the 12th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether we saw any objection to the omission from the draft of the proposed Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with France of the stipulations in regard to the functions of the proposed Commission at Paris, and to inserting them instead in a Protocol or Declaration to be signed at the same time as the Treaty. That he was farther to inquire whether in the latter case it would be expedient, in addition to the mention of the Commission in Article II, to insert a short Article to specify its constitution, functions in general terms, and duration; and that, if we thought such a course expedient, we would be so good as to furnish the text of such Article.

And that answer to that letter, if possible, was requested with our reply to his (Lord Enfield's) previous letter of the 12th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the stipulations in regard to the functions of the proposed Commission at Paris should be in the Treaty, and not inserted in a Protocol or Declaration. We think that the mention of the Commission already made in Article II will be sufficient.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 12th, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the revised draft of the proposed Treaty of Commerce with France, and he was to request us to take it into consideration, and return it with such verbal alterations as might appear to us to be necessary on the afternoon of Monday (this day.)

And that he was farther to request us to take into consideration the question of giving publicity to the provisions of the present Treaty. That it was not usual (as we were aware) to publish Treaties before they were ratified. The amount and anxiety of British interests involved might to some extent render a departure from the usual practice advisable in the present instance, and he was to ask our opinion on the subject, and as to the best mode of proceeding in regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have taken the draft of the proposed Treaty into consideration, and return it herewith with such verbal alterations as appear to us to be necessary, which alterations we have initialled. On the subject of the publication of the Treaty we are prepared to advise that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, and considering that it must be published in France before ratification, by being communicated to the French Legislature, Her Majesty's Government may properly publish the substance of it as soon as it is signed.

Dear Lord Granville,

I TROUBLE you with a letter which I have received from a Frenchman named Cézard, with an inclosure therein; which has been followed up by a formal citation to myself, as Lord Chancellor, to appear before the Tribunal of Commerce of the Seine, such citation being transmitted in a letter of the 16th instant from M. Gautier, the Acting Consul-General of France in London, by the direction (as he states) of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

I inclose the originals of all these documents, together with a copy of the answer which I have returned, through my Principal Secretary, to M. Cézard. To the letter of the Consul-General I do not propose to send any reply, nor do I propose in any manner to notice the receipt of the "assignation," unless your Lordship, upon taking proper advice, should consider that I ought to do so.

It is, of course, entirely for your judgment whether any remonstrance against this proceeding ought to be addressed to the French Government.

I remain, &c.

112, Boulevard de Neuilly, Paris (Batignolles).

My Lord,

C'EST par suite de manœuvres de deux agents subalternes de la justice Anglaise, et de la justice Française, et qui apparaîtront bientôt, que j'ai été obligé d'adresser à votre Seigneurie une assignation devant le Tribunal de Commerce de la Seine.

J'ai l'honneur de faire parvenir à votre Seigneurie un Mémoire adressé au Tribunal Français. Après avoir pris connaissance de ce Mémoire, votre Seigneurie aura la conviction que la question soumise au Tribunal ne peut en réalité faire l'objet d'un procès, mais provoquera de la part de votre Seigneurie non pas une déclaration, mais une protestation au nom de la justice Anglaise contre une affirmation que Mr. Young a fait au nom de la Cour de Chancery devant un Tribunal Français.

Et en effet, de quoi s'agit-il?

1. Le 29 Septembre, 1865, une Société Anglaise, "The Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited)," a signé à Paris un acte authentique avec une Société Française appelée Société de Commerce de France.

Dans cet acte authentique la Société Anglaise affirme avoir opéré à Londres et en conformité des lois Anglaises une fusion ou une amalgamation avec la Société de Commerce de France depuis le 1er Septembre, 1865; de cette façon, dit l'acte authentique, Article 3, que la Société Française, depuis cette date, sera considérée comme "seule et entièrement propriétaire" de ce qui constituait l'actif de la Société Anglaise, "tant en France qu'en Angleterre." En conséquence de la transmission à la Société Française "de l'unique et entière propriété" de ce qui constituait l'actif de la Société Anglaise, la Société Française pour compenser les intéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) lui a délivré environ 5,000,000 fr. en titres de créances sur elle-même.

2. Le 6 Juin, 1867, sur une pétition de Mr. Bright Wool du 21 Mai, 1867, la Cour de Chancery rend un ordre qui vise le Contrat du 29 Septembre, 1865, signé à Paris, et prononce ensuite la liquidation volontaire sous la surveillance du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), au profit des intéressés de cette Société.

3. Le 6 Août, 1868, la Cour de Chancery nomme Mr. John Young liquidateur de cette Société.

4. Pour obtenir de la justice Française un jugement qui ordonne le paiement des 5,000,000 fr. de créances consenties au profit des intéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), Mr. Young a soutenu que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, avait reconnu valide en Angleterre le contrat signé par la Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) le 29 Septembre, 1865.

5. Je soutiens que Mr. Young en affirmant un pareil fait n'était nullement autorisé par la Cour de Chancery, et a trompé la justice Française.

6. J'ai appelé votre Seigneurie, Chef de le Cour de Chancery, pour confirmer ma prétention.

Ces faits exposés, votre Seigneurie me permettra de faire observer qu'il ne s'agit aucunement de demander ici une interprétation du jugement de le Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867.

Le jugement de le Cour de Chancey du 6 Juin, 1867, n'ordonne la liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) sous sa surveillance qu'après avoir pris connaissance du contrat du 29 Septembre, 1865, et par conséquent il n'y a que deux interprétations possibles, du jugement, savoir: (1) que la Cour de Chancery a reconnu le contrat sans force et sans effet en Angleterre; (2) que la Cour de Chancery a reconnu le contrat valide en Angleterre.

Or, de ces deux interprétations, il n'y en a qu'une seule de possible pour ceux qui respectent la magistrature et la justice Anglaise, c'est l'interprétation qui admet que la Cour de Chancery a écarté le contrat comme sans force et nul en Angleterre.

Comment en effet pourrait-on soutenir cette interprétation que la Cour de Chancery aurait reconnu le contrat valide? Le contrat valide fait la Société de Commerce de France "seule et entièrement propriétaire" en Angleterre depuis le 1er Septembre, 1865, de ce qui constituait l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited). La Cour de Chancery reconnaissant le contrat valide, c'est-à-dire reconnaissant la "seule et entière propriété" de la Société Française en Angleterre, aurait donc en même temps dépouillé la Société de Commerce de France de la propriété reconnue et ordonné la liquidation de l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) au profit des intéressés de cette Société.

Si une seule interprétation du jugement du 6 Juin, 1867, rendu par la Cour de Chancery est seule possible; si l'interprétation de ce jugement comme ayant reconnu la validité du Contrat du 29 Septembre, 1865, porte atteinte à la respectabilité de la Cour de Chancery, comment se fait-il que Mr. Young, agent subalterne de la dite Cour, ose présenter une telle interprétation devant un Tribunal Français?

Et si Mr. Young a osé présenter une telle interprétation, la justice Anglaise peut-elle ne pas être émue, et protester contre le discrédit qu'un de ses agents cherche à jeter sur elle?

J'ai, &c.
(Signé) ALPHONSE CÉZARD.

Inclosure 3 in No. 105.

M. Cézard to the President and Judges of the Tribunal of Commerce of the Seine.

Messieurs,

MON procès se recommande à l'attention du Tribunal d'une façon toute particulière, surtout aujourd'hui que l'Assemblée Nationale va, dit-on, discuter un nouveau Traité de Commerce avec l'Angleterre.

Le Tribunal accueillera mes conclusions. Leur rejet établirait en principe que le commerçant Français ne doit avoir aucune confiance dans les Traités de Commerce avec l'Angleterre; que l'obligation prise par l'Angleterre, dans ces sortes de Traités, de respecter et faire respecter chez elle les propriétés des commerçants Français n'est pas sérieuse; que le commerçant Français, au cas où ses droits de propriété seraient méconnus en Angleterre, ne doit aucunement compter, en France, sur la protection des Tribunaux Français.

Voici, Messieurs, les faits du procès que vous allez juger:

Le 15 Février, 1865, j'ai constitué à Paris la "Société des Crédits Généraux de Saint-Nazaire."

Le 29 Septembre, 1865, une Société Anglaise, "The Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited)" a signé à Paris, avec moi, Directeur de la Société Française, un acte authentique de sa fusion avec ladite Société Française. Dans les Articles 1, 2, 3, de l'acte authentique, le "Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited)" affirme avoir opéré à Londres sa fusion avec la Société Française, se dit confondu dans cette Société, déclare que les effets de cette fusion remontent au 1er Septembre, 1865, date à laquelle la Société Française "sera seule et entièrement propriétaire de l'actif de la Société Anglaise tant en France qu'en Angleterre."

Le 1er Novembre, 1865, la réunion des deux Sociétés Anglaise et Française fusionnées est annoncée au public dans les journaux désignés par la loi, sous le nom de "Société de Commerce de France," Société Française, dont le siége social est à Paris.

Le 4 Novembre, 1865, les Administrateurs de la Société de Commerce de France déclarent vouloir modifier le contrat de fusion. Je proteste et me retire de l'administration de la Société de Commerce de France. Ma retraite et acceptée par les Administrateurs réunis en séance du Conseil d'Administration de ce jour.

Le 26 Décembre, 1865, le contrat de fusion est modifié. Le Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), qui devait apporter 290,000 mètres de terrains libres d'hypothéquer et 3,816,875 fr. espèces, est autorisé à n'apporter absolument rien; mais par contre, reçoit environ 5,000,000 fr. de créances sur la Société de Commerce de France.

Le 20 Juillet, 1866, la Société de Commerce de France est déclarée en faillite sans avoir fait une seule opération, et dans son passif figurent les 5,000,000 fr. de créances données aux intéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited).

Le 28 Mai, 1869, Sur l'instance du Syndic, un Arrêt de la Cour de Paris déclare que la Société de Commerce de France et la Société des Crédits Généraux de Saint-Nazaire n'ont formé qu'une seule Société irrégulièrement constituée, et me condamne, comme fondateur, à payer au Syndic le montant des dettes admises contractées avant le 4 Novembre, 1865, date de ma retraite, soit, à payer les 5,000,000 fr. de créances attribuées aux intéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) si elles sont admises.

N.B.—Le Tribunal, après cet Arrêt, a rendu deux jugements: le premier me connaissant recevable à critiquer les créances incrites au bilan; le second me déclarant non recevable à constater les dates de création de ces créances.

Cette dernière décision est d'autant plus malheureuse pour moi, que toutes les dettes de la faillite ayant été contractées après le 4 Novembre, 1865, je ne puis invoquer les conséquences de la chose jugée le 28 Mai, 1869, pour dire que si j'ai irrégulièrement constitué la Société, je suis le seul fondateur ou administrateur qui soit étranger aux actes causes de la faillite.

En raison de la condamnation prononcée en principe contre moi par l'Arrêt du 28 Mai, 1869, j'ai, par une assignation du 11 Juillet, 1871, donné au Syndic, aux créanciers inscrits ou à leurs représentants, demandé au Tribunal un réglement définitif de ma condamnation.

Procédant à l'examen du passif, je concluais au rejet de toutes les créances inscrites au bilan. Le Tribunal, par jugement du 19 Février, 1872, me reconnaissant recevable à critiquer les créances, m'a débouté de mes diverses demandes. J'ai interjeté appel de ce jugement, et fais au sujet de cet appel les réserves les plus formelles.

Mais parmi les créances dont je demandais le rejet, figuraient les 5,000,000 fr. de créances données aux intéressés du Sainte-Nazaire Company (Limited). Pour en obtenir le rejet, je soutenais contre Mr. Young, Liquidateur nommé à Londres de cette Société, que ces créances avaient été données en raison d'une fusion du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), affirmée légalement accomplie à Londres en conformité des lois Anglaises; que cette fusion n'ayant jamais été accomplie à Londres, les créances données sur une fausse cause étaient sans effet, d'après l'Article 1131, Code Civil. Et à l'appui de ma prétention, je produisais un jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, prononçant à Londres la liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) qui n'avait pas cessé d'exister, en tant que Société Anglaise, deux ans après le contrat de fusion du 29 Septembre, 1865. Mr. Young soutenait que le Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) avait opéré sa fusion à Londres et que le jugement invoqué de la Cour de Chancery n'avait aucune importance.

Le Tribunal, dans son jugement, a accueilli la défense de Mr. Young et rejeté ma demande en nullité des créances et du contrat de fusion, par ces motifs que le Saint-Nazaire Company a opéré à Londres sa fusion, et transmis à la Société Française ses apports promis, et que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery invoqué a peu ou point d'importance.

Par une assignation du 23 Septembre, 1872, donnée à sa Seigneurie le Lord Grand Chancelier de la Grande Bretagne, à Mr. Young, et au Syndic, je demande au Tribunal, d'après l'Article 480, Code de Procédure Civile, la rétractation du jugement du 19 Février, 1872, seulement pour la partie relative au rejet de ma demande en nullité de contrat de fusion.

§ .—Rétractation du Jugement.

Mr. Young, pour faire rejeter ma demande en nullité du contrat de fusion, a, par deux fois, trompé le Tribunal:

1. C'est en détournant ou en dissimulant les documents de procédure du jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867,—propriété de la Société de Commerce de France si, comme le soutenait Mr. Young, la fusion était opérée,—que Mr. Young a pu faire dire par le Tribunal que le jugement du 6 Juin, 1867, de la Cour de Chancery a peu ou point d'importance. J'ai réussi à me procurer ces documents de procédure et les présente au Tribunal.

De ces documents il résulte que si la Cour de Chancery a prononcé le 6 Juin, 1867, la liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), cette liquidation a été prononcée au profit unique des intéressés de cette Société et à l'exclusion de la Société de Commerce de France. Il résulte encore que si la Cour de Chancery a prononcé la liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) au profit des intéressés de cette Société, et ce, après avoir pris connaissance du contrat de fusion qui déclare la Société de Commerce de France "seule et entièrement propriétaire" de l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), tant en France qu'en Angleterre," depuis "le 1er Septembre, 1865," c'est que la Cour de Chancery a jugé le contrat de fusion du 29 Septembre, 1865, comme nul et sans force, ayant été signé par la Société Anglaise ("wholly ultra vires"), sans capacité.

2. Mr. Young, qui a bien en Angleterre le titre de Liquidateur, a trompé le Tribunal sur l'étendue des pouvoirs que lui donne ce titre. Le véritable liquidateur du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) est la Cour de Chancery. Mr. Young n'est que le commis choisi par la Cour de Chancery pour l'aider dans les opérations de la liquidation. Il ne peut rien faire, ni intenter, ni défendre une action sans l'autorisation de la Cour de Chancery.

Mr. Young n'avait pas cette autorisation pour défendre contre la nullité de contrat de fusion demandée par moi. Il n'était donc recevable à opposer aucune défense. Si Mr. Young justifiait de cette autorisation, le Tribunal la considérerait comme surprise à la bonne foi de la Cour de Chancery qui n'a certainement pas donné à son commis l'autorisation de défendre devant un Tribunal Français la validité d'un contrat qu'elle a jugé sans force et nul en Angleterre.

§ .—Nullité du Contrat de Fusion.

Je demande au Tribunal la nullité du contrat de fusion coutre le véritable liquidateur du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) ou la Cour de Chancery représentée par sa Seigneurie le Lord Grand Chancelier de la Grande Bretagne.

A l'audience, aucune fin de non-recevoir ne me sera opposée au nom de sa Seigneurie. Le Tribunal, qui m'a reconnu recevable à demander la nullité du contrat de fusion contre Mr. Young, commis de la Cour de Chancery, ne pourrait, d'ailleurs, sans se déjuger, me déclarer non recevable à demander cette nullité contre le chef de Mr. Young.

Les causes de nullité du contrat sont nombreuses; mais en raison du respect dû à sa Seigneurie, que je considère dans le débat plutôt comme Juge que comme défendeur, je me borne à invoquer les deux causes de nullité suivantes, fondées sur le Traité International du 30 Avril, 1862:

I. Nullité d'après l'Article 1131, Code Civil, et en vertu du Traité International de 1862.

Les créances inscrites au bilan en raison d'une fusion Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) ont pour cause une fusion que cette Société affirmait avoir opérée en Angleterre en conformité des lois Anglaises.

Cette fusion est un acte Anglais qui, d'après le Traité International de 1862, échappe à l'appréciation des Tribunaux Français.

Je produis devant le Tribunal une lettre du Board of Trade du 24 Juin, 1867, qui déclare que le "Companies Register Office" est une institution gouvernementale Anglaise fonctionnant sous le contrôle du Board of Trade. La mission de cette Administration est d'enregistrer tous les actes légaux constitutifs ou modificatifs des Sociétés Anglaises. La lettre du Board of Trade ajoute qu'une déclaration du Companies Register Office au sujet de l'existence ou de la non existence d'un acte légal constitutif ou modificatif d'une Société Anglaise a "force de preuve" devant les Tribunaux Anglais.

A la lettre du Board of Trade précitée je joins une déclaration du "Companies Register Office" du 14 Juin, 1870, qui déclare que le Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) n'a opéré aucune fusion avec la Société de Commerce de France, dont le nom est inconnu en Angleterre.

D'après le Traité International du 30 Avril, 1862, le Tribunal est tenu d'accueillir cette déclaration du "Companies Register Office" comme une preuve suffisante, reconnaître que le Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) n'a réalisé aucune fusion à Londres, et prononcer, d'après l'Article 1131, la nullité des créances inscrites au passif de la faillite de la Société de Commerce de France en raison de cette prétendue fusion.

II. Nullité d'après l'Article 1124, Code Civil, et en vertu du Traité International de 1862.

Un actionnaire du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), nommé Bright Wool, adresse à la Cour de Chancery, par une pétition du 21 Mai, 1867, une demande de mise en liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) au profit unique des intéressés de cette Société Anglaise.

Le Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) oppose le contrat de fusion du 29 Septembre, 1865, qui attribue à la Société de Commerce de France "la seule et entière propriété de son actif en Angleterre depuis le 1er Septembre, 1865."

Mr. Bright Wool répond que le contrat a été passé à Paris par la Société Anglaise "wholly ultra vires," c'est-à-dire sans capacité de s'obliger.

Le 6 Juin, 1867, la Cour de Chancery, après avoir pris connaissance du contrat de fusion, ordonne la liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) au profit des intéressés de cette Société, et par conséquent a reconnu le contrat de fusion passé par la Société Anglaise "wholly ultra vires," sans capacité de s'obliger.

Et comme par le Traité International de 1862, la Cour de Chancery est seule compétente pour apprécier la capacité qu'avait ou n'avait pas la Société Anglaise de s'obliger, le Tribunal, en raison de la chose jugée à Londres et en vertu du Traité International de 1862, est tenu de déclarer en France le contrat de fusion nul d'après l'Article 1124, Code Civil.

En résumé, ma demande en nullité du contrat de fusion se fonde: (1) sur une déclaration du Companies Register Office; (2) sur la chose jugée à Londres par la Cour de Chancery le 6 Juin, 1867.

Par le Traité International de 1862, le Tribunal n'a pas à apprécier la déclaration du Companies Register Office ou le jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, mais à accueillir la déclaration du Companies Register Office comme une preuve que la fusion n'a pas été réalisée à Londres, et le jugement de la Cour de Chancery comme ayant bien jugé.

Le Tribunal est tenu par le Traité International de prononcer la nullité de la fusion en France, tout aussi bien que dans une circonstance analogue il serait tenu de déclarer nulle en France une Société Anglaise sur une simple déclaration du Companies Register Office de sa non existence à Londres, ou sur la production d'un jugement Anglais qui aurait déclaré cette Société nulle à Londres.

Conclusion.

Aucune fin de non recevoir ne me sera opposée au nom de sa Seigneurie, et de son côté le Tribunal n'en saurait accueillir aucune sans se déjuger.

Aucune défense ne me sera opposée à l'audience au nom de sa Seigneurie.

1. Sur le premier moyen de nullité d'après l'Article 1131, Code Civil, une déclaration faite au nom de sa Seigneurie ne peut que confirmer les déclarations du Board of Trade du 24 Juin, 1870, et du Companies Register Office du 14 Juin, 1870.

2. Sur le second moyen de nullité d'après l'Article 1124, Code Civil, comment un seul instant et sans manquer de respect à la justice Anglaise admettre que sa Seigneurie autorise qu'il soit soutenu en son nom que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, n'a pas considéré le contrat de fusion comme sans force et nul en Angleterre?

Le jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, a prononcé la liquidation du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) à Londres au profit unique des intéressés de cette Société. Avant de prononcer cette liquidation, le jugement de la Cour de Chancery vise le contrat de fusion. Soutenir que la Cour de Chancery n'a pas jugé nul le contrat, c'est soutenir qu'elle a reconnu le contrat valide et conséquemment qu'elle a reconnu valides les Articles 1, 2, 3, du contrat, qui déclarent la Société de Commerce de France "seule et entièrement propriétaire" en Angleterre de l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited). Et ce serait après avoir reconnu le droit "d'unique et entière propriété" de la Société Française en Angleterre sur l'actif de la Société Anglaise, que la Cour de Chancery aurait attribué la propriété de la Société Française aux anciens intéressés de la Société Anglaise!

Ainsi donc, il serait monstrueux, en même temps qu'injurieux pour la justice Anglaise, de soutenir que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, n'a pas reconnu sans force et nul en Angleterre le contrat de fusion, car ce serait soutenir que le jugement Anglais contient à la fois la reconnaissance et le mépris par la justice Anglaise d'un droit de propriété de la Société de Commerce de France en Angleterre.

Ma demande en nullité du contrat de fusion ne peut donc à l'audience qu'être appuyée par les déclarations faites au nom de sa Seigneurie.

Le Tribunal peut-il rejeter ma demande? Peut-il refuser la rétractation demandée du jugement, et refuser la nullité du contrat de fusion?

Mais le jugement dont rétractation est demandée a déclaré que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery du 6 Juin, 1867, a peu d'importance. Aujourd'hui qu'il est prouvé que le jugement Anglais a annulé le contrat de fusion à Londres, il n'est pas admissible que le Tribunal refuse la rétraction demandée, sinon il faudrait conclure qu'aux yeux de la justice Française il importe peu que des étrangers viennent en France passer des contrats qui ne les lient pas, et obtiennent de la justice Française l'exécution des obligations consenties par les Français dans de tels contrats.

La rétraction du jugement accordée, le Tribunal peut-il refuser la nullité du contrat de fusion? Mais comment? A ma demande, il sera ou ne sera pas opposé une défense au nom de sa Seigneurie:

1. S'il n'est pas opposé de défénse, le refus par le Tribunal de prononcer la nullité du contrat aurait cette conséquence, que le Tribunal tiendrait la Société de Commerce de France et me tiendrait dans les liens d'un contrat annulé en Angleterre, en d'autres termes, me refuserait la justice rendue par le Tribunal Anglais.

2. S'il est opposé une défénse, si par impossible et ce que je n'admets pas, il était soutenu que la Cour de Chancery par son jugement du 6 Juin, 1867, n'a pas annulé à Londres le contrat de fusion, le Tribunal pourrait-il refuser la nullité du contrat en France? Mais j'ai démontré plus haut que par suite d'une telle défense il faudrait admettre que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery contiendrait à la fois la reconnaissance et le mépris d'un droit Français en Angleterre. Le refus du Tribunal de prononcer la nullité du contrat consituerait donc un abandon complet de ce droit Français.

Je termine, Messieurs, ainsi que j'ai commencé, en disant que le Tribunal accueillera mes conclusions et que leur rejet établirait en principe que le commerçant Français ne devrait avoir aucune confiance dans les Traités de Commerce passés entre la France et l'Angleterre; que l'obligation prise par l'Angleterre, dans ces sortes de Traités, de respecter et faire respecter chez elle les propriétés des commerçants Français, ne serait pas sérieuse; que le commerçant Français, au cas où ses droits de propriété seraient méconnus en Angleterre, ne devrait aucunement compter en France sur la protection des Tribunaux Français.

Inclosure 4 in No. 105.

M. Cézard to the Lord Chancellor.

Le 23 Septembre, 1872.

A LA requête de M. Alphonse Cézard, propriétaire, demeurant à Paris (Batignolles), Boulevard de Neuilly, No. 112, j'ai, Charles Auguste Tainne, huissier près le Tribunal Civil de la Seine, séant à Paris, y demeurant rue de Turbigo, No. 16, soussigné, donné assignation à sa Seigneurie, le très-honorable Lord Grand Chancelier de la Grande Bretagne, représentant la Cour de Chancery, seule et véritable liquidateur du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), demeurant à Londres, Palais de la Cour de Chancery, Chancery Lane, et ce au domicile de M. le Procureur de la République en son Parquet à Paris, portant à l'un de messieurs ses substituts qui a visé le présent original à comparaître le 28 Octobre, 1872, à 10 heures du matin à l'audience du Tribunal de Commerce du Département de la Seine, séant à Paris en la Cité, pour :

Attendu que le 15 Février, 1865, Alphonse Cézard a fondé à Paris la Société des Crédits Généraux de Saint-Nazaire, a responsabilité limitée, capital 6,000,000 fr. ;

Attendu que le 29 Septembre, 1865, une Société Anglaise, "The Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), dont le siége social est à Londres, a signé à Paris avec la Société des Crédits Généraux de Saint-Nazaire un acte authentique de fusion, que les deux Sociétés déclarées fusionnées ont été désignées comme constituant une Société Française, à responsabilité limitée, capital 10,000,000 fr., sous la dénomination de Société de Commerce de France ;

Attendu que le 20 Juillet, 1866, la Société de Commerce de France a été déclarée en faillite avec un passif comprenant environ 5,000,000 fr. de titres de créances accordées aux intéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), en raison de la fusion de leur Société déclarée par eux réalisée à Londres en conformité des lois Anglaises ;

Attendu que divers Arrêts de la Cour d'Appel de Paris déclarant que la Société des Crédits Généraux de Saint-Nazaire et la Société de Commerce de France n'ont formé qu'une seule et même Société irrégulierement constituée, en ont prononcé la nullité dès son origine, et condamne Alphonse Cézard, fondateur, envers le Syndic, au paiement des dettes admises, et par conséquent des 5,000,000 fr. de titres de créances aux mains des íntéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) si elle sont admises ;

Attendu que par une Assignation du 11 Juillet, 1861, Cézard demandait au Tribunal le réglement de sa condamnation au profit du Syndic, que tous les créanciérs inscrits au bilan, ou leurs représentants assignés, Cézard concluait au rejet de toutes les créances du passif et à la condamnation du Syndic à lui remettre l'actif, que pour obtenir le rejet des créances inscrits au bilan en raison de la fusion Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), Cézard rappelait que ces créances ont pour cause une fusion que la Société Anglaise disait avoir réalisé à Londres, et soutenait que la fusion n'avait jamais été réalisée ; qu'en conséquence les dites créances données sur une fausse cause devaient être déclarées sans effet d'après l'Article 1131 du Code Civil ;

Attendu que Young ès-nom a soutenu que la fusion du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) avait été réalisée à Londres en conformité des lois Anglaises, et ajoutait que par suite de cette fusion la Société Anglaise avait transféré à Londres son actif à la Société Française qui se trouvait aux termes du contrat "seule et entièrement propriétaire" dudit actif depuis le 1^er^ Septembre, 1865, "tant en France qu'en Angleterre ;"

Attendu que le Tribunal, accueillant la défense de Young es-nom, a débouté Cézard de ses conclusions par un jugement du 19 Février, 1872, que Cézard a interjeté appel du dit jugement, et fait au sujet de cet appel les réserves les plus expresses ;

Attendu que c'est en trompant à la fois la justice Anglaise et la justice Française, que Young es-nom a réussi à surprendre ce jugement à l'équité du Tribunal ;

Attendu que pour tromper le Tribunal, Young ès-nom s'est jusqu'à ce jour refusé de produire des documents importants du Saint Nazaire-Company (Limited), ainsi que le prouve la chose jugée, que depuis le jugement Cézard a reussi à se les procurer, que ces documents prouvent non-seulement que la prétendue fusion n'a jamais été réalisée à Londres, mais encore que la Cour de Chancery faisant droit à une pétition de Bright Wool du 21 Mai, 1867, a écarté comme sans valeur en Angleterre le contrat de fusion du 29 Septembre, 1865, signé par les Administrateurs du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), lesquels, d'après la loi Anglaise, n'avaient pas capacité d'obliger cette Société.

Attendu en outre que Young ès-nom qui a qualité pour représenter le Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), n'était recevable à opposer une défense quelconque à l'action de Cézard qu'avec l'autorisation de la Cour de Chancery, seul et véritable liquidateur de la Société Anglaise, et dont Young ès-nom n'est que l'employé—que le respect dû à la justice

Anglaise ne permet pas d'admettre que la Cour de Chancery ait autorisé son employé à soutenir devant les Tribunaux Français le contraire de ce qu'elle a jugé en Angleterre—que si Young ès-nom produisait une autorisation de la Cour de Chancery il faudrait en conclure que pour l'obtenir il a trompé la Cour de Chancery.

Attendu que par les raisons qui précèdent et en vertu de l'Article 480 du Code de Procédure Civile, le Tribunal rétractera le jugement du 19 Février, 1872, en ce qui concerne la nullité du contrat de fusion demandée par Cézard et repoussée par le Tribunal ;

Attendu que mettant en cause la Cour de Chancery seule et véritable liquidateur du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), Cézard est fondé à demander contre elle la nullité du contrat de fusion.

Attendu que si, après avoir pris connaissance du contrat de fusion qui déclare la Société Française "seule et entièrement propriétaire" de l'actif de la Société Anglaise depuis le 1^er^ Septembre, 1865, "tant en France qu'en Angleterre," la Cour de Chancery le 6 Juin, 1867, a ordonné la liquidation de l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited) au profit des intéressés de cette Société, c'est manifestement que la Cour de Chancery, faisant droit à une demande de Bright Wool du 21 Mai, 1867, a jugé que les Administrateurs de la Société Anglaise avaient excédé leurs pouvoirs en signant le contrat de fusion à Paris, et n'avaient pas capacité d'obliger la Société Anglaise ;

Attendu que le Traité International du 30 Avril, 1862, en autorisant les Sociétés Anglaises à exercer leur droits en France, réserve l'appréciation de l'étendue de ces droits aux seuls Tribunaux Anglais—qu'en conséquence le Tribunal prononcera la nullité du contrat de fusion d'après les Articles 1108, 1124 de Code Civil.

Subsidiairement, et au cas inadmissible de la Cour de Chancery, trompée, autoriserait à soutenir devant le Tribunal que le jugement précité rendu par elle n'a pas jugé nul le Contrat de fusion à Londres ;

Attendu que le jugement de la Cour de Chancery précité vise le contrat de fusion—que si le jugement n'en a pas prononcé la nullité, il en a nécessairement reconnu la validité—que si la Cour de Chancery a reconnu la validité du contrat, elle a d'après les Articles 2 et 3 du dit contrat reconnu la Société de Commerce de France "seule et entièrement propriétaire" de l'actif de la Société Anglaise depuis le 1^er^ Septembre, 1865, "tant en France qu'en Angleterre."

Attendu que si la Cour de Chancery a reconnu la Société Française "seule et entièrement propriétaire" devant les lois Anglaises de l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), elle ne pourrait contester avoir en violation de la loi Anglaise et arbitrairement dépouillé la Société Française de ce droit de propriété reconnu par elle, en ordonnant la liquidation de l'actif du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), au profit des intéressés de cette Société ; que le demandeur d'après les Articles 1382 et 1383 du Code Civil serait fondé à demander à titre de dommages et intérêts la condamnation de la Cour de Chancery à payer les créances inscrites au bilan en raison de la fusion du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited).

Par ces motifs, plaise au Tribunal, donne acte au demandeur de ses réserves au sujet de son appel du jugement du 19 Février, 1872.

D'après l'Article 480 du Code de Procédure Civile retracte le jugement du 19 Février, 1872, en ce qui concerne le rejet de la demande formée par Alphonse Cézard en nullité de la fusion Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited).

En raison du Traité International du 30 Avril, 1862, et d'après les Articles 1108 et 1124 du Code Civil, prononce la nullité du contrat de fusion Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), et de tous les titres, actions, et créances délivrés aux intéressés du Saint-Nazaire Company (Limited), sans préjudice des dommages et intérêts demandé par Cézard devant la Cour d'Appel.

Subsidiairement, au cas où, sur la défense de la Cour de Chancery, le Tribunal repousserait la nullité de la fusion ;

D'après les Articles 1382 et 1383 du Code Civil, et à titre de dommages et intérêts, condamne la Cour de Chancery envers le faillite au paiement des créances inscrites au bilan en raison de la fusion.

Et je lui ai, étant et parlant comme dessus, laissé cette copie.

(Signé) ALPH. CÉZARD.

Mr. Francis to M. Cézard.

30, Portland Place, W., October 19, 1872.

Sir,

I AM directed by the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain to acknowledge the receipt of your letter (without date) on the subject of a citation which you therein state your intention to cause to be served on his Lordship from the Tribunal of Commerce of the Seine with respect to certain matters connected with the "Société des Crédits Généraux de Saint-Nazaire," a company with respect to which, as his Lordship collects from your letter and its inclosure, some proceedings are now pending in the British Court of Chancery.

His Lordship directs me to state that he declines to recognize any jurisdiction of any foreign Tribunal over the office which he has the honour to hold, or over himself as filling that office; and that if any citation or assignation such as you describe should be sent to him, he will deem it his duty to pass it by without any acknowledgment or notice, and to transmit it to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in order that such representations as may be deemed suitable may be made to the President of the French Republic on the subject of so improper an assumption of jurisdiction.

Temple, October 25, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of the Treaty between this country and Austria of the 16th December, 1865, and to call our attention to the stipulations therein contained for the extension to Austria of the provisions of the Treaty of Commerce of 1860, between this country and France.

And that he was to request us to take into consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our early convenience, how far any, and which, engagements made by Great Britain in the Treaty with France of 1860, would remain applicable to Austria after that Treaty was either cancelled or expired.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Austria, by providing in the Ist Article for the enjoyment by the subjects of the respective Governments of the advantages conceded by the Treaty with France in 1860, adopts the then existing stipulations thereof as part of the Treaty between Great Britain and Austria. And we are of opinion that the engagements so made with France in 1860 will remain in every respect applicable to Austria after the Treaty with France is cancelled or expires, as if such Treaty had not been cancelled or expired.

My Lord,

IN reference to your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's further letter of the 25th instant, relating to the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Austria, and calling our attention more particularly to the Tariffs of French wines, spirits, silks, &c., we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that, after the expiration of the French Treaty, the English import duties on wines, spirits, and silks fixed by the Tariffs in the French Treaty cannot be raised as regards Austria so long as the Austrian Treaty endures, and if such duties were reduced Austria would become entitled to an equal reduction on similar articles.

Temple, October 29, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, inclosing a copy of a letter from Mr. Arthur Silverthorne, containing an account of some transactions in which his client, Mr. Porter, a manufacturer of ironworks at Lincoln, had become involved in France in consequence of certain contracts entered into by him for the construction of gasworks in various towns of France before the war, and which had resulted in legal proceedings against him before the Tribunal of Amiens.

It was further stated that the Judge of that Court, in consequence, as it was alleged, of the decree of bankruptcy issued by him against Mr. Porter having been annulled by the Superior Court at Rennes, and being thereby actuated by vindictive motives, had instituted a course of legal persecution against Mr. Porter, by which his interests and those of other persons were very prejudicially affected.

That, under these circumstances, Mr. Silverthorne solicited the intervention of Her Majesty's Embassy with the French Government for the protection of his client.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take this case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature and extent of the interference, if any, which Her Majesty's Embassy would be justified in exercising in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration and have the honour to report—

That it appears the proceedings in which Mr. Porter's interests are concerned are still pending before the French Tribunals; and we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Embassy would not be justified in exercising any interference in the matters referred to by Mr. Silverthorne.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd day of October ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter addressed to your Lordship by the Lord Chancellor, accompanying various documents relating to a citation which his Lordship had received through the Acting French Consul-General in this country, at the instance of a Frenchman named Cézard, to appear in his judicial capacity before the Tribunal of Commerce of the Seine with reference to certain matters connected with the "Société des Crédits Généraux de St. Nazaire," with respect to which it appeared some proceedings are now pending before the British Court of Chancery.

Lord Enfield also states that the citation, as it seemed, had been transmitted to the Lord Chancellor by direction of the French Minister for Foreign Affairs; and that he was to request that we would take these papers into our immediate consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which you, as Secretary of State, should take therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly call the immediate attention of the French Government to the statement of M. Gautier of the 16th October, 1872, and the Lord Chancellor's answer, and, in adopting that answer, request that such proceedings may not be repeated.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, and its inclosures, received from Her Majesty's Minister at Paris respecting the case of Mr. Frederick Wilson, who had been arrested in Paris for an offence committed in the public streets, and who, after a detention of one calendar month in prison, had been sentenced to fifteen days' farther imprisonment, that being the period of punishment which it was understood was assigned to the particular offence in question.

That Mr. West, as we would perceive, did not report the case as one in which the legality of the sentence was to be called in question, nor did Mr. Wilson himself claim redress; but as it appeared to be invested with circumstances of hardship which might be repeated on any future occasion of a parallel nature, he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether there were any grounds on which at least an "officious" representation might be made to the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that an "officious" representation may properly be made to the French Government, in order to prevent a repetition of a similar hardship of as long (in this case one month's) imprisonment in addition to the imprisonment for fifteen days under the sentence.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would be so good as to furnish your Lordship, early on Tuesday next, with such form of notice as we would think it would be right to publish in order to carry out the provisions, with respect to the notification at the Foreign Office of existing contracts, of Article IV of the Protocol to be annexed to the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with France.

And that he (Viscount Enfield), at the same time, was to inquire whether we think that it would be advisable or necessary to make known, and, if so, in what precise manner, the stipulations of Article V of the Protocol in regard to mineral oil contracts.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we have drawn the following notice with respect to the notification of existing contracts in order to carry out the provisions of Article IV of Protocol:—

"Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with France.

"Notice.

"All persons who have entered into contracts for the delivery in France or Algeria of goods the produce or manufacture of the United Kingdom [or British possessions*], and which contracts remain to be executed, in whole or in part, before the 15th day of March, 1873, are required to give notice in writing of the said contracts, at the Foreign Office in London, within fourteen days from the date of this notice, in order that they may be submitted to the Commission, under the XXIst Article of the said Treaty, with the view to ascertain the validity, date, and good faith of the said contracts.

"No notification of any contract will be received after the expiration of fourteen days from the date of this notice."

And that we are of opinion that it is advisable, but not necessary, to make known the stipulations of Article V of the Protocol, for the information of persons whose contracts may have been affected by the operation of the Law of the 8th July, 1871, and whose cases may come within paragraphs 3, 4, and 5 of that Article

This information might be conveyed by advertisement in the official papers, as soon as the Treaty has been signed, in the following form:—

"Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with France.

"British Mineral Oils.

"A settlement of the questions concerning duties levied in France on British mineral oils will be effected by the Commission, under Article XXI of the Treaty, on the following terms:—

"[Here copy out paragraphs 2, 3, 4, and 5 of Article V of Protocol]."

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Mr. West relative to the question of monopolies in France in connection with the stipulations of Commercial Treaties.

Viscount Enfield also inclosed a copy of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation signed on the 5th instant, and stated that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the bearing of the question raised in Mr. West's despatch in regard to the provisions of the new Treaty between this country and France.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, understanding your Lordship's question to refer only to the monopoly proposed to be created in France as to the manufacture and sale of lucifer matches, we are of opinion that the proposed proceedings of the French Government are not inconsistent with the terms of the new Treaty with France, unless they be inconsistent with the terms of some other Treaty to the benefit of which we are entitled under the most-favoured-nation clause.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th instant, as to the bearing in regard to the new Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with France of the monopoly granted by the French Government for the manufacture of matches in France, he was directed by your Lordship to point out to us that your Lordship was desirous of obtaining our opinion as to the general question whether the granting of monopolies was consistent with the provisions of Commercial Treaties, and also whether if, in the event of the French Government granting a monopoly for the manufacture of beer or any other commodity comprised in the Tariff annexed to the Treaty, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in remonstrating against it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the granting of monopolies in France with provisions permitting the introduction into, but forbidding the sale in France of commodities comprised in a Tariff is not consistent with the spirit and intention of Treaties of Commerce such as the new Treaty with France.

And that, in the event of the French Government granting a similar monopoly for the manufacture of any commodity comprised in the Tariff annexed to that Treaty, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in remonstrating against it.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of the Treaty of Commerce concluded on the 7th instant between the Governments of Great Britain and France; and he was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to whether there was anything in the provisions of the said Treaty which could enable the French Government to levy compensatory duties upon English goods without having previously imposed equivalent taxes upon raw materials of French extraction.

That it was the opinion of the French Chargé d'Affaires that the epithet "compensatory" was decisive against such a power.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there is nothing in the provisions of the Treaty of Commerce between the Governments of Great Britain and France which would enable the French Government to levy compensatory duties upon English goods without having previously imposed equivalent taxes upon raw materials of French extraction, or upon similar goods, the produce of French industry.

We are not informed whether the French Government claims the power of imposing at once the compensatory duties, or whether that Government relies on the 3rd paragraph of Article II of the Treaty, or upon some other part of the Treaty; but it seems to us that the word "compensatory," and the text of the Vth Article of the Treaty, are clearly against the exercise of the power referred to.

Temple, December 4, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Mr. Kennedy, stating certain questions which had arisen in the discussions at the Paris Commercial Treaty Commission upon which it was desirable that he (Mr. Kennedy) should be furnished with instructions.

Lord Tenterden inclosed copies of the printed correspondence and of the Treaty signed on the 5th ultimo.

That we would see that those questions were—

1. Whether Mr. Kennedy could claim the right to discuss the import duty on raw materials at the Commission.

2. Whether, in estimating the compensatory duties, account should be taken of the duties on processes of manufacture, whether connected with machinery or processes used in manufacture in connection with the machinery, and external to the manufactured article, such as machinery bands, oils, &c.

3. Whether, in estimating the compensatory duties, account should be taken of the "surtaxe d'entrepôt."

That upon the first point your Lordship had caused a draft of an instruction to Mr. Kennedy to be prepared, which he (Lord Tenterden) was to submit for our consideration and opinion.

That the passages in the correspondence relating to that matter would be found at pp. 363, 422, 429, and 430 of the printed volume.

That he was also to transmit, for our consideration and opinion, a draft of the reply proposed to be returned to Mr. Kennedy on the second point. Previous correspondence relating to it to be found at pp. 32 and 41 of the second printed volume, marked Part IV.

That upon the third point Mr. Kennedy had been asked for farther explanations; but your Lordship would be glad if we would also in the meanwhile take it into consideration and favour you with our opinion on it. A copy of the statement put in by Mr. Kennedy on the 25th ultimo, in which the abolition of the "surtaxe d'entrepôt" was urged upon the attention of the French Commissioner, was annexed.

That, besides requesting our opinion upon those points, he (Lord Tenterden) was to state that your Lordship had addressed a despatch to Lord Lyons instructing his Excellency to procure from the French Government a record in writing of their agreement with Her Majesty's Government in considering that the compensatory duties in the Annex to the Treaty could not be levied unless the duty on raw materials was collected; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what would be the position of Her Majesty's Government if the French Government consented to that; that was to say, whether the omission to levy the new duties on the scale specified in the Annex could affect the rest of the Treaty, supposing it to have been ratified by the Chamber.

That in our Report of the 21st ultimo we gave the opinion that there was nothing in the provisions of the Treaty which would enable the French Government to levy compensatory duties upon English goods without having previously imposed equivalent taxes upon raw materials of French extraction, or upon similar goods the produce of French industry, adding that the word "compensatory" and the text of the Vth Article of the Treaty were clearly against the exercise of the power referred to.

That he (Lord Tenterden) was, however, to observe that the Vth Article of the Treaty was prospective, and applied only to the future case of an excise tax or inland duty being levied in France; when it was provided by the Article that a proportionate compensatory duty might be added to the total amount of duties leviable under the Tariff Annex, but that no addition should be made thereafter on account of import duties; and he was to request our farther opinion whether, should the Treaty be ratified by both Governments without provision being made by French law for the imposition of the duty on raw materials, either generally or upon the goods or produce of nations having no Commercial Treaties with France to prevent such an imposition, the Tariff would, nevertheless, come at once into operation as against British goods and produce upon the scale mentioned as "total amount of duties payable" in Annex I.

And that, as it was of importance that the instructions to Mr. Kennedy should be furnished as soon as possible, he (Lord Tenterden) was to ask us to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the several matters at our earliest convenience; and that the law relating to raw materials which was frequently referred to in the inclosed papers would be found at p. 269 of the first volume (Part III).

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That Mr. Kennedy having, in compliance with your Lordship's instructions, agreed with M. Ozenne upon the functions of the Commission and the limits within which the discussion of the Tariff on raw materials should be conducted, we are of opinion that the draft of the proposed instruction to Mr. Kennedy is right.

But we are of opinion that it is open to Mr. Kennedy to discuss any of the details not in opposition to or infringing upon this principle.

2. We are of opinion that the instruction to Mr. Kennedy that, in estimating the compensatory duties, no element should be taken into consideration save the duty on the raw material which may form the basis of the manufactured article, is right; and that no duties in processes of manufacture in connection with machinery. or used in manufacture in connection with machinery, and external to the manufactured article, can be taken into account in estimating the compensatory duties.

We are of opinion that in estimating the compensatory duties no account should be taken of the "surtaxe d'entrepôt.'"

In Annex I, column of observations, this surcharge is named three times—twice in the phrase "exclusive of the 'surtaxe d'entrepôt'", and once in the phrase "not including the 'surtaxe d'entrepôt.'"

We do not consider that Her Majesty's Government, by merely admitting this mention of the surcharge in the column of observations, is so pledged to the principle that the abolition of the surcharge, if imposed, should not, as suggested by Mr. Kennedy, "be urged upon the French Government."

The omission to levy the new duties on the scale specified in the Annex would not, in our opinion, affect the rest of the Treaty, supposing it to have been ratified by the Chambers.

And if the Treaty be ratified by both Governments without provision being made by the French Government for the imposition of any duty on raw materials, the Tariff in Annex I would not come into operation against British goods and produce upon the scale mentioned as "total amount of duties leviable" in Annex I, being maximum duties, without a law to that effect.

But supposing the Tariff in Annex I to come into operation, then, if under Article V of the Treaty, which is prospective, an inland tax or duty were imposed by the French Government, a compensatory customs duty might be levied on British goods and produce in addition to the duties leviable under the Tariff, but not till such inland tax or duty were imposed.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th instant, he (Lord Tenterden) was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion upon the position in which Great Britain will be placed, should the Treaty of Commerce signed on the 5th ultimo be ratified, but the Tariff annexed to it not be brought into operation in consequence of the law on raw materials not coming into force.

That he (Lord Tenterden) inclosed a copy of the Treaty, together with the volume containing the law in question, and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to call our attention to the provision in the latter.

And that we would be aware that the Treaty of Commerce between France and Austria, and which would preclude the imposition of such compensatory duties in regard to that country (and also in regard to Germany, which possessed "most-favoured-nation" privileges), did not expire until the 1st January, 1872. There were also Treaties of Commerce of a similar nature between France and Italy, expiring in January 1876, and France and Switzerland, expiring in November 1876.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, if the Treaty of the 5th be ratified, but the Tariff annexed to it be not brought into operation in consequence of the law on raw materials not coming into force, the commerce of Great Britain will be subject to the duties imposed by any existing French law, except so far as the duties so imposed are limited in their maximum amount by the Annex to the Treaty of the 5th November, to which we have agreed by the IInd Article of that Treaty. We need hardly say that this opinion refers only to such articles as are expressly dealt with in the Annex. As to others not comprised in the Annex, but comprised in the Treaty of 1860, the Tariff remains as under that Treaty till the 15th March, 1873. After that date the most-favoured-nation clause applies to these articles.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a letter from Mr. Silverthorne in reply to an intimation from Lord Lyons of the decision arrived at by Her Majesty's Government, in which he stated his reasons for still thinking that the interference of the Embassy would be justifiable and necessary; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether the arguments advanced by Mr. Silverthorne in the farther letter led us to alter the opinion given on that case in our Report of the 29th October, which was therewith inclosed, together with the despatch from Mr. West upon which it was made.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that the question of the liability of certain classes of foreigners in France to the military service of that country was, as we would remember, recently raised by the introduction into the French Assembly of a new Army Bill. An amendment to the 9th Article of that Bill was moved rendering liable to military service the sons born in France of foreign parents, unless they should prove that they had discharged the obligations imposed by the laws of recruiting in their own country. That amendment was, however, opposed, and ultimately withdrawn by its mover, on its being represented to him that any change in the status of foreigners should be effected, not by an Article in a military law, but by a deliberate alteration of the civil law, and on his receiving an assurance from the President of the Republic that such an alteration would receive his support.

That the correspondence with Her Majesty's Representative at Paris was submitted to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, who consulted us on the matter, and our opinion was embodied in a letter from the Home Office.

That a Bill had now been brought in in the Assembly by which the sons born in France of foreign parents were declared to be French, and as such liable to military service, unless, in the year following their majority, they made a formal declaration repudiating French nationality, and showed, moreover, that they had fulfilled the obligations imposed upon them by the recruiting law of the country of their origin.

That the Committee which had reported in favour of the Bills being taken into consideration by the Assembly also suggested that these sons of foreign parents should be allowed to contract, at the age of 19, voluntary engagements in the army for one year.

That he (Mr. Hammond) inclosed, with previous correspondence, four despatches recently received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, the last of which recorded a conversation he had had with the French Minister for Foreign Affairs; and he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take them into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we had anything to add to the opinion given by us which was contained in the Home Office letter of the 17th October last.

My Lord,

That we would see that one of the executors of Mr. Bass had applied to Lord Lyons with a view to obtaining a remission of the duty levied on the estate under that law, but that the legal adviser to the Embassy, whom Lord Lyons had consulted, pointed out that it was open to the executors of the deceased to appeal themselves to the Minister of Finance, and, if dissatisfied with his decision, to bring the case before a Court of Law, as in its present aspect it did not afford grounds for the intervention of Her Majesty's Embassy.

That Lord Lyons, foreseeing that many similar cases were likely to arise under the new law, was desirous, as the course pursued on the present occasion would afford a precedent for dealing with them, of receiving instructions for his guidance, both as regarded the present and any future cases of a like nature; and he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions with which Lord Lyons should be furnished.

And that a copy of the law, as originally promulgated, would be found in Lord Lyons' despatch (inclosed), and he (Mr. Hammond) also inclosed a correspondence with the Treasury upon the subject, and a draft of an instruction which was in consequence addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Paris.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the observations of the French Counsel to the Embassy in Paris on this case, are, in our opinion, well founded.

The question in each case of a British subject dying in France will be for the purpose of legacy duty, whether he was domiciled in France or not.

That question the French Tribunals may try and decide where it is raised before them is in Mr. Merridew's case on the claim to the duties on the property of his testator by the French Government.

We see no reason for supposing that the French Government will stretch the meaning of the word "domicilié" to the case of a mere traveller or sojourner dying in France, and we cannot say what general instructions can be given to Lord Lyons for his gnidance in any future case. But in the present case Lord Lyons may be, in our opinion, properly instructed to inform Mr. Merridew that Lord Lyons cannot interfore, the matter being one for the decision of the French Tribunals.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 9th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Lord Lyons and Mr. Kennedy respecting the agreement to be made with the French Government as to the operation of the Treaty of Commerce of the 5th ultimo.

That we would see from the papers that Mr. Kennedy suggested that that agreement might be effected by means of explanatory notes to the Tariff (Annex I), which, having been recast by the Commission, would have, Lord Lyons considered, to be formally signed in its amended shape.

That it appeared to your Lordship that that suggestion might to some extent be adopted; but that, instead of being inserted as a note to the Tariff, it might be better to include the agreement incidentally in a Protocol or exchange of notes recording the substitution of the amended Tariff for the Tariff now forming Annex I to the Treaty.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on that point, and, should we agree with you, also on the further question whether an Additional Article, a Protocol, or exchange of notes would be preferable.

That your Lordship also directed him (Lord Tenterden) to request our opinion upon the precise language in which the agreement or declaration contemplated should be made, and with the view of facilitating the matter, had caused the accompanying draft of instructions and Protocol to be drawn up, but that your Lordship wished it to be understood that you left the form in which the agreement should be made for our judgment, either to reject the drafts altogether or to amend them as we might deem advisable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the course of including the agreement incidentally in a Protocol or exchange of notes recording the substitution of the amended Tariff for the Tariff now forming Annex I to the Treaty is to be preferred to the use of explanatory notes to Tariff I.

We are further of opinion that a Protocol is the best mode of affecting the objects intended.

The drafts do not, in our opinion, require any change in form or language except the omission of the words "in virtue of the provisions of the IInd Article of the Treaty of the 5th November, 1872," in paragraph 4 of the draft Protocol. This omission we suggest for your Lordship's consideration.

My Lord, Temple, June 24, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a telegram from Mr. Scott, Second Secretary in Her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, and at present in charge of Her Majesty's Legation at Stuttgardt, inquiring whether a marriage could be legally celebrated by himself in the absence of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires.

That he was to inclose copies of the Act 4 Geo. ### ANNO QUARTO GEORGII IV REGIS.

Cap. XCI.—An Act to relieve His Majesty's Subjects from all Doubt concerning the Validity of certain Marriages solemnized Abroad.

Marriages solemnized abroad by Ministers of the Church of England, &c., declared as valid as if solemnized in His Majesty's Dominions.

WHEREAS it is expedient to relieve the minds of all His Majesty's subjects from any doubt concerning the validity of marriages solemnized by a Minister of the Church of England in the chapel or house of any British Ambassador or Minister residing within the country to the Court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel belonging to any British factory abroad, or in the house of any British subject residing at such factory, as well as from any possibility of doubt concerning the validity of marriages solemnized within the British lines by any chaplain or officer, or other person officiating under the orders of the Commanding Officer of a British army serving abroad; be it declared and enacted, and it is hereby declared and enacted, by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that all such marriages as aforesaid shall be deemed and held to be as valid in law as if the same had been solemnized within His Majesty's dominions, with a due observance of all forms required by law.

Not to affect the validity of marriages solemnized beyond seas.

II. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this Act contained shall confirm or impair or anywise affect, or be construed to confirm or to impair or anywise to affect, the validity in law of any marriages solemnized beyond the seas, save and except such as have been or shall be solemnized in the places, form, and manner herein specified and recited.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence respecting the case of a child named Hannah Huggett, who, in the year 1867, was, by a bond entered into by her mother with a man named Henry Holland Keys, of New York, the proprietor of a circus, made over to the latter in consideration of a sum of money to be paid by him, and who subsequently placed the child in the charge of a French family at Paris of humble station, named Pihan, who were to receive from him a certain sum of money for her maintenance. Ultimately, however, the mother, who was stated to be a domestic servant in this country, was desirous of regaining possession of her child, and on the solicitation of Mr. Becke, who had been acting as attorney for her, Her Majesty's Minister at Paris was instructed, under the circumstances which appear in the correspondence, to take steps for claiming the child on its mother's behalf, the British Charitable Fund in that city having undertaken the arrangements for her being forwarded to this country.

That we would perceive, however, from Lord Lyons' despatch No. 1172 of the 16th instant, that the Pihans absolutely refused to part with the child, and, acting under legal advice, were prepared to resist an action at law for the child's restitution.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship should not instruct Lord Lyons to make any official application to the French Government on behalf of the child, Hannah Huggett, or her mother.

The proper course will be for the mother to make her application to the French Tribunals for the restoration of her child, and Lord Lyons might be instructed to support officiously that application as on behalf of British subjects (the mother and child), and also, if he is satisfied he can properly do so, to give some assurance to the French Tribunals that the child will be properly brought up by the relations of the mother.

The transfer of the child to Keys was invalid in law, and we are of opinion that Lord Lyons may properly be instructed to use his influence, if required, with the French Government to prevent the child being given up to Keys, an American.

My Lord, Temple, October 14, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Report drawn up on the 2nd August, 1861, by the then Law Officers of the Crown (copy inclosed) relative to the right claimed by the British Admiral on the North American station to search merchant vessels, foreign as well as British, in British waters, for deserters, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Admiralty, setting forth the circumstances under which Lieutenant Yeatman, commanding Her Majesty's ship "Minstrel," tried to capture two deserters from Her Majesty's ship "Sirius," who were believed to be on board the Brazilian steamer "Tegeira Rinz," at Barbadoes; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the several points detailed in the Admiralty letter, in order that instructions might be framed accordingly for the guidance of naval officers with regard to their powers under the Naval Discipline Act, sec. 50, the 10 & 11 Vict., cap. 62, sec. 9, and the laws generally.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That neither under the Naval Discipline Act, sec. 50, nor under the 10 & 11 Vict., cap. 62, sec. 9, nor under the law generally, has a naval officer, in our opinion, a right, with or without the warrant mentioned in section 50 of the Naval Discipline Act, to board and search a British vessel for particular deserters in British harbours or territorial waters, on the high seas, or in foreign territorial waters.

2. But we are of opinion that if a naval officer be furnished with the warrant named in section 50 of the Naval Discipline Act, he may apprehend or arrest the person or persons named in such warrant if met with in a British or foreign vessel in British harbours or British territorial waters, or in British vessels on the high seas, but not if such British vessels be in foreign territorial waters, and a naval officer authorized by such warrant may use all necessary force for effecting such arrest, but towards such person or persons only as are subject to the Naval Discipline Act.

3. We are of opinion that no naval officer has the right to search for and apprehend deserters generally, though he may, in the absence of a constable, apprehend, or cause to be apprehended, any suspected deserter found in any vessel in British territorial waters, and cause him to be brought before any Justice in the United Kingdom, or in any of Her Majesty's possessions or territories, under 10 & 11 Vict., cap. 62, sec. 9.

4. We are of opinion that no naval officer can search for deserters generally on board any foreign ship.

5. We are of opinion that the fact of the deserter having shipped on board a foreign ship in foreign waters makes no difference.

Temple, October 22, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that the Circular of which a copy was inclosed was sent to Her Majesty's Diplomatic Representatives, in accordance with the tenour of our Report of the 28th February last; that to this Circular no objection has been raised; that by some misconception, however, a Circular, in very similar terms, was addressed to Her Majesty's Consuls; and that he (Lord Enfield) was to transmit to us a copy of this Circular, as well as despatches marked in the inclosed list, from several Consuls, pointing out the difficulties they have experienced in consequence of it, and offering remarks on the question of marriages abroad generally. That two memoranda were also inclosed, which had been drawn up at the Foreign Office, together with a file of papers, being the Acts of Parliament and instructions with which all Consulates are furnished on being for the first time supplied with a marriage warrant from the Secretary of State. That your Lordship thought it clear from these papers that the Circular of the 18th March must be rescinded, and another issued in its place, in which your Lordship proposed to omit the paragraph No. 1 as being superfluous. That in view of the remarks in Mr. Consul Bernal's despatches of the 25th March and the 11th July, your Lordship would propose that paragraph No. 2 should be modified so as to make it run in some such manner as follows:—

"It must be clearly understood that she must have previously complied with the requirements of the marriage laws of such country so far as it may be possible to do so."

That Mr. Bernal's remarks would seem to point to a defect in the French rather than the English law, and that your Lordship did not imagine that it was necessary, on account of international comity, to go farther than to insist, in the case of one of the parties to a marriage being a subject of the country in which it is celebrated, that the laws of that country on the matter should be complied with as far as possible before the marriage can take place before the Consul. That as regards the paragraph No. 3, it appeared to your Lordship very doubtful whether, in view of the wording of the preamble of the Act 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, your Lordship is able to forbid marriages at Consulates where the woman is a British subject.

That it would seem that the case would be sufficiently met if in such cases greater stress than usual were laid by Consuls on the warning which your Lordship considered should be given on the occasion of every Consular marriage, that such marriages are not necessarily valid out of Her Majesty's dominions, and that the parties must make themselves acquainted with the law on the subject of any country not within those dominions in which it is desirable that the marriage should be recognized as valid, and take steps accordingly. That your Lordship proposed further that Consuls should be told that the declaration appended to the Circular of the 18th March would no longer be required, its purpose being answered by the entry in Schedule A of the nationality of the parties to each marriage. That the draft of a Circular in the above sense was inclosed, and that he (Lord Enfield) was to request that, in favouring your Lordship with our opinion on the foregoing points, we would suggest such alterations in the proposed Circular as we might deem desirable.

That the primary object of this reference to us was the proper wording of the Circular, so as to bring it in accordance with the law, but that he (Lord Enfield) was further to request our opinion as to whether there was anything in the inclosed despatches which would lead us to consider that a change in the law is desirable, or that any alteration in the instructions now given to Her Majesty's Consuls, as set forth in the file in paper binding, was needed under the present state of the law.

That the question of marriages at Riga, which is alluded to in the inclosed memoranda, would shortly form the subject of a further reference to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Circular of the 18th March, 1872, should be, as your Lordship proposes, rescinded and cancelled.

The security of property and the interests of the children and status of the parties are the matters for the sake of which the validity of any marriage is most essential.

With the view of obtaining this object we consider it of great importance to make no distinction between the cases of the man or the woman not being subjects of Great Britain. If the marriage is illegal by some law personal to the man or to the woman, either may repudiate it, as in the case referred to by Mr. Consul Abbott in his despatch of the 20th March, 1872.

We therefore consider the direction in the draft Circular preferable to the modification suggested in Lord Enfield's letter, which applies only to the case of the woman being a British subject.

We entirely concur in the view which your Lordship takes of the paragraph 3 in the Circular of the 18th March, 1872, and which is contrary to the Statute 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68. The declaration appended to the Circular of the 18th March will go with the Circular itself, and we see no objection to adding a column in Schedule A for the nationality of the parties to each marriage.

In reference to the wording of the draft Circular, we would suggest that the paragraph, "You will lay especial stress on this warning, where the woman is a British subject, and the man not," be omitted, since, in our opinion, as already stated, the possible mischiefs are as great in the case of a man who is a British subject, as in the case of the woman, and this instruction may mislead.

Under the present state of the law no instructions beyond those in the draft Circular are needful.

But we consider that it is desirable to change the law in reference to mixed marriages before Consuls and Consular authorities, so that such marriages should either be put an end to altogether, at least so far as their celebration at British Consulates is concerned, or made of as extensive obligation as can be by Treaties.

My Lord, Temple, December , 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th November ultimo, stating that your Lordship had communicated to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty a copy of our Report of the 14th October last, respecting the circumstances under which Lieutenant Yeatman, commanding Her Majesty's ship "Minstrel," had endeavoured to capture two deserters from Her Majesty's ship "Sirius," who were believed to be on board the Brazilian steamer "Texeira Ruiz" at Barbadoes; our opinion on that matter having been requested with a view to framing instructions for the guidance of naval officers with regard to the powers possessed by them, whether under the Naval Discipline Act or otherwise, in cases of desertion.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that he transmitted to us a further letter from the Admiralty in reply, requesting that our attention might be called to the Naval Discipline Act of 1866, section 25, and the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854, section 13, bearing upon which Acts the Admiralty were desirous of information on certain points, which are fully stated in their letter, and that he was accordingly to request that we would take the matters into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon them for communication to the Admiralty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Naval Discipline Act, section 25, deals solely with the case of naval deserters, and the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, section 13, solely with merchant seamen, and that it would be contrary to the spirit and wording of either enactment that a case of non-compliance with a provision of the laws relating to merchant seamen and to navigation should be considered within the scope of the laws relating to naval discipline or vice versâ, though no doubt the captain of a merchant ship may, like any one else, come within the penalties (29 and 30 Vict., cap. 109, sec. 25).

No constable has, under 10 and 11 Vict., cap. 62, or otherwise, a power, without a warrant, to search any merchant ship in a British port for naval deserters, whether for deserters generally, or for particular persons.

My Lord, Temple, February 9, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two notes, with translations, from the German Ambassador and German Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, announcing the entry of Alsace and Lorraine into the German customs and commercial dominion, and thereby also into the Treaties existing between the State forming that dominion and other States, and requesting to be put into possession of the views of Her Majesty's Government on the bearing of this matter on the Treaty engagements between this country and the German Customs Union.

Lord Tenterden was accordingly pleased to request that I would take these notes into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with an opinion, at my early convenience, as to the answer which should be returned to the German Government.

My Lord, Temple, December 13, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 9th August relative to the inability of a person acting in the place of a deceased British Consul to solemnize marriages under the warrant issued to the deceased, he (Lord Tenterden) was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the same inability attached to a person duly authorized to act in the absence of a Consular Officer provided with a marriage warrant, who was still alive, but had left the service subsequently to the date of authorization to act given to his locum tenens.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the locum tenens of a Consular Officer provided with a marriage warrant, but having left the service subsequently to the date of the authorization to act given to the locum tenens, is not empowered to solemnize marriages.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not aware how far it may have been the practice for Her Majesty's Government to notify in the "Gazette" changes in the fiscal system of friendly States which may be formally announced to it from time to time by their respective Governments. If no such practice has been thought expedient in the interest of British trade, I should be of opinion that all that would be necessary on the present occasion would be for your Lordship to acknowledge the communication on the part of the Ambassador of the German Empire of the entrance of Alsace and Lorraine into the German Union of Customs.

I should add that I have not before me the Treaty of the 30th May, 1865, between the German Union of Customs and Great Britain, to which reference is made in Count Bernstorff's letter of the 6th January, 1872, so that I write subject to any peculiar provisions to be found therein having reference to the extension from time to time of the Customs Union.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received May 22.)

My Lord, Temple, May 21, 1872.

And that your Lordship felt inclined, subject to our advice, to endeavour to effect a compromise of the dispute by only releasing the vessel on condition of the owners paying a certain sum as compensation to the owners of the "Lord Brougham;" and that you would be glad to have our opinion also upon that suggestion, which was prompted by your Lordship's recollection of the behaviour of the German Government in the case of the colliers seized by their military authorities in the Seine during the late war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We think that the German Government has no right to claim any indemnity, there being no breach of neutrality on the part of the British authorities. The act of these authorities in requiring the prize to go away being an act in accordance with the rules laid down by themselves to preserve their neutrality, and so far as it gave the Germans a chance of recapture, it was an act favourable to them, for it must not be forgotten that if the prize had been allowed to remain it might have been condemned in a French Prize Court and lawfully sold without quitting the neutral waters. It is therefore impossible to say that the loss of the "Lord Brougham" was in any way attributable to the act of the British authorities. We think also it could not be fairly attributed to anything done by the "Gauntlet," for if she had not towed the prize the latter must have remained till a change of wind, and there is nothing to show that there was any reasonable chance of recapture by the German man-of-war mentioned. We think also that the owners of the vessel have shown very strong grounds for a release of the vessel on the terms of paying the costs incurred. The only remaining question is not a question of law but of policy, of which your Lordship must be the best judge. We can only say that we see no legal objection to the course proposed by your Lordship, and that it is for your Lordship, if you think fit, to overrule the moral and substantial objections to it, which are such as we have ventured to indicate.

Temple, June 18, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, upon receipt of our Report of the 21st ultimo, upon the case of the "Gauntlet," your Lordship addressed the accompanying letter to Count Bernstorff, maintaining, in accordance with our advice, the view of Her Majesty's Government that the vessel might properly be released on payment of all costs incurred in the case.

2. That he (Lord Enfield) was to refer to us Count Bernstorff's reply, in which his Excellency restated, on behalf of his Government, their strong objections to the release of the "Gauntlet" without adequate compensation being made to the owners and crew of the "Lord Brougham."

3. That we would observe that the arguments used by Count Bernstorff in support of his views were—

(1.) That the recapture of the German prize by a German man-of-war was rendered impossible, or, at all events, much more difficult, by the interference of the "Gauntlet."

(2.) That the British authorities induced the French prize crew to make use of the "Gauntlet" for the purpose of towing away the prize, whereas their proper course should have been, at the expiration of the legal period, to lay an embargo on the prize, and to release the German crew.

(3.) That the British authorities should have warned the owners of the "Gauntlet" of the illegality of their proceedings before, and not after, the act was committed.

That, finally, Count Bernstorff contended that either the "Gauntlet" or the British authorities were responsible for her illegal act, and that, in either case, sufficient satisfaction would not have been given if the vessel was released without some compensation.

And that he (Lord Enfield) was to request our careful opinion upon Count Bernstorff's pretensions on all these points, and especially upon the claim which his Excellency put forward to compensation for the "Lord Brougham," and as to the answer which should be returned thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the possible recapture of the "Lord Brougham" by a German man-of-war is a contingency which, in principle, cannot, in our opinion, be entertained. The same argument would apply against receiving a prize of war within the asylum of neutral waters; and a neutral Power is clearly at liberty to give such asylum.

2. The suggestion that the British authorities induced the French prize crew to make use of the "Gauntlet" for the purpose of towing away the prize seems to us to rest on a mistaken apprehension of the facts.

All the British authorities did was to warn the prize crew that the "Lord Brougham" must not remain longer in British waters. The British authorities in no way pointed out how the "Lord Brougham" was to be removed, and did not induce the prize crew to employ the "Gauntlet."

The "Lord Brougham," as a sailing vessel, could not have left the Downs till the wind enabled her to do so; and the time for laying an embargo on her, and releasing the German crew, would not have come till the prize crew of the "Lord Brougham" had neglected to avail themselves of the opportunity for sailing, by which time a French fleet might have been near to protect her on her passage to a French port.

3. We are not aware of any obligation binding the British authorities to have warned the owners of the "Gauntlet" of the illegality of their intended proceedings, and it does not appear that the British authorities knew that the "Gauntlet" was to be employed by the prize crew so that they could in fact have interfered.

4. In our opinion, and for the reasons stated in our Report of the 22nd May last, the British authorities did not commit, and were not responsible for, any breach of neutrality.

It appears to us that the owners of the "Gauntlet" have been sufficiently punished for the commission of the act of which in the circumstances they have been found guilty.

5. As respects any compensation for the loss of the "Lord Brougham," in consequence of the acts or defaults of the British authorities, or of the acts of the "Gauntlet," we are of opinion, as stated partly in our Report of the 22nd May last, that—

(1.) The British authorities strictly fulfilled the obligations of a neutral inwarning the French prize crew that the "Lord Brougham" must be moved.

(2.) The British authorities are not responsible for the employment of the "Gauntlet" by the French prize crew.

(3.) In prosecuting the "Gauntlet," the British Government showed, beyond all doubt, the determination to exercise all the rights, and discharge all the obligations, which the Government had or was under to both belligerents.

(4.) The owners of the "Gauntlet" have been sufficiently punished for a breach of the municipal laws of England not wilfully committed.

(5.) The recapture of the "Lord Brougham" is a contingency too remote for consideration in the case, but which need not be argued out, since the case should depend upon a principle.

(6.) In any answer which is sent to Count Bernstorff, his Excellency may be informed that the claim for compensation for the loss of the "Lord Brougham" cannot, on legal grounds, be acceded to by your Lordship.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by your Lordship's direction, three letters, which had been received from a Mr. Onions, complaining of the ill-treatment which his aunt, Mrs. Barnard, while residing at Orleans, sustained from Bavarian soldiers during the occupation of that town by the German army, and further alleging that property to the value of at least 750*l.* was either taken away, destroyed, or allowed to be taken away by the proceedings of the German soldiers during that and a subsequent occupation.

Lord Enfield added that he was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether there is anything in the letters, or in the papers accompanying them, on which a representation to the German Government may properly be founded.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there does not appear to be any evidence in the papers submitted to your Lordship by Mr. Onions upon which it is possible, in our opinion, to found a claim upon the German Government for compensation, either with regard to the acts alleged to have been committed on the person of Mrs. Barnard, who appears to have been in London in September 1870, or the amount of property alleged to have been destroyed or taken away.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a letter, with its inclosure, which had been received from Messrs. Paul Hirsch and Co., urging their claim against the German Government for the value of a case of woollen goods forwarded by them for delivery to a firm at Bischweiler, in Alsace, on the 5th July, 1870.

That the waggon containing that case was stated by the French Railway Company to have been stopped on the 18th July, the day before the official declaration of war

Temple, December 17, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 7th instant on the subject of the claim of Messrs. Hirsch and Josephy against the German Government for goods which were stated to have fallen into the hands of the German army in transmission to Alsace, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from that firm, stating that they were naturalized British subjects, and he was to inform us that it had been ascertained from the returns of persons naturalized that their (Messrs. Hirsch and Co.'s) native country was Mecklenberg-Schwerin.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to return to us the previous papers relating to the case, and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, the claim could properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The evidence that the property in question was taken possession of by the German troops is very slight. But your Lordship may, in our opinion, bring the circumstances of the case before the German Government, and request the favourable consideration of the German Government to the claim of Messrs. Hirsch.

Temple, March 15, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers in the case, a despatch, and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, respecting the proceedings which have been taken against the Archimandrite Skiotis, who had been appointed Prior for life of the Convent of Catheras, in Ithaca, by the Ionian Government; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion on the course which Her Majesty's Government should take in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the opinion expressed by Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, that the case of the Archimandrite is not one in which Her Majesty's Government can with propriety interfere, is, in my opinion, correct. With regard to a possible refusal of the Hellenic Government to reinstate him in his former position at Catheras after the expiration of his sentence, it is difficult for me to advise your Lordship whether the good offices of Her Majesty's Government should be exerted on his behalf in such an event, but I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would be under no obligation to interpose their good offices in his behalf.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers as marked in the margin,* relating to the prohibition by the Greek Government of the farther use of the British cemeteries at Zante; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what action Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the closing of the British cemeteries at Zante to the extent and in the manner proposed by the authorities of the island is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Greek Government, whose action, in our opinion, ought not to be interfered with.

We see no objection to your Lordship's claiming, as suggested by Mr. Stuart, the assignment to British residents in Zante of another burial-ground. Your Lordship, however, will be able to form the best judgment whether such an application would be expedient, and whether a right of gratuitous sepulture in the Greek cemetery should be asked for on behalf of British subjects.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 15th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, and inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul at Corfu, regarding a fine inflicted by the police authorities upon the manager of the Corfu branch of the Malta and Mediterranean Gas Company, on the ground that the gas supplied by the company was not of the quality specified in their contract.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any representation in the matter should be made to the Hellenic Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, no representation should be made to the Hellenic Government in this matter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Jenkins on behalf of British claimants on Hayti, submitting certain conditions which they wished to be required of the Haytian Government in regard to the payment of the principal and interest of such sums as might be awarded to the claimants on account of their claims, which were then being examined at Port-au-Prince by two gentlemen, nominated by the Haytian Government and Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires respectively.

That before instructing Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires upon the subject, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the justice of the conditions urged in Mr. Jenkins' note.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is nothing in the conditions urged in Mr. Jenkins' note inconsistent with justice.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 29.)

Temple, November 29, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence relative to a claim which Her Majesty's Government had made on the Government of San Domingo for the repayment of expenses, amounting to 13,913*l.* 8*s.* 2¼*d.*, arising out of the detention at Tortola of the steamer "Telegrafo" in 1869.

That we would see from the papers that the "Telegrafo" was detained at the request of Mr. Victoria, the Dominican Vice-Consul at the Danish Colony of St. Thomas, who undertook, on behalf of his Government, the responsibility of all expenses that might be incurred, The vessel was released by the Colonial Court, and an appeal (made at the instances of Mr. Victoria, and by advice of the Law Officers of the Crown) was rejected.

That an action was then brought against the Colonial officers for losses caused by the detention of the vessel, and damages were awarded to the amount of 18,000*l.*, which had, however, since been compromised for 11,500*l.*

That Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the Lords of the Treasury, who had had the matter under their consideration, held that the Dominican Government was bound to repay those expenses, on the ground that Mr. Victoria was an officer of the Dominican Government; that he gave a very wide guarantee, after having had time to communicate with his Government, which they therefore presumed he did; and that the guarantee was not disavowed by the Dominician Government until a claim for repayment was made nearly two years afterwards.

That on the other hand we would see, from Colonel Mendez's letter of the 6th instant, that the Dominician Government denied their liability on the ground that Mr. Victoria, being only a Vice-Consul, and that at a port not in British territory, was not competent to give such a guarantee as he did, which they did not, therefore, considered binding on them.

That in these circumstances he (Lord Enfield) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government was justified in holding the Dominican Government liable for the expenses in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Victoria informed his Government of the guarantee given on the 26th July, 1869, by him in the name of his Government is almost certain. If any doubt could remain on that point, the argument used by Colonel Mendez in his note of the 6th November, 1872, would remove that doubt, since he there says that to repudiate Mr. Victoria would have been to acknowledge his agency. Mr. Gautier nowhere denies that his Government was aware of the several steps taken by Mr. Victoria, and the appeal to the Privy Council is expressly demanded by Mr. Gautier.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the Dominican Government was at the time aware of the guarantee given by Mr. Victoria, was bound at once to inform Her Majesty's Government that it did not endorse that guarantee, and not having done so must be considered to have ratified the acts of Mr. Victoria in giving the guarantee.

That Her Majesty's Government consequently is justified in holding the Dominican Government liable for the expenses.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 1.)

Temple, February 1, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rome, inclosing a correspondence received from Mr. Dennis, Her Majesty's Consul at Palermo, respecting the case of the cutter "Lara," of Malta, which was captured by the Italian Custom-house officers off the coast of Palermo on the 27th October last on a charge of attempting to smuggle tobacco into

Sicily, the capture being effected whilst the "Lara" was in the act of transferring a portion of the tobacco into small fishing-boats. That it appears that the owner, Signor Vincenzo Stivala, of Malta, in protesting against the capture of his vessel, does so, not on the ground of the charge being an unjust one, but that the distance at which the capture took place from the shore renders this proceeding illegal.

That the evidence upon this latter point is, as I should perceive, contradictory, and Mr. Dennis has applied for instructions for his guidance, not only in the present case, but in view of any future question of a similar nature arising; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations I might have to offer upon the case, and with my opinion as to the instructions with which it may be proper to furnish Mr. Dennis.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the fiscal zone of every State is in practice more extensive than its proper territorial waters, and under the comity of nations, a State is allowed to enforce its municipal laws for the protection of its revenue against foreign vessels which have not yet come within the limits of its maritime jurisdiction, provided such vessels are approaching its coasts with an intention to carry on illicit trade.

In the present case it is admitted that the Maltese vessel had approached the coast of Sicily with the intention of smuggling, and was, when seized, in the act of transhipping its cargo into boats for that purpose.

There does not appear to me to be anything unreasonable in the distance from its coast at which the Italian Government has claimed to make seizure of the "Lara," and as Her Majesty's Government claims in cases of a like nature, namely, in cases of vessels, of which more than half the crew are British subjects—and I would remark that more than half the crew of the "'Lara" are stated to have been Italian subjects—to make seizures at a distance of 4 leagues from its coasts, and in certain localities at a distance of 8 leagues (16 and 17 Vict., cap. 107), Her Majesty's Government cannot properly object, in my opinion, to the Italian Government exercising, on principles of reciprocity, a like power over British vessels which are approaching its coasts for the purpose of smuggling under similar circumstances.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received March 9.)

My Lord, Temple, March 8, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Benjamin d'Oyly Reynolds, stating the circumstances under which, having contracted a marriage with an Italian lady, she ultimately deserted him, and succeeded, after certain preliminary proceedings, in obtaining a Decree from the President of the Civil and Correctional Tribunal at Florence ordering a provisional separation, and the payment to her by her husband of a certain monthly allowance until the cause should be decided by public trial.

That Mr. Reynolds, as I should observe, denies the competence of the Italian Tribunals to intervene in this matter, as he is a British subject, and affirms that his wife has also become a British subject by the fact of her marriage, and he appeals for the protection of Her Majesty's Government in the matter. Mr. Hammond was, therefore, pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Reynolds' application, or the steps, if any, which Her Majesty's Government can take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Reynolds should be informed that the circumstance of his being a British subject would not be a bar to proceedings against him, on the part of his wife, before the Civil and Correctional Tribunal of Florence, if that Court is authorized by Italian law to exercise jurisdiction in matrimonial matters, and that he must seek legal advice to defend the action which his wife has brought against him. That your Lordship cannot by reason of his being a British subject intervene diplomatically on his behalf to stay the proceedings before a Tribunal the competency of which is not affected by the national character of the parties, if they are resident within its jurisdiction.

My Lord, Temple, May , 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rome, inclosing a correspondence respecting a complaint advanced by Dr. de Meschin, a British subject, against the Italian Government on account of his arrest and confinement in the guard-house on a charge of attempting to blow out some lights forming part of an illumination in Rome on the occasion of the opening of the Italian Parliament on the 27th November last, Dr. Meschin's complaint being accompained by a claim for compensation to the extent of 5,000*l*.

Mr. Hammond also stated that he was to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it is one which calls for the intervention of Her Majesty's Legation at Rome, and, if so, what instructions should be addressed to Sir A. Paget upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Mr. Hammond's letter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Dr. de Meschin admits that, however innocent his intentions may have been, he did in fact blow upon some of the lights which formed part of the illumination in Rome in celebration of a great political event in that capital.

He also admits that, although warned (he denies having been arrested in the first instance as stated by the Pompieri), he repeated the same or a similar experiment upon a still glowing wick.

It is obvious on his own showing that, if Mr. de Meschin had attended to the warning, or temporary arrest, he would have suffered little or no annoyance. Instead of so acting, by his conduct he persisted, and naturally excited the suspicions of the Pompieri.

The least consideration would have led Mr. de Meschin to know that on such an occasion there would be persons willing to follow and go beyond his example, and that by his conduct he was endangering the public peace.

We think, therefore, that the arrest of Mr. de Meschin was justifiable.

Once in the guard-house, Mr. Meschin had no reason to expect, and, in our opinion, had no right to complain that he did not receive, treatment better or other than the persons there confined.

And upon the whole facts, we are of opinion that the case is not one which calls for the intervention of Her Majesty's Legation at Rome.

on the vessel's manifest; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the note of the Italian Minister (27th April, 1872)—

1. That the master of the steamer "Emperor'" has once before contravened the Customs Regulations at Bari with respect to some smoking tobacco.

2. That the cigars in question were found amongst the goods destined for Bari.

3. That the master did not produce his report, in which document alone the goods were named, till after the goods had been discovered by the Customs authorities.

4. That the master has taken some steps at Bari towards bringing the case on for trial before the local Tribunals.

The single explanation of the omission of the cigars from the ship's manifest does not appear to us a sufficient ground for your Lordship's interference whilst the facts stated in the Italian Minister's note are unanswered.

We are therefore of opinion that your Lordship should direct inquiries to be made whether Messrs. Nickols and Colven can offer any and what explanation of the alleged acts and conduct of Captain Leighton.

Temple, August 3, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that Lord Odo Russell, in November 1858, being employed as Diplomatic Attaché to Her Majesty's Mission at the Court of Tuscany, was stationed at Rome with a Commission as Secretary of Legation.

That after the political events in the north of Italy which occurred subsequently to that date, he was named Attaché to Her Majesty's Legation at Naples on the 25th March, 1860, through still required to reside at Rome.

That on the withdrawal of Her Majesty's Legation from Naples, in consequence of further political events, his appointment as Attaché to that Legation came to an end, but he was directed to continue to reside at Rome, as we would see by the accompanying instruction to him, and he did so until the 21st July continuously, with the exception of short periods during which he was on leave of absence.

That during the sitting of the Conclave Lord Odo Russell, being hardly pressed for assistance, obtained your Lordship's leave to summon to Rome Mr. Jervoise, a clerk in the Foreign Office, who was temporarily attached to Her Majesty's Legation at Florence, and on Lord Odo Russell's final departure from Rome Mr. Jervoise, on his recommendation, was authorized to continue to reside for the present at Rome, and had in fact resided there ever since that time, except when on leave of absence, as he now is.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the correspondence on this subject.

The Pontifical territories, with the exception of the quarter of Rome in which the Vatican is situated, had been held by the King of Italy as Sovereign since September 1870, but the Pope had refused to recognize that state of things, or to communicate in any way with the Representatives of Foreign Powers accredited to the King of Italy.

That Mr. Jervoise, through not invested with any diplomatic character, not holding any Commission accrediting him to the Papal Government, had, like Lord Odo Russell, who was in the same position in both respects, been received occasionally by the Pope, and more frequently by Cardinal Antonelli, the Papal Secretary of State, and had learned their views on matters of general political interest which he had reported to Her Majesty's Government, direct and not through Her Majesty's Minister accredited to the King of Italy, and had generally, as far as he was able, kept Her Majesty's Government informed of the views of the Pope as regarded his Holiness' position, and of the relations between his Holiness and Foreign Powers.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the present position of Mr. Jervoise at Rome, as thus described, into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion as to whether there is anything illegal in it.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to add, for our more complete information, a memorandum respecting intercourse with Rome which was prepared some years ago, before the passing of the Act of 1848, and also a copy of the Act itself.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the present position of Mr. Jervoise at Rome into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there is nothing illegal in the employment of Mr. Jervoise in his present position at Rome.

Temple, August 9, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 9th ultimo, relative to the seizure by the Custom-house authorities at Bari of a consignment of tobacco on board the steam-ship "Emperor," and the infliction of a fine in consequence of the tobacco not having been entered in the ship's manifest, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Nickols and Colven, containing farther explanations as to the circumstances of the case; and he was to request us to take the same into consideration (with previous papers inclosed), and inform your Lordship whether there was anything in Messrs. Nickols and Colven's letter to alter the opinion already expressed by us in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the letter of Messrs. Nickols and Colven to your Lordship of the 29th July shows, in our opinion, a very slight case indeed for your Lordship's interference on their behalf.

But your Lordship may direct those gentlemen that if they will, as suggested by Signor Peiroleri in his note to Sir A. Paget of the 27th April, present a formal demand in the sense of Article 26 of the Italian Customs Regulations, declaring that they submit without any reserve to the decision of the Royal Administration, your Lordship will direct Sir A. Paget to again submit their case to the favourable consideration of the Italian Government.

Messrs. Nickols and Colven should, if your Lordship thinks fit to adopt this course, be informed that if they make the submission, the Ministry of Finance in Italy can only apply the fine within its maximum and minimum limits, yet some lenity may be shown, but not to the extent of altogether remitting the fine, it being reserved to the Royal prerogative to release a fine inflicted under legal sentence.

My Lord,

And that we would perceive Mr. Denman requested Her Majesty's Government to interfere on behalf of the claimants; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would have the goodness to inform your Lordship whether we considered the claim in question well founded, and whether we would advise your Lordship to press the Italian Government for a decision in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That there is no evidence upon which we can advise your Lordship that the claim of Mrs. and Miss Clark is well or at all founded.

We would advise your Lordship, therefore, not to press the Italian Government for a decision.

And we would suggest that Mr. Denman be informed that your Lordship cannot interfere further, and be referred to your letter to him of the 5th instant.

My Lord,

That the Italian Chargé d'Affaires complained that that proceeding was not justified by the facts of the case, which could only have warranted the levying of the ordinary dues for salvage, &c., since the vessel, so far from being derelict, had not been deserted by her crew, except temporarily, for the purpose of obtaining assistance, and the crew and one of the owners of the vessel were actually on board at the time the Marshal of the Court took possession.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Italian Minister on that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship, in answer to the Italian Minister, may properly tell him that you have directed inquiries to be made into the facts connected with the brig "L'Antonio" in reference to the proceedings against her and her cargo at Gibraltar.

That you inclose, for his Excellency's information, a copy of the Report of the Queen's Proctor at Gibraltar in answer to the inquiries so directed by you.

Temple, March 26, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Afaires in Japan, forwarding correspondence respecting a claim put forward by Messrs. Howell and Co., of Hakodate, to be compensated by the Japanese Government for the cost of 40 tons of coals which were requisitioned from them by the insurgents who held possession of the port in June 1869.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose a memorandum on the case which had been furnished by Sir H. Parkes, and stated that he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in regard to the claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there are some difficulties attending this claim which arise out of the peculiar facts connected with it. There can be no doubt of the soundness of the general proposition that a Government succeeding to another de facto Government is answerable for the acts and contracts of its predecessor. It is also well settled that, in respect to actual damage occasioned to property in the restoration by force of arms of the authority of a Government, the subjects of foreign friendly Powers are in no better position as to compensation than the subjects of the Government itself which has employed successfully force of arms to restore its authority; but we are not prepared to say that the claim of Messrs. Howell comes fairly within the scope of either of these propositions. The coal does not seem to us to have been supplied as a matter of contract with a de facto Government; still less was its supply a damage inflicted by the arms of the successful Government in restoring its authority; it seems to have been rather, substantially speaking, an act of plunder by the rebellious or insurrectionary forces; and the absence of all the members of the firm from the place, and the leaving the whole property in charge of a Japanese clerk, who must have been known by the English firm to be wholly incapable of resisting any exactions which yet were not at all unlikely to be made, in the turbulent state of the country, appear to us to be circumstances which greatly, perhaps mainly, brought about the loss which Messrs. Howell have sustained. The delay in preferring the claim originally, the subsequent long delay in serving it after they had heard the first answer of the Japanese Government from Consul Eusden, are also matters which are not explained, and which may fairly influence your Lordship in the course which you may think fit to take.

We cannot advise that it is a case in which it would be right, with a Power like Japan, to insist peremptorily on the payment of the contract price of the coals by that Government to Messrs. Howell. At the same time, it is a case to be pressed upon the equitable consideration of that Government if your Lordship should think fit; but further than this we are not prepared to advise.

Temple, July 11, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Japan, forwarding correspondence on the subject of a claim made by the firm of Messrs. Jardine and Matheson to the sale of a steamer belonging to that firm.

That the case was brought by Mr. Adams before the highest judicial authorities of Japan, but after their decision was given, he declined to urge the claim any further on the Japanese Government, and he has now, at the request of the firm, referred the matter to Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Hammond further stated that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion on the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Jardine and Co. appear not to have used so much care as they should in this matter. They acted upon the representation of Amano that he was the Governor of the Mercantile Department of Kawagoyé without making inquiry as to the truth of that representation on the part of a stranger.

If they required, which is doubtful, any seal as a proof of authority or as a guarantee, they seem to have been willing to accept that of some Navigation Company and not to have required that of the Daisanji.

And they were not, so far as appears, aware that the seal of the Daisanji had ever been affixed to the contract, which they never saw, till that fact came out upon the trial.

They did not enter upon the contract upon the faith of that seal, which did not and could not mislead them, nor, in our opinion, can it be considered that Amano, who for a time held, unknown to them, the instrument under that seal, was their agent.

Moreover, the case was fully tried before the proper Court of the country, and referred to the highest Tribunal there and the judgment affirmed.

Under these circumstances, we are of opinion that your Lordship must decline to press the claim upon the Japanese Government, which seems to have acted with vigour and in perfect good faith.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating, with reference to our Report of the 26th March, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Japan respecting the claim of Messrs. Howell and Co.; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to Mr. Watson.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are still of opinion that the claim of Messrs. Howell for the price of their coal is one which can only be pressed upon the equitable consideration of the Japanese Government.

The Japanese Minister, who repudiates the claim altogether, does not refer to the delay, or to the other circumstances mentioned in Mr. Consul Eusden's despatch of the 21st June, 1871, to Mr. Adams, that other persons in Hakodadi had successfully resisted the demand made by the insurgents at that port for coals.

And should your Lordship think fit to bring the claim before the Japanese Government, we suggest that the claim should be made only for the price of the coals, and not for interest, since the misfortune of loss of time is one for which, in our opinion, Messrs. Howell should not demand compensation.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches* from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Japan relative to the case of the "Maria Luz," a Peruvian vessel carrying coolie emigrants from Macao, which was driven by stress of weather into Yokohama; and he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the proceedings which took place in regard to that vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we entirely agree with Sir E. Hornby, and are of opinion that the proceedings of the Japanese authorities respecting the Peruvian barque "Maria Luz," and the coolies on board that vessel, were justifiable and right.

My Lord,

Temple, September 20, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Japan, as regarded the power of foreign Representatives to inflict on subjects of their respective countries certain penalties which might be decreed against them by the Japanese Government for endangering the public safety along the line of railway between Yedo and Yokohama.

That he was also to transmit to us a memorandum upon the subject which had been drawn up by Sir Harry Parkes, Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, on leave of absence in this country; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the course pointed out by the memorandum of Sir H. Parkes should be followed.

That the Japanese Government should communicate the proposed regulations to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, who, if he deem them reasonable, should authorize their enforcement, so far as regards Her Majesty's subjects.

Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires might properly be instructed to communicate with the Ministers of other Powers in Japan, so that all the foreign Ministers may adopt a similar course in respect to the subjects of the Powers which they represent. With reference to the farther papers and memorandum of Mr. Hammond, sent to us on the 17th instant, we farther report that we agree with the suggestions and opinion of Mr. Hammond.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

My Lord,

Temple, July 22, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed papers, which had been presented to your Lordship by Mr. Mundella, Mr. Rathbone, and other Members of Parliament, respecting the exactions levied by the Mexican Government upon the firm of Kelly and Co., at Mazatlan; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the facts therein set forth were such as would warrant Her Majesty's Government in demanding redress from the Mexican Government if they were in diplomatic relations with it, which they are not; and, in the non-existence of such relations between England and Mexico, whether the intervention of a friendly Power could properly be had recourse to for representing the case of Messrs. Kelly and Co. to the Mexican Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, assuming the facts stated by Messrs. Kelly and Co. to be true, and that those gentlemen took all the right means in their power with both the irregular de facto Government, and afterwards with the general Government, to prevent or formally protest against the acts which they complain of, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government (which is not in diplomatic relations with Mexico) may properly have recourse to the intervention of a friendly Power to represent the case of Messrs. My Lord,

Temple, November 15, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers upon the subject of an attack lately made by Mexican Indians upon Orange Walk, in British Honduras.

That we would see from the inclosed papers that, in consequence of numerous similar attacks having been made in and before 1857, which the Mexican Government was powerless to prevent, orders were sent in September of that year to the Superintendent of that Settlement, authorizing him to use his discretion as to arresting, on foreign territory, persons shown to his satisfaction to have committed, on British territory, acts of violence amounting by British law to be felonies.

That we would also see from the memorandum of the 31st October, by Mr. Scarlett, late Her Majesty's Minister in Mexico, that not only was the boundary between Mexico and British Honduras unsettled, but the right of Great Britain to any part of British Honduras was denied by the Mexican Government.

That diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Mexico were suspended in 1867, and there was now no Diplomatic or Consular Representative of this country in the Republic.

And that in those circumstances he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what steps it would be desirable for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from the papers that the Mexican authorities are either unable to stop, or are encouraging, or at least allowing, the inroads of the Indian Mexican tribes on Honduras.

But Her Majesty's Government ought not, in our opinion, to act upon either of these assumptions, but to consider the attack made upon Orange Walk as proceeding from a body of plunderers, the subjects of Mexico, and starting from the Mexican territory.

And as Her Majesty's Government has no diplomatic relations with the Mexican Government, the most convenient course would be for a strong remonstrance to be made through some friendly Power, demanding compensation for the past outrages, and insisting upon the Mexican Government taking adequate measures to stop future inroads.

This remonstance might properly be accompanied with a plain intimation that Her Majesty's Government will feel itself justified in using force if necessary to obtain the security and satisfaction demanded.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received March 25.)

My Lord,

Temple, March 25, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which had been received from Her Majesty's Representative at Buenos Ayres

1872

(who is also accredited to the Republic of Uruguay), reporting a conversation with the Italian Special Envoy with regard to the state of affairs in the latter Republic, and to the question of a joint occupation of the custom-house by those foreign Governments who had an interest in the revenue arising therefrom.

That diplomatic relations are at present suspended between England and Uruguay, but the Government of the latter country, who are indebted to that of Her Majesty in the sum of 50,000*l.*, had engaged to satisfy that debt in May next; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, assuming that that public claim was duly met, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in associating with other Powers in landing troops and administering the customs revenue as a security for the payment of private British claims.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed correspondence respecting state of affairs in Uruguay, together with a return respecting occupation of the custom-house on various occasions by British and French troops.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Assuming that the public claim is duly met, we think Her Majesty's Government would not be justified, except as a belligerent operation, in associating with other Powers in landing troops in Monte Video, seizing the custom-house, and administering the customs revenue as a security for the payment of private British claims. We must observe, however, that this is rather a question of policy for the decision of the Cabinet than one to be referred to the Law Officers. The claims referred to are principally claims by British subjects permanently established in Uruguay for compensation for robbery and other acts of ill-treatment by the troops and officers of the Republican Government, and undoubtedly Her Majesty's Government is entitled to go to war with any Government which ill-treats British subjects so situated. It does not clearly appear from the papers sent what were the circumstances under which the custom-house was occupied on the former occasions referred to, but we understand they were temporary occupations for the purpose of protection from plunder during periods of revolution or anarchy at Monte Video. If our view of the nature of these occupations is correct, they were friendly and not hostile acts, being done with a view of protecting the property for its rightful owners, the lawful Government when established. But however this may be, the landing of troops in a foreign country, and the seizure of its public buildings and forcible detention of its public revenues with a view to the redress of the injuries suffered at the hands of its Government by subjects of the attacking Power, is simply an act of war, and can only be justified as such.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received August 29.)

Temple, August 29, 1872.

My Lord,

Mr. Hammond also transmitted to us a memorandum on the same subject which was prepared at the Foreign Office; and stated that he was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether any, and if any what, steps can be taken to preserve to British subjects the protection for their lives and property which was originally granted to them by the Treaty of 1842.

That that Treaty expired in 1854 by notice given by the Uruguay Government, but previous to its cessation the Government then in power officially announced to Her Majesty's Diplomatic Agent resident at Monte Video that, notwithstanding the termination of the Treaty, the Uruguay Government would consider as still in force the guarantees which had been established by that Treaty in favour of British subjects until some new Treaty arrangements should be made.

That a new Treaty was concluded on the 3rd December, 1855, but it was not ratified, and it has therefore never been carried into effect; and that since that date no new Treaty has been concluded.

That your Lordship is therefore desirous of being favoured with our opinion whether a statement of the Committee of the Legislative Body of Monte Video, made in 1857, to the effect that a Declaration given to the British Representative in 1855 was illegal, is sufficient to withdraw from British subjects all the privileges which they have hitherto enjoyed in that country, thereby leaving them without any guarantee whatever for their lives and property.

That the correspondence which passed in 1857 was also transmitted to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the right of British subjects under the expired Treaty of 1842 cannot be supported by declarations of the Uruguayan Government, even if the most favourable view be taken of those declarations.

In the absence, therefore, of any Treaty rights, British subjects in Uruguay are without any guarantee for their lives and property other than that which they derive under the laws of the country and the international law of civilized people.

My Lord, Temple, November 29, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence relative to the relations between this country and the Republic of Uruguay.

That we would observe that shortly after our Report of the 5th December last despatches were received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Monte Video, reporting that, in consequence of the disregard shown to his representations, he had suspended diplomatic relations with Uruguay, and that after full consideration Mr. Macdonell's proceedings were approved by Her Majesty's Government.

That we would also see that the debt due to Great Britain by the Uruguayan Government, which was one of the subjects of complaint, was paid on the 8th May last.

That since the suspension of relations Mr. Macdonell had, in obedience to his instructions, made, through Her Majesty's Consul at Monte Video, friendly unofficial overtures with a view to the re-establishment of relations, but without result.

That the Uruguayan Government had now sent to this country a Special Envoy, Señor Perez Gomar, who had communicated to Lord Enfield a memorandum justifying his Government, and suggesting "a frank admission on the part of the British Government that there is no international base for the foundation" of the claims made by Mr. Macdonell.

That before replying to that memorandum, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the arguments raised by Señor Gomar as to the injuries to British subjects being unavoidable in the disturbed state of the country, and as to British subjects being only entitled to equal treatment with natives.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the arguments raised by Señor Gomar as to injuries to British subjects being unavoidable in the disturbed state of the country are entitled to some consideration; since a person installing himself in a country other than his own must accept the changes and inconveniences to which he may be exposed in that country. But the arguments must not be pressed so far as Señor Gomar may properly wish to carry them; and in cases where positive maltreatment has been received by, or ordinary justice been denied to, a British subject, Her Majesty's Government may properly decline to accept the disturbed state of Uruguay as a reason for refusing to enforce the right of such British subject to the protection of Great Britain.

Subject to similar exceptions, and to an exemption from military service, we are of opinion that British subjects in Uruguay are only entitled to equal treatment with the natives.

That we would perceive, from the letters from the Postmaster-General of the 31st October last and 4th instant, that instructions had been sent to the Postal Agent at Monte Video which it was hoped might remove the difficulties created by the Uruguayan Government; but he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, in any fresh attempt to interfere with the sailing of the British mail-packets, the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships would be justified in taking the course which Captain Strode was prepared to adopt.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 26.)

My Lord, Temple, February 24, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 16th instant, stating that, with reference to the question of the protection of persons in Morocco born of Spanish parents in Gibraltar, which formed the subject of my Report of the 8th December, he was directed to transmit to me herewith a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Morocco asking for instructions as to whether the British Consul should afford protection to persons coming within the following categories, viz.:—

1. To subjects of Spain and other foreign Powers serving on board British vessels in the port of Tangier.
2. To persons residing in Morocco of Moorish parents, but born in Great Britain or Gibraltar.
3. To persons born in British possessions of parents subjects of foreign Powers other than Spain.

The papers bearing on the question reported on by me on the 8th December, and also the Report of the Naturalization Commission, were also inclosed; and Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take these further questions into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be given to Sir John Hay's inquiries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Consul may, in my opinion, properly afford protection to persons coming within the first category, namely, subjects of Spain and other foreign Powers serving on board of British vessels in the port of Tangier.

With regard to the second category of persons, namely, natural-born British subjects of Moorish race, Her Majesty's Consul may, in my opinion, properly afford protection to them also. I apprehend such to have been the practice hitherto.

With regard to the third category of persons, I see no reason why Her Majesty's Consul may not also properly afford protection to such persons, as being natural-born subjects of the British Crown.

My Lord, Temple, March 22, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration, the papers noted in margin.

We would perceive from them that Sir J. D. Hay, in November last, asked for instructions respecting the nationality of certain persons at Tangier, born at Gibraltar of Spanish parents.

That his (Sir J. D. Hay's) despatch was referred to the Queen's Advocate, who reported on the 8th December that such persons were amenable, when in Morocco, to the jurisdiction of the Spanish Consul.

That on the 10th January, Sir J. D. Hay asked for further instructions as to the protection of natural-born British subjects of foreign origin; this despatch had also been referred to the Queen's Advocate, who reported on the 24th ultimo that persons born in British possessions, of parents subjects of foreign Powers other than Spain, might receive British protection as natural-born subjects of the British Crown; and that even persons born in Great Britain or Gibraltar of Moorish parents might receive protection in Morocco as natural-born British subjects.

It appeared to your Lordship that, unless some Treaty engagements existed of which your Lordship was not aware, by which natural-born subjects of Spanish origin forfeited their nationality whilst living in Morocco, and acquired the nationality of their parents, and that any instructions founded on the opinions above quoted would be inconsistent; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was therefore to request that we would take the correspondence into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the important questions raised by Sir J. D. Hay.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it does not appear to us that the two Reports of the Queen's Advocate, bearing date respectively the 8th December, 1871, and 24th February, 1872, are at all inconsistent, and it does appear to us that they are both correct.

This country has hitherto refused to assimilate its law of allegiance to the law of many other countries (including, as we understand, the law of Spain) by which origin and not the place of birth is made the test of allegiance. It often happens, therefore, that persons born subjects of this country are, by the laws of other countries, subjects of those other countries, and are bound to a double allegiance. It has not, we believe, been heretofore the practice of this country to assert, as against other countries claiming their subjects by virtue of origin, the English law of birth; although, as against all other countries but the country of origin we should, as of course, protect such natural-born subjects of the Queen.

As we understand the Queen's Advocate's Report of the 8th December, 1871, he was asked whether the English Consul should assert the English law of birth in the case of Spaniards against the Spanish Consul claiming jurisdiction over Spaniards as subjects of Spain by virtue of origin. And we think his answer was correct.

In his Report of the 24th February, 1872, he was asked, as we understand, whether the English Consul should afford protection to the various classes of persons mentioned in his Report, as against Powers such as Morocco, or countries other than those in which the law of allegiance by reason of origin prevails, and we think that his Report so understood was perfectly correct and in no way inconsistent with his former one.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, and inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, reporting the particulars of an attack made upon Mr. Broome, a British subject, by three Moors in the district of Haha Haha; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to demand compensation from the Moorish Government for the outrage to which Mr. Broome had been subjected.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We think it would not be proper for Her Majesty's Government to demand compensation from the Moorish Government for the outrage to which Mr. Broome has been subjected.

It appears that Mr. Broome voluntarily went on a pleasure excursion into a district which he knew to be in a state of disturbance, if not of actual insurrection, and having neglected every reasonable precaution, was then assaulted and stabbed. We think Her Majesty's Government ought not, under these circumstances, do more than require the Moorish authorities to use their best endeavours to bring the offenders to justice.

My Lord, Temple, March 26, 1872.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the former despatch from Sir John D. Hay on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the further despatch into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is not anything in the further despatch of Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier which would induce us to alter our opinion as expressed in our Report of the 23rd instant.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 24th January last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the former papers, a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, inclosing a copy of a note from the United States' Government upon the subject of the jurisdiction claimed by their Consul-General at Tangier over Mr. Scott, his interpreter, who is a British subject; and he, Lord Enfield, was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to make upon the position advanced by Mr. Fish.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no ground whatever for altering our opinion previously stated on this matter, but whether it is worth while to press the British claim to jurisdiction over Mr. Scott under the circumstances must be for your Lordship, as a question of policy, to decide.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating, with reference to our Report of the 23rd September last, he was to transmit, by direction of your Lordship, a despatch from Vice-Consul Stokes of the 15th ultimo, together with former papers relating to the jurisdiction claimed by the Supreme Court of Gibraltar over British subjects in Morocco;* and that he was to request us to take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which it would be proper to issue to Mr. Vice-Consul Stokes in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the instructions which we think it will be proper to issue to Mr. Vice-Consul Stokes be, that in the event of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar deciding in favour of that Court's jurisdiction over British subjects in Morocco, Mr. Stokes should appeal, and if the Judge of that Court decide that the jurisdiction cannot be sustained, Mr. Stokes need not move farther in the matter.

My Lord, Temple, February 3, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 15th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 13th November last, he was directed to transmit to us a further letter from Messrs. Swanzy, respecting their claim, together with the documents to which it refers, which were in the hands of the Netherland Government when the other papers in the case were referred to us; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether they contain such evidence of the complicity of the Dutch soldiers in the destruction and plunder of Messrs. Swanzy's property as to justify Her Majesty's Government in supporting their claim against the Netherland Government for compensation. The former papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is not, in our opinion, sufficient evidence at present to establish conclusively the charge that the soldiers of the Dutch garrison at Dixcove took part in the attack upon and the plunder of Mr. Swanzy's stores. There is, however, a primâ facie case made out, as there is evidence that portions of the plunder were in the possession of some of the Dutch soldiers immediately after the attack, and the presumption in an ordinary case would be that they obtained those portions by robbery, but they might possibly have become possessed of such plunder in various other ways, as by gift or barter from the parties who actually plundered the stores, or by forcible extortion or by some other means from the actual plunderers, which would not render the Dutch Government liable to make compensation to Messrs. Swanzy. We must abserve that Mr. Swanzy is in error in stating in the paper marked "No. 1" that "Captain Alvarez has not denied the statements on the other side to the effect that he threatened to call in the Bosswa people," as Baron Geriche, in his letter of the 10th November, 1871, to Admiral Harris, states distinctly that Captain Alvarez has declared on oath that he never made such a threat. Under these circumstances, although we cannot advise your Lordship that there is such conclusive evidence of the complicity of the Dutch soldiers in the plunder of Messrs. Swanzy's property as would justify Her Majesty's Government in maintaining a claim on their part against the Netherland Government for compensation, we think there is enough evidence to entitle your Lordship to call upon the Dutch Government for an answer, it being incumbent, in our opinion, for that Government to explain away, if it can, the primâ facie case made out against it.

My Lord, Temple, March 7, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed letter from Mr. Mackintosh, Her Majesty's Acting Consul at Surinam, stating that he has been ordered to produce before the Supreme Court at Edinburgh all correspondence between the Foreign Office and himself relative to his leave of absence since his arrival in this country, and requesting instructions as to the course which he should adopt under this order.

That the correspondence is in itself unimportant, and no inconvenience would be likely to arise from its production; as, however, a compliance with this order might possibly establish a dangerous precedent, Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the right of a Court of Justice to call for official correspondence between a Secretary of State and one of his officers, and also as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Mackintosh in the present instance.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the communications in question, having been made, as I presume, in the discharge of public duty, are, in my opinion, confidential and privileged communications, which the interests of the State will not permit to be revealed, and if the disclosure of the contents of the letters would be, in your Lordship's opinion, inexpedient on public considerations, the proper steps should be taken to bring that fact to the knowledge of the Scotch Court.

My Lord, Temple, May 28, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating, with reference to our Report of the 3rd February last, respecting Messrs. Swanzy's claim against the Netherland Government for the destruction of their property at Dixcove, he was directed by your Lordship to refer to us, together with former papers, the accompanying further correspondence upon the subject of that claim; and he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the case as it now stands, and whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in lending their official support to the claim notwithstanding the adverse view taken by the Netherland Government, as stated in Admiral Harris' despatch No. 75 of the 10th instant.

We are also in receipt of your Lordship's memorandum of the 22nd instant, inclosing two letters from Messrs. Swanzy omitted from previous correspondence.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That having regard to the evidence adduced by the the Netherland Government, we are of opinion that there is not sufficient affirmative evidence to show—

1. That the Dutch soldiers in the fort, or those who came up to Dixcove after the 13th, joined in the pillage and plunder of the premises or goods of Messrs. Swanzy.

2. Or that any portion of the property of Messrs. Swanzy was taken into the fort and there disposed of.

3. That the evidence of some of the persons whose depositions have been obtained by Messrs. Swanzy in respect to what is alleged to have taken place at Elmina is shown to be untrue by the facts stated in Baron Geriche's note to Admiral Harris of the 8th May instant.

We are therefore of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in lending an official support to the claims of Messrs. Swanzy.

My Lord, Temple, July 1, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 15th June ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 28th May last on the subject of the claim of Messrs. Swanzy on the Netherland Government for the destruction of their property at Dixcove, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith some further correspondence with those gentlemen, and to request that we would again take the whole case into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the statements now advanced by Messrs. Swanzy, and whether they in any way modify the opinion expressed in our Report of the 28th May that Her Majesty's Government ought not to extend their official support to their claim.

Lord Enfield was pleased also to say that the former papers were annexed, and that your Lordship would be glad to receive our final opinion upon the whole case, with the reasons upon which it is based fully stated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That, taking into our consideration all the documents which are now before us (with the exception of the affidavit of Kwarter Kwassie, inclosed in Messrs. Swanzy's letter to your Lordship dated the 11th June, 1872), we see no reason which would induce us to alter the opinion expressed in the Report of the 28th May last.

On the other hand, the affidavit of Kwarter Kwassie is so definite in its dates, so detailed in its facts, and so straightforward in its recital, that we think that Messrs. Swanzy are entitled to expect Her Majesty's Government to lay that affidavit, as confirmatory of the previous evidence, before the Government of the Netherlands, and, further, that should the Government of the Netherlands be unable satisfactorily to answer and refute the facts sworn to in the affidavit of Kwarter Kwassie, Her Majesty's Government should officially support Messrs. Swanzy in their claim against the Government of the Netherlands.

My Lord, Temple, October 30, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 25th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that a difficulty had arisen in carrying out the provisions of a Treaty concluded in 1870 with Holland, permitting the emigration of labourers from British India to Surinam. That Treaty, which was concluded with the approval of the India Office, contained a stipulation that the Labour Regulations of Surinam of 1861 should serve as a basis for the contracts with the emigrants; but the Governor-General of India objected, on the grounds of the discretion given to him by clauses 23 and 24 of the Indian Emigration Act of 1871, to sanction those Regulations as the basis of the contracts, or to permit the emigration, unless the Netherland Government would adopt the Labour Regulations framed by Her Majesty's Government for British Colonies in respect to days and hours of labour and maximum wage.

And that as the season for emigration was passing away, and the Netherland Government were earnestly and repeatedly pressing for the due execution of the Treaty, he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to request our immediate opinion as to our obligations under the Treaty, and how far they were affected by the provisions of the Indian Act to which he had referred.

The following papers were annexed: copies of the Indian Act, Treaty of 1870, and telegram from Viceroy of India.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government is bound by the stipulations under the Convention with the Netherlands so long as the Treaty exists, and that those stipulations cannot be affected by the provisions of the Indian Act.

If, however, the Governor-General in Council has reason to believe that proper measures in Surinam have not been taken for the protection of the emigrants during their residence in that Colony, he may, notwithstanding the Article XII of the Convention (which provides that the Labour Regulations of Surinam of 1861 shall serve as a basis for the contracts which shall be made with the immigrants), suspend the emigration to the Colony of Surinam.

This power of suspension given by the Convention does not extend, in our opinion, to enable the Governor-General to acquire a diminution of the days and hours of labour below the maximum fixed by Article X of the Convention.

My Lord, Temple, November 2, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, in his letter marked "Most Pressing" of the 25th instant, he submitted to us certain questions connected with the objections raised by the Indian Government to carrying out the provisions of the Treaty recently concluded between this country and the Netherlands respecting emigration to Surinam.

And that your Lordship hoped shortly to receive an answer to those questions, but he (Viscount Enfield) was meanwhile directed by your Lordship also to request our opinion as to whether the Netherland Labour Regulations, upon which the difficulty was raised (copy inclosed), should be required to contain all the provisions contained in the Treaty, or whether it should only be requisite that they should be so framed as not to conflict with the Treaty. If the latter should, in our opinion, be the correct position, he (Viscount Enfield) was to inquire whether we considered that they did or did not fulfil the Treaty stipulations.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the Netherland Regulations need not contain all the provisions contained in the Treaty or Convention, and that it is sufficient if they are so framed as not to conflict with the Treaty.

We are farther of opinion that sections 1 and 2 of Chapter XVII of the Netherland Regulations do not fulfil the Treaty stipulations, but the differences are not substantial, and it is for your Lordship to consider whether they are sufficient to be insisted upon.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 13.)

My Lord,
Temple, February 12, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, complaining that the Colombian Government have failed to pay the interest and sinking fund due on the 1st January last on certain bonds for 70,000*l.* issued on the 31st December, 1868, in satisfaction of a portion of their claims on that Government. That the previous papers in this case, which were also inclosed, would show the nature of the claims in payment of which these bonds were issued, and the amount of support given, by my advice, to those claims by Her Majesty's Government. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a despatch, dated the 12th June last, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogatá, together with the answer thereto, upon the subject of the financial difficulties of the Colombian Government, and the proposal made by that Government to diminish temporarily the amount to be paid to foreign bondholders; and he was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Robinson and Fleming.

That the accompanying letters addressed to the Council of Foreign Bondholders explain the general views of Her Majesty's Government in regard to British holders of foreign bonds.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That under the unforeseen embarrassment of the Colombian Treasury from circumstances beyond its control, and which relieve it from the imputation of bad faith, the proposal of the President should, in my opinion, be accepted by the bondholders, being reasonable in itself, and the best arrangement in the interest of the bondholders which the unforeseen suspension of a portion of the annual income of the State admits of. Your Lordship may, I think, properly decline to instruct Mr. Bunch to put pressure on the Colombian Government in any other sense than to secure that the proposal of the President be carried into effect at the proper time.

My Lord,
Temple, March 14, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 10th October last upon the subject of the claim of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming on the Colombian Government arising out of the sale and subsequent loss of the vessel "Cuaspad," he was directed to transmit to me further correspondence upon the same subject; and he was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, together with the former papers, which were also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should now be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the view put forth by Señor Arosemana as to the proper forum in which the respective actions should be brought, is, in my opinion, correct.

But there is nothing to prevent the Colombian Government from seeking a remedy for breach of contract against Messrs. Robinson and Fleming by an action in a British Court without a previous suit in a Colombian Court, as the question at issue upon such action would be the interpretation of the contract, which, being a British contract, must properly be interpreted according to British law.

No. 173.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 16.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 15, 1872.

That we would see from the papers that the claims in question arose first out of a contract for a loan which Messrs. Robinson and Fleming alleged to have been improperly cancelled by the Colombian Congress, and, secondly, out of the sale to that Government of three steamers, the "Colombia," "Bolivar," and "Cuaspad."

That on the advice of Her Majesty's Advocate-General, Lord Stanley instructed Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, on the 1st January, 1868, to give his official support to the agent of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, without, however, pledging Her Majesty's Government to the details of the account. Through Mr. Bunch's exertions the agent succeeded in obtaining a satisfactory settlement so far as the "Colombia" and "Bolivar" were concerned, 15,350*l.* being paid to the agent, and bonds to the amount of 70,000*l.* being given in payment for the rest, as security for which bonds 7½ per cent. of the receipts of three custom-houses were set apart.

That the claim on account of the cancellation of the loan appeared to have been settled without the assistance of Her Majesty's Government, as Messrs. Robinson and Fleming stated in their letter of the 27th August, 1868, that they had proposed to leave it to arbitration, and no mention of it had been made in their subsequent letters.

There remained the claim on account of the "Cuaspad," which vessel was totally lost on her way out, and being only partially insured, Messrs. Robinson and Fleming claimed the balance of her value, which value was originally stated at 7,600*l.*, and subsequently at 7,272*l.* 18*s.* 7*d.*

That the Colombian Government, on the other hand, maintained that the vessel was lost through the fault of the claimants, who were, therefore, liable to the Colombian Government for damage arising therefrom.

That these counter-claims with regard to the "Cuaspad" had given rise, as we perceive, to a long correspondence between the Foreign Office, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, and the Colombian Minister in this country; and that there did not appear to be much prospect of arriving at a settlement of them.

That it now appeared from Messrs. Robinson and Fleming's letter of the 5th instant that the Colombian Government had discontinued payment of the interest and sinking fund of the bonds for 70,000*l.* issued in 1868, as above mentioned, in satisfaction of the "Colombia" and "Bolivar" claims, which bonds had since passed into the hands of the public; that they further proposed to repudiate the bonds themselves, and that they had sought, by means of the Colombian Minister in this country, to serve Messrs. Robinson and Fleming with a citation to appear before the Supreme Court of the States of Colombia, where those gentlemen stated they had not, nor ever had, any domicile.

And that under these circumstances, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we recommend your Lordship not to take any further diplomatic action at present in respect of any of these grounds of complaint of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming.

As to the repudiation of the bonds, this appears altogether unjustifiable, and if a complaint were made on the part of the bondholders we should be prepared to advise your Lordship to protect their interests; but as it appears that Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, having parted with all the bonds, have now no interest in this question and are not authorized to represent the bondholders, we cannot advise any step being taken as to this, their first ground of complaint.

As to their claim in respect of the sale of the vessel "Cuaspad," we find that the Colombian Government bonâ fide contest this claim, and allege that not only is there no liability to pay anything to Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, but that they are liable under their contract to pay a sum of money to the Colombian Government. That Government has offered to allow the claim of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming to be litigated in the proper forum, viz., the Colombian Tribunals, and has insisted that according to international law no diplomatic support should be given to a claim of a foreigner against the Colombian Government disputed on legal grounds, till after a decision of the Tribunal has been given which should be notoriously unjust. We think this contention well founded, and that Messrs. Robinson and Fleming must have recourse to the Colombian Tribunals exactly in the same manner as a foreign or native contractor with Her Majesty's Government who complained that his contract was broken would be referred to our Tribunals.

As regards the third ground of complaint, viz., the service of a citation in England on Messrs. Robinson and Fleming to appear in a civil suit in Colombia, we are not aware that there is any objection to serving civil process in a foreign country; it is, indeed, the almost daily practice of English Courts to order such process to be served out of their jurisdiction, and the domicile of the party served is not a sufficient ground to prevent service; the Court ordering the service determines whether the case is a proper one for service out of the jurisdiction, and the determination depends upon the municipal law of the country in which such Court is situate.

He (Mr. Hammond) was pleased to inclose the correspondence which had taken place since the date of our above-mentioned Report, together with the former papers; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the decision which should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we see no reason for changing the opinion given to your Lordship in our Report of the 15th April last, to the effect that your Lordship should not at present take any diplomatic action on behalf of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming.

My Lord, Temple, August 2, 1872.

and Messrs. Barnett, arising out of the sale of the vessels "Colombia" and "Bolivar," he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Gustavus Siebel, who had represented himself to be a large holder of the bonds in question, and also representative of other holders, praying for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government to obtain from the Colombian Government payment of the said bonds.

And that he was to request that we would take the letter into consideration, together with the former papers (inclosed), and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Gustavus Siebel should be required to give your Lordship some farther information as to the value represented by the bonds which he himself holds, and how and from whom he purchased those bonds, so that your Lordship may have some more precise information of the interest of Mr. Siebel in a contract arising out of the dealings between Messrs. Robinson and Fleming and Messrs. Barnett with the Colombian Government.

In the event of this information being satisfactory to your Lordship, you might then, in our opinion, lend your unofficial support and friendly remonstrance in support of the claim of Mr. Siebel, and those whom he says he represents, with the Colombian Government in the manner marked out in Mr. Hammond's letter to Mr. Hyde Clarke of the 26th April, 1871.

Robinson and Fleming, and now held by Mr. Gustavus Siebel, he (Mr. Hammond), was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Siebel, stating the amount which he (Mr. Siebel) holds of the bonds in question, and explaining how they came into his possession.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take that letter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the information contained therein was sufficient to warrant your Lordship in giving to Mr. Siebel's claim the support indicated in our above-mentioned Report.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this letter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the information given by Mr. Siebel of the manner in which he became the holder of the Colombian bonds in his possession warrants, in our opinion, the support of your Lordship of his claim on the Colombian Government to the extent and in the mode marked out in Mr. Hammond's letter to Mr. Hyde Clarke of the 26th April, 1871, to which we referred in our former Report of the 2nd instant.

your Lordship caused a letter to be addressed to Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, acquainting them with the decision which, upon our advice, your Lordship had come to in regard to their claim upon the Colombian Government arising out of the sale of the "Cuaspad;" and that he (Mr. Hammond) was now to transmit to us a letter which had been received from Messrs. Robinson and Fleming in reply, and he was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Robinson and Fleming.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the former papers for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are still of opinion that your Lordship cannot interfere with the Colombian Government in support of the claims of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming arising out of the sale of the "Cuaspad."

We see no reason why the request of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, that the communication of the opinion of Her Majesty's Government to the Consul-General at Bogotá and to the Colombian Government should be suspended may not be complied with. This is a matter entirely for your Lordship.

We presume your Lordship will direct the practice of the Foreign Office in like cases to be followed in supplying or refusing to supply Messrs. Robinson and Fleming with the case submitted to and the Report of the Law Officers.

My Lord, Temple, September 30, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting the claim of Messrs. Cotesworth and Powell against the Colombian Government.

That we would find in Mr. O'Leary's despatch No. 23 of the 13th July last the draft of a Convention by which the Colombian Government proposed to settle that claim.

And that that draft had, as we would perceive, been referred both to Messrs. Cotesworth and Powell and also to Mr. Bunch, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, who had expressed their approval of the proposed arrangement; and he (Mr. Hammond) was therefore to request us to take the draft Convention into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was any objection to its being signed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the signing of the Convention.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received January 11.)

My Lord, Temple, January 11, 1872.

2. That he (Viscount Enfield) was to inclose the correspondence which had passed with the Colonial Office and Admiralty, and the previous papers, from which we would see that the Governor of New South Wales and Her Majesty's naval officers had been instructed that as long as this newly-constituted Government exercised actual authority they should deal with it as a de facto Government so far as concerned the districts which might acknowledge its rule; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take the whole matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points raised in Mr. March's despatches, and with any other observations we might have to offer, and that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with our Report at our early convenience, as you were anxious to submit the despatches to the Cabinet.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the whole of the correspondence in this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think Her Majesty's Consul should not give any formal recognition at present to any authority at Levuka in lieu of the personal authority of King Thakombau; according to Mr. Consul March's Reports the so-called de facto Government is constituted of British subjects self-appointed, and representing no political community of persons, and in whose hands King Thakombau is a puppet; its members would, under these circumstances, in our opinion, be within the scope of 9 Geo. IV, cap. 83, sec. 4, in respect of any assault committed against British subjects by their direction at Levuka if they should be found within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of New South Wales, but how they are to be brought within that jurisdiction we do not see. The real question at present seems to us to be rather political than legal, and it will be for the Cabinet to determine under what conditions it will recognize the Chief Thakombau as a sovereign Power to whose laws British subjects in Fiji must pay obedience.

We have more than once taken the liberty of calling your Lordship's attention to the crying evils arising from the present state of things in Fiji, evils which, though resulting chiefly from the growth of British interests in those islands, the existing law affords no adequate means of repressing.

My Lord, Temple, June 14, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches from Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands, involving questions in regard to which your Lordship would be glad to have the benefit of our opinion, viz.:—

1. To what extent can British subjects, under the circumstances reported by Mr. March, withdraw themselves from British jurisdiction by assuming the nationality of an uncivilized State whose independence as a State has not yet been acknowledged by Her Majesty's Government.

2. Can British subjects, claiming to have thus divested themselves of their nationality, divest also their hitherto British vessels of their British nationality by placing them under the flag of the State whose nationality they claim.

3. To what extent are British subjects, under the circumstances already adverted to, amenable to British laws for acts committed by them, or by their directions, in contravention of those laws.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to state that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon the above points, together with any observations which we might have to offer as to the instructions which should be given to Her Majesty's Consul in the Fijis in the state of things reported by him in the despatches now laid before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the despatches into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship's questions are to be answered as follows:—

1. That British subjects cannot, by assuming the nationality of an uncivilized State, withdraw themselves from British jurisdiction.

2. That British subjects who claim to have assumed the nationality of an uncivilized State cannot divest vessels owned by them of their British nationality by placing those vessels under the flag whose nationality they claim.

3. That British subjects, under the circumstances referred to in Viscount Enfield's letter, remain amenable to British laws, notwithstanding their attempted adoption of a foreign national character, to the same extent as before their attempted adoption of such national character for acts subsequently committed by them, or by their directions, in contravention of British laws.

4. That your Lordship may properly instruct Mr. Consul March that he should continue to protect British subjects and their interest, taking care not to use force or resort to violent measures in opposition to the de facto authorities of the country.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul in Fiji, inclosing a letter addressed to him by half-castes residing there, making inquiries as to the protection which could be granted to them on account of their British origin, in connection with the establishment of a de facto Government; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take this subject into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what instructions should be addressed to Consul March on the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this subject into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the half-castes described by Mr. Consul March appear to be illegitimate children of Fiji women, and to have been born in Fiji territory, consequently their nationality is not British, and they are not entitled to British protection.

My Lord, Temple, July 18, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our various Reports on the question of the recognition of the de facto Government established in the Fiji Islands, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a letter which your Lordship caused to be addressed to the Colonial Office on the subject, together with a letter which had been received from that Department in reply; and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the question raised by the Colonial Office, namely, whether, beyond the limits of the new State, British subjects, so long as it was not duly recognized, could be accepted as citizens of it, and exempted from British jurisdiction for acts done or engagements entered into with them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, British subjects, beyond the limits of the new State, not yet duly recognized, should not be accepted as citizens of the new State, nor should they be held exempted from British jurisdiction for acts done by them on British territory, or on board ships which ought to be navigated under the British flag.

Nor should they be held exempted from British jurisdiction for engagements entered into with them in cases where the validity or construction of such engagements would properly, and in ordinary course, be triable before a British Tribunal.

My Lord, Temple, August 9, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, adverting to our Reports upon questions relating to the jurisdiction over British subjects in the Fiji Islands, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inquiring whether the recognition by Her Majesty's Government of the Fijian Government as established de facto, would preclude Her Majesty's Government from interfering with the acts and engagements of British subjects within Fiji; and he was to request us to be good enough to enable your Lordship to answer that inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may interfere with the acts and engagements of British subjects within Fiji, and may declare certain acts and engagements to be legal or illegal in the case of British subjects within Fiji.

My Lord, Temple, August 13, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Pacific Islands Protection Act, which had recently passed through Parliament, and of which a copy was inclosed, and referring also to our Reports relative to the status of British subjects in the Fiji Islands who might claim to divest themselves and their vessels of their British character, and to assume the Fijian nationality, he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to request that we would be good enough to draw up and transmit to your Lordship, for publication in the Fiji Islands, the draft of such a notice to British subjects as, in our opinion, the provisions of the Kidnapping Act might seem to require.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have drawn the notice in a short form in preference to setting out at length the provisions of the statute, which would make the notice run to a considerable and needless length.

We would suggest that several copies of the Statute should be sent out for distribution to each of the several public and Consular officers who will have to carry its provisions into effect.

My Lord, Temple, August 29, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us despatches, with their inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul in Fiji, relative to the kidnapping of South Sea Islanders by persons on board vessels named the "Nukulan" and the "Carl." That a copy of the Act of Parliament recently passed on the subject was also inclosed; and that he was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should be taken for the punishment of those engaged in these kidnapping proceedings.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the persons on board the "Nukulan" and the "Carl" cannot be proceeded against or punished under the 35 and 36 Vict., cap. 19, which is not retrospective.

We cannot suggest any steps which can now be taken for the punishment of the offences described by Mr. Consul March and in the papers inclosed in his despatch; and we have before now taken the liberty to point out that such occurrences are too clearly certain to recur as long as the present state of things in the Fiji Islands remains unaltered.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 16th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands, relative to a writ of habeas corpus having been served on him by the Fiji Government;[*] and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion regarding the course Her Majesty's Consul should pursue in future, should legal summonses again be served on him during the present abnormal state of things in Fiji, the Government of which was recognized by Her Majesty's Government as a de facto one only.

And that the Regulations alluded to by Mr. March would be found in the accompanying Blue Book.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands, where a Government de facto exists, must comply with any legal summons which is duly served upon him, and which summons issued from a proper authority. The facts of the case in reference to which the summons may go, are quite distinct from the obligation to obey the summons itself.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to acquaint us that the substance of our Report of the 30th November, upon the claims put forward by Messrs. Percy Burrell and Henry Valpy against the Paraguayan Government was communicated to Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin; Lord Tenterden was pleased to transmit to us the accompanying communication which has been received from those gentlemen in reply, and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin. The previous papers in this case were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship may properly reply to Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin that you must decline to enter upon a discussion of the principles of international law with those gentlemen, but that as far as the practical questions at issue between the Foreign Office and those gentlemen are concerned, your Lordship is of opinion that the intentions of Her Majesty's Government have been already stated in your Lordship's letter of the 9th ultimo, and without any such ambiguity as could give rise to any fair question as to your Lordship's meaning.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 30th November and 2nd January last, upon the subject of the claims of Messrs. Valpy and Burrell upon the Government of Paraguay, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further letter from Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin, requesting to be informed on what grounds the decision of Her Majesty's Government in regard to these claims had been come to.

And he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take this letter into our consideration, together with the former papers (which were inclosed), and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this letter, together with the former papers, into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin should be informed that there is nothing to show that their clients suffered otherwise than in common with all the subjects of President Lopez, and that, in your Lordship's opinion, there would not be any justification for your Lordship interfering diplomatically in their favour, unless they can show that they have been treated in respect of compensation differently from other subjects of Paraguay who have suffered wrongs of the same sort at the hands of the late President of that Republic.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 16th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers relative to a claim brought against the Government of Paraguay by Mr. Robert Sales for the sum of 20,000 dollars, as compensation for the murder of his son during a riot at Asuncion in September 1870; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in supporting Mr. Sales' claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have honour to report—

That it appears from the memorial that the British subject who was murdered, and for the assassination and robbery of whom compensation is claimed against the Paraguay Government, was employed in the office of a public paper called "The Regeneration of Paraguay." We have no information as to the cause or other particulars of the riot, or to show that the Paraguayan Government can be made responsible for its consequences. From the name of the paper, we presume it to have been a political one, and it is not impossible that the person assassinated may have taken in a foreign country a strong or violent part in the politics of that country, and provoked the riot in which he lost his life and property.

We are therefore unable to advise your Lordship, upon the information furnished us, that Her Majesty's Government would be justified in supporting the claim of Mr. Sales.

My Lord, Temple, March 11, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Tehran respecting the levy by Mahomed Khan, late Governor of Yeryd, of 559 krans on some sugar belonging to Messrs. Malcolm, Persian subjects under British protection, resident at Bushire.

A letter from the India Office, to whom this matter has been referred, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Messrs. Malcolm would be entitled to receive the support of Her Majesty's Government in resisting the imposition of the tax in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Malcolm are entitled, in my opinion, to receive the support of Her Majesty's Government in resisting the imposition of the tax in question, and that the Persian authorities cannot now, in my opinion, with any reason, maintain that Messrs. Malcolm are not entitled to the protection of Her Majesty's Government, seeing that they have been treated as British subjects by those authorities, when the import duty of 5 per cent. was levied upon the goods of Messrs. Malcolm, of which they hold the usual custom-house certificates. I understand from the despatch of Her Majesty's Minister at Tehran of the 3rd November 1871, that British subjects pay once for all an import duty of 5 per cent., while natives pay comparatively a very small import duty, but are liable to pay transit duties from which British subjects are exempt. Upon the general question as to the proper interpretation to be given to the Treaty of Paris, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may properly maintain that the Treaty was not intended to prohibit British protection being continued to persons who had prior to the Treaty enjoyed it.

That that suggestion had been made in consequence of the murder of Inspector-General Collins of the Persian Telegraph Staff, but that your Lordship entertained some doubt whether it would be in accordance with international usage that an attack by robbers on a British officer should be dealt with as an international question, for which redress was to be obtained as for a violation of Treaty, and your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon that point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose copies of the Treaties between this country and Persia and between Russia and Persia, and stated that he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the proper course for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That since the Persian Government has given assurances and orders for the settlement of Hafee Moosa Meymenee's claim (telegram, 21st November, 1871; 14th December, 1871; 11th March, 1872; inclosed in Mr. Merivale's letter to Mr. Hammond, dated the 10th instant), your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Tehran to press the immediate settlement of the claim upon the Persian Government, and to use, in so pressing the matter, the strongest arguments which the circumstances of the time of his communicating with the Persian Government will render just. I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to the Law Officers the inclosed papers respecting the disposal of certain moneys intrusted by the Persian Minister of Finance to Mr. Vice-Consul Ongley for investment in English Consols, and that, as it appears that Mr. Ongley intends to leave Persia without rendering any explanation of the matter, his Lordship was to request that they would favour your Lordship with their opinion whether Mr. Thomson would be justified in detaining him, and if not, whether the Persian Government would be empowered to do so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That I have seen the Reports of the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General.

I agree with the Solicitor-General.

Mr. Ongley has not defrauded, and, so far as I gather from the evidence, did not intend to defraud, the Persian subject.

That this Persian subject was also the Minister of Finance seems to me immaterial.

Had there not been a formal error in the power of attorney, and for which error I do not see that Mr. Ongley ought to be made responsible, the whole transaction would have been put right by an act of Mr. Ongley freely done.

I am therefore of opinion that Mr. Ongley ought not to be detained in Persia either by Mr. Thomson or by the Persian Government.

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, October , 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 18th October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me and the Attorney-General the inclosed papers, as marked in the margin,[*] respecting the disposal of certain moneys intrusted by the Persian Minister of Finance to Mr. Vice-Consul Ongley for investment in English Consols, and as it appeared that Mr. Ongley intended to leave Persia without rendering any explanation of the matter, he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Mr. Thomson would be justified in detaining him, and if not, whether the Persian Government would be empowered to do so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that neither Mr. Thomson nor the Persian Government would be justified in detaining Mr. Ongley; not only has he not committed any offence, but, in my opinion, the evidence does not show any intention on his part to act dishonestly. He was requested to invest for the Persian Finance Minister, as a private individual, two separate sums in Consols; he duly invested both in his own name, but it does not appear that he was asked to invest them in the name of the Finance Minister. He never touched either sum, and when about to leave Persia, signed a power of attorney to transfer them to the Minister. This power failed, through no fault of Mr. Ongley's, but because the names of the bankers were not correctly stated. It is not alleged that Mr. Ongley has refused to execute a new power, indeed he does not seem to have been asked to do so. The stock may be secured by distringas without arresting or imprisoning Mr. Ongley, and under these circumstances I am of opinion that to detain him in Persia would be both unnecessary and oppressive, and that not only should Her Majesty's Government refuse to sanction such a course, but if the Persian Government should adopt it, I consider it would be the duty of Her Majesty's Government to demand his immediate release and proper compensation for his illegal detention.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's letter of yesterday's date, accompanied by the documents which I return.

My opinion upon the matter to which these documents relate is the same as that of the Solicitor-General and Dr. Deane. It is, no doubt, unfortunate that the power of attorney granted by Mr. Ongley for the transfer of the sums of stock in question should have proved informal, but the informalities were of a nature from which, in my judgment, no inference unfavourable to the honour and integrity of Mr. Ongley ought to be drawn, considering that the power had to be executed in Persia. The investments themselves appear to have been duly made, according to the directions of the principal for whom Mr. Ongley acted; unless it was inconsistent with those directions that the stocks should be placed in Mr. Ongley's own name. I do not, however, find in the papers before me any statement that the investments were desired or intended to have been made in the name of the Persian owner, and I can well conceive that there might be boná fide reasons of practical convenience against that course; on which supposition, as Mr. Ongley was certainly the trustee of the money while in his hands, before investment, it does not seem to have been more than a legitimate consequence of the trust so reposed in him that he should still act as trustee of the stocks when purchased. The variance between the names "Henry" and "Harry" in the two investments (however it may have arisen), does not appear to me to be in itself important, the description of Mr. Ongley being in other respects proper. I do not find it suggested that Mr. Ongley has at any time, or in any way whatever, attempted to do any act inconsistent, or refused to do any act consistent, with an honest intention throughout to be faithful to the trust and confidence reposed in him.

[*] Mr. Taylour Thomson, September 3; Mr. R. Thomson, October 17.

While this is my opinion as to Mr. Ongley's case, I cannot but suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, whether it might not be expedient to guard, by general instructions to Her Majesty's Diplomatic Agents in foreign countries, and especially in remote countries like Persia, where European habits and ideas do not prevail, against the engagement of such Diplomatic Agents in private trusts or pecuniary transactions not resulting from their public duties, and from which misunderstandings or embarrassments may, in possible circumstances, arise.

I remain, &c.

My Lord, Temple, November 11, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the former papers, a further telegram from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Tehran, reporting the departure of Mr. Ongley from that city, and suggesting that a communication be made to the Bank of England, with a request that the money belonging to the Persian Minister of Finance might be retained until certain documents signed by Mr. Ongley, transferring the money to the real owner, were received; and he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it would be proper for your Lordship to make any recommendation to the Bank of England on the subject.

And that, as bearing upon the confidence which should be placed in Mr. Ongley's proceedings, he was to transmit to us, for information, a copy of a letter from Mr. Hill, one of the executors of the late Mr. Alisen.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That although we see no objection to your Lordship directing a communication to be made to the Bank of England, recommending the Bank not to allow the stock to be dealt with except for the purpose of transferring it to the right owner, the Persian Minister of Finance, yet we think the Bank would probably decline to act upon any such communication, and that the proper course would be for a distringas to be placed on the stock at once, and afterwards, if necessary, a restraining order, and that the Persian Minister should authorize Mr. Thomson or your Lordship to take the proper steps for this purpose.

My Lord, Temple, November 12, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of this day's date, stating that, with reference to our Report of yesterday on the case of Mr. Ongley, he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to state that Messrs. Drummond had brought to the Foreign Office the accompanying draft of a letter prepared by Mr. Freshfield, the Solicitor to the Bank of England, and they (Messrs. Drummond) stated that, if the Foreign Office would address such a letter to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, Mr. Freshfield would advise the Bank to transfer without farther delay into the name of Dost Ali Khan Nizam el Dowlah, of Tehran, the moneys belonging to that gentleman now standing in the names of Henry H. Ongley and Harry H. Ongley.

That Messrs. Drummond had also produced an original letter from Mr. Ongley (copy inclosed) requesting them to make the transfer in question.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship whether we could advise that your Lordship, under the circumstances, should address such a communication to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that your Lordship should not address the communication suggested by Messrs. Freshfield to the Bank of England.

That communication would amount to the giving of an indemnity on the part of your Lordship, and the object in view may be obtained by the simple process of putting a distringas on the stock.

My Lord, Temple, November 18, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 16th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th instant on the case of Mr. Ongley, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observation we might have to make thereon, the inclosed letter from Messrs. Drummond, together with the draft of instructions which your Lordship had sent by telegraph to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Tehran upon that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship's message to Mr. Thomson appears to be perfectly correct, except that we did not advise that the course proposed to your Lordship would be ineffectual, but that it would involve the Foreign Office in a guarantee which we did not think it was the duty of your Lordship to give. It is natural that Messrs. Drummond should desire the matter to be settled by your Lordship's guarantee, but we cannot on that account alter or modify the opinion we have already given your Lordship on that point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord, Temple, December 6, 1872.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 30th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers, as marked in the margin,* relative to allegations brought by a Mr. Swann against Mr. Vines, Her Majesty's Consul at Islay, together with a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Lima, inclosing a Report on the subject, drawn up by Mr. Nugent, British Consul at Arica, who was deputed to inquire into the affair.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to say that your Lordship considered that if implicit confidence was to be placed in the depositions inclosed by Mr. Nugent, Mr. Vines could no longer be permitted to remain in the Consular service; and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether, in view of the course pursued by Mr. Vines in declining to answer the depositions, your Lordship would be justified in at once cancelling Mr. Vines' Commission, or whether it would be only advisable to follow the milder course of accepting his resignation.

Lord Enfield added that, previously to the receipt of Mr. Nugent's Report, Mrs. Vines had been told that her husband would be allowed to resign.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 6.)

My Lord, Temple, February 5, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence with the Indian Office, marked in the margin,† respecting the desire of the Government of India to withdraw certain privileges, the nature of which is therein described, enjoyed by the Portuguese factory at Surat. A memorandum on the subject was also inclosed; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which it would be proper to take in the matter.

* List inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be advisable for your Lordship, if it should be decided by Her Majesty's Government to put an end to the exemption from ordinary customs duties on imports and exports which is allowed to Portuguese traders at Surat under various Indian Acts in consideration of a certain ancient Firman privilege, to be able to justify such a decision on grounds which the Portuguese Government not only cannot impugn as unfriendly, but must admit to be reasonable, namely, by showing that the existing system of trade carried on by Portuguese at Surat under cover of the Firman privilege is an abuse of the original privilege. It does not, however, appear so clearly as I should wish from the papers before me, what was the precise character of the Firman privilege, whether it was granted to the Portuguese Government, or to the Portuguese factory at Surat, or in favour of Portuguese ships trading with the factory.

In the letter of the Governor-General of India in Council of the 27th December, 1871, it is spoken of as "the Firman privilege of the Portuguese Government," and in Inclosure No. 2 reference is made to the amount of profit which the Portuguese Government may be assumed to have derived from the trading privilege hitherto accorded to them at Surat. On the other hand, in Inclosure No. 3, 13th November, 1871, it is stated "that the trade seems at present to be in the hands of a few Parsees, who claim to be Portuguese subjects born at Damaun and domiciled there. The consignments being borne in Portuguese vessels trading between Damaun and Surat, and being bonâ fide the property of the Portuguese subjects, the claim to Firman privilege seems made out." It is further observed that "it may be a question whether the Firman privilege was originally intended to apply to such general trade, or was restricted simply to the actual requirements of the factory." Mr. Green also mentions in his précis that the Firman privilege was granted in 1714 by the Emperor of Delhi to the Portuguese factory. It will be important for your Lordship to have clearer information on this subject. Be this matter, however, as it may, the moderate value of the imports twenty years ago (1851-52) as shown by the Tables of the "Statement A," when compared with the enormously increased value of the imports in 1870-71, will justify, in my opinion, Her Majesty's Government in maintaining that the Indian Government, when it acknowledged the ancient Firman privilege, and confirmed it from time to time by legislative acts, had in view a different character of trade from that which is carried on at present, and which has grown up under the altered circumstances of railway communication with Bombay, and which may be properly regarded as an abuse of the original privilege. I think that the ground on which Her Majesty's Government should take its stand, if it decides to disregard henceforward the Firman privilege, is that the trade which Portuguese subjects are now carrying on at Surat under cover of the Firman privilege is an abuse of the original privilege, whether that privilege as above-mentioned was a privilege of the Portuguese Government, or of the Portuguese factory at Surat, or of Portuguese traders for the benefit of that factory. I am not disposed to regard it as a trading privilege, in which other nations can claim to participate under "the most-favoured-nation clause" of Commercial Treaties. I do not think that the circumstance of the privilege entailing a serious loss of revenue to the Indian Government would alone justify that Government in ceasing to recognize it. The abuse of the privilege is the proper justification, in my opinion, for disregarding it henceforward, whilst the serious loss of revenue resulting to the Indian Government from that abuse is a consideration which may justly have weight with Her Majesty's Government in determining it to assert its right henceforward to disregard the privilege or to curtail it.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 22.)

My Lord,
Temple, July 19, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that the Portuguese Regulations in regard to quarantine had lately been under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, and that your Lordship proposed to address to the Portuguese Minister at this Court a note in the sense of the inclosed letter from the Council Office. Connected with that representation was the case of the British vessel "Jessie," which formed the subject of the accompanying despatch from Sir Charles Murray; and that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the correspondence and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, with more particular reference to the terms in which the representation with regard to the case of that vessel should be made to the Duc de Saldanha.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the correspondence will fully justify your Lordship in making a a very strong representation to the Duc de Saldanha.

The case of the "Jessie" and of the two steam-ships which left Bahia after the "Jessie" had left, but reached Lisbon before the "Jessie," we think furnishes a remarkable instance of the unsoundness of the principle adopted by the Portuguese Government, and we submit that your Lordship might from such an instance, and whilst admitting the mistake of the master of the "Jessie" in saying he left Bahia on the 16th instead of the 14th March, and thus strictly came to Belem without any bill of health, point out to his Excellency the inconvenience and the error of the Portuguese Goverment in issuing quarantine notices to come into effect at a particular date of arrival in a Portuguese port without regard to the date at which a vessel may have left the port infected. And your Lordship may urge upon his Excellency that it is expedient to change this system and adopt the practice of other nations in respect to this head of quarantine regulations.

But your Lordship may further urge that even under the existing quarantine regulations, an act of great injustice has been done in the case of the "Jessie." That vessel, under the VIth Article of the Regulations of the 8th March, 1860, might have been detained eight days. In fact, she was detained, seemingly without reason, from the 14th May to the 20th June, that is, thirty-five days.

Your Lordship, passing from the general subject to the particular case of the "Jessie," can thus press upon his Excellency the right of the owners of the "Jessie" and of the cargo on board her, to adequate compensation from the Portuguese Government for the acts of the sanitary authorities at Belem in detaining the "Jessie" beyond the eight days.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received August 24.)

My Lord,
Temple, August 24, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers relative to the circumstances under which the British steamer "Spindrift," having been wrecked in the month of December 1870 on the Island of St. George, Azores, was plundered by the inhabitants of that island and the full rate of customs duty levied on the damaged goods which had been saved from the wreck in contravention, as it would appear, of the XIVth Article of the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Portugal of the 3rd July, 1842.

That we would perceive from the inclosure to Sir C. Murray's despatch No. 62, Commercial, of the 17th ultimo, that the Portuguese Government denied that there was cause for complaint as regarded the proceedings of the Custom-house authorities at the Azores in that matter; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Sir C. Murray should be instructed to point out to Senhor de Corvo that the questions arising on the duties levied upon the sale of the goods salved out of the "Spindrift" do not depend upon the rules of the Portuguese General Board of Customs, but upon the terms of the Treaty between the Portuguese and British Governments, which are applicable to the case of the "Spindrift," and that if the duties levied were in excess of the duties which ought to have been levied (a fact on which we have no information), the Portuguese Government should be pressed to return the difference which they have received.

In reference to the plunder of the wreck and the steps taken by the authorities at the Azores, Sir C. Murray should represent to Senhor de Corvo that the explanation which is now offered is not satisfactory to Her Majesty's Government, that had immediate measures been adopted, as by domiciliary visits and other modes of inquiry, the greater part, if not all, of the goods stolen would have been recovered, and that Her Majesty's Government relies upon the honour and good-will of the Portuguese Government to at once take the right means for compensating the owners of the goods for the losses which they have incurred through the misconduct of the subjects of Portugal in the Island of St. George.

We are of opinion that your Lordship may further instruct Sir C. Murray to accept as satisfactory the explanation of Senhor de Corvo of the place and manner of sale.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the previous papers for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this further despatch into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we gather from Mr. Acting Consul Read's despatch to Mr. Doria that the duties levied were on a valuation improperly fixed even by Portuguese law.

Assuming such to have been the case, we are of opinion that Sir C. Murray may be instructed to point out this error to the Portuguese Government, in addition to the reasons for making compensation to the owners of the "Spindrift's" cargo, which we suggested in our former Report.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosnres, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon relative to a claim preferred against the Portuguese Government by Messrs. Hickie, Son, and Dugge, and Graham and Co., on account of the condemnation by the Portuguese Customs authorities of a quantity of butter which had been consigned to those firms; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires on that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Customs authorities are to blame for having placed arsenic and butter so close the one to the other, and that Mr. Doria should be instructed to insist upon this negligence of those authorities in the matter and for the same redress as already adopted and urged by him in his note to Senhor Corvo of the 9th October last.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 13.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 13, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th March last, stating that Her Majesty's Government lately received a communication from the Government of the Emperor of Germany, in which, referring to the changes in the legislation of Germany which had taken place since the signature of the Conventions of International Copyright of the 13th May, 1846, and the 14th June, 1855, it was suggested that it might be desirable to conclude a new Treaty, embracing the provisions of those Conventions, and extending to the whole German Empire, and that it had been deemed advisable to agree to that suggestion. Mr. Hammond was pleased also to say that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of such new Treaty, which had been prepared at the Foreign Office with a view to being offered to the German Government.

That the draft is in the main founded upon the two Conventions of 1846 and 1855, but it contained no Article about duties on imported books, because the paper duties, which the duties on imported books were intended to countervail, no longer existed, and the Article on that subject in the Convention of 1846 seemed therefore unnecessary; and it was proposed to add works of photography to the list of works of the fine arts enumerated in Article I.

Mr. Hammond added that he was to request that we would take the draft into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether it may be offered to the German Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the draft into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the Convention which your Lordship has submitted to us appears, with one exception, which we advert to at the end of our Report, to be within the powers of the Crown as defined in 7 and 8 Vict., cap. 12, and 15 and 16 Vict., cap. 12; and we have, therefore, no further remarks of a strictly legal kind to offer upon it.

On the subject of photographs, to which Mr. Hammond's letter invites our attention, we should have been disposed ourselves to exclude rather than include them, not merely on the ground that they are hardly in themselves works of art in any true sense, but from the great difficulty which we believe will be found in practically working a law which should attempt to punish infringement of copyright (if created in this country) in foreign photographs.

We venture respectfully to question the policy of Articles VI and VII so far as they impose any duty upon our own custom-house officers of searching for and seizing such books and other articles. A civil remedy to the persons injured by such importation seems to us a sufficient, and will probably be found in all really important cases an effective, remedy for breaches of the law of copyright. As to Article VIII, we would suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, whether copies might not well be deposited also at the two Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. We question whether the provision in this Article that a certified copy of the entry in the Register Book of the Company of Stationers in London shall confer within the British dominions, the exclusive right of republication, &c., is not expressed with too great breadth so far as it purports to affect the Colonies. The provision would be practically inoperative beyond the limits of Great Britain and Ireland, for any book or translation of a book worth reprinting could be obtained, as it now is, through the United States. But it might, nevertheless, give rise to questions at once troublesome and barren of any real result.

We should suggest the substitution of "the United Kingdom" for "British dominions." Subject to these observations, we think the Convention is one quite proper to submit to the German Empire.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to say that a copy of the Treaty of Commerce with Russia of the 12th January, 1859, was sent with the papers for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Elkan and Co., as the carriers of certain machinery to Kertch, appear to have a claim against a Russian subject for the freight of that machinery. The amount due is in dispute, and the Russian Tribunals have ordered the amount of freight demanded to be paid into Court by, and the goods—that is the machinery—to be delivered to, the Russian subject.

We are of opinion that in this state of things Her Majesty's Government is not at present called upon to interfere, and so settle the amount of freight due and payable, and that Messrs. Elkan and Co. must seek their remedy in a Russian Court.

My Lord, Temple, November 20, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 31st October, 1861, relative to the legal validity of marriages performed in the British Chapel at Riga, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further papers, by which we would see that the question had been reopened by British residents and by Her Majesty's Consul at Riga.

That the previous correspondence was also sent, from which we would see that it had hitherto been laid down that that class of marriage was of doubtful validity; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to again take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, on a review of the whole former series of papers, as well as those now before us for the first time, among which are opinions of Sir T. Twiss and Dr. Tristram, we saw any reason to modify the views formerly expressed on the subject in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Consular Marriage Act, 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, applies only to marriages in Consulates, and section 21 provides expressly that nothing in the Act shall confirm, impair, or in any wise affect the validity of any marriages solemnized beyond seas, otherwise than as therein provided.

The Consular marriages at Riga are quite distinct from the marriages solemnized by a person in Holy Orders in the British Chapels at Riga between British subjects; and we are of opinion that these latter marriages being valid by the lex loci, are valid everywhere.

The former Reports seem to have been made upon cases in which the question was not raised so distinctly as in the present case, nor with the same amount of information as to the law of Russia.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 30.)

My Lord, Temple, January 29, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General in Siam, together with a letter from the Board of Trade, to which Department Mr. Knox's despatch was submitted, respecting the course he had adopted in a case which occurred on board the British vessel "Burlington," where the master of that vessel, a native of Germany, shot two of his crew and seriously maltreated four others; Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations I might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is not clear, in this case whether the affray on board the British vessel "Burlington" took place on the high seas or within Siamese waters, but in either case I am of opinion that the German Consul is not entitled to claim exclusive jurisdiction, as he appears to have done, over the master of the vessel, on the grounds of his being a native of Germany.

The German Consul rests his claim upon a Treaty with Siam, but the comity and practice of nations have established the rule of international law that a vessel within the waters of a foreign country is, for the general purpose of governing and regulating the rights, duties, and obligations of those on board inter se, to be regarded as exclusively subject to the jurisdiction of the nation to which she belongs, and that with respect to acts committed on board which do not concern the peace of the port or persons foreign to the crew, the master and crew are justiciable only by the Courts of the country to which she belongs.

My Lord, Temple, January 3, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence which had passed between the Acting British Consul at Fernando Po and the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade relative to the trial by a Court of Equity at Brass of Captain Richards for the alleged murder of a Krooman, and to the validity of the proceedings in virtue of which Richards was acquitted.*

That we would perceive that the Board of Trade had stated their opinion that the case should be tried again, and that the Secretary of State for the Colonies had stated that, as far as he could judge of the facts from the statements before him, the case was not one which could be brought before a Colonial Court, unless the alleged crime was committed on the high seas and the accused brought to trial in a British Settlement; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with a Report on the points thus raised in the letter from the Board of Trade and the Colonial Office.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, assuming that the Bonny River is within the jurisdiction of the Queen under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, and that the proper Order in Council has been issued appointing a Court within Her Majesty's possessions for the trial of criminal offences, we think Captain Richards should be sent for trial before such Court. We are of opinion that he should be charged with manslaughter, which crime includes assault in this country, but it may be better that Captain Richards should be separately charged with the offence of an assault with various intents.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 8.)

My Lord, Temple, January 6, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch, and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, relative to the levy by the Spanish authorities of a fine on the British ship "Grange." That it appears that this fine was demanded in consequence of the captain of the ship not having exhibited his manifest at Marin, although the Civil Governor at Pontevidia had stated that it was not necessary that he should visit that port, and further that it will be seen that it is sought to recover the fine from the Vice-Consul at Marin; and to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to what steps should be taken in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the documents forwarded to the Spanish Minister of State by Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, in his letter of the 9th December, 1871, ought, in my opinion, to satisfy the former that the Spanish Minister of Finance has been misinformed as to the facts of this case, and that the Executive Government ought to remit the fines inflicted, more particularly that which has been imposed upon Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, if it is competent for the Executive Government to do so.

---

* Mr. Hopkins, No. 17; Board of Trade, November 15; Colonial Office, December 12.

1872

The Marquis de St. Rafael seems to intimate that the proper course is for Her Majesty's Vice-Consul to appeal "in the way and form which the laws prescribe." But this remark of his Excellency was founded on a view of the case at variance with the true facts, and his Excellency, after the representation made to him in Mr. Layard's last letter, may hold different language.

If, however, he should still declare that the Executive Government is incompetent to remit the fines, Her Majesty's Vice-Consul should, in my opinion, adopt "the way and form of appeal which the Spanish laws prescribe," and if proper equity is not done to him there will be grounds for serious remonstrance.

As regards the question of principle, it should at present, in my opinion, be reserved until fuller information is forthcoming as to the grounds upon which the Spanish authorities maintain, if they should continue to do so, that Her Majesty's Vice-Consul on this occasion was legally to be regarded as agent for the ship.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received January 9.)

My Lord,
Temple, January 9, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 8th January instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 24th ultimo respecting the two vessels at Liverpool which were under suspicion of being about to be dispatched contrary to the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Collector of Customs at Liverpool, reporting the steps he had taken with regard to those vessels, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion thereupon.

Lord Enfield was pleased also to say that the previous papers relating to this matter were also sent therewith, for convenience of reference if required, and to add that since the signature of that despatch a further letter from the Treasury on the same subject had been received, and was therewith annexed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we do not think there is sufficient ground, at present, for issuing a warrant under the 23rd section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870. The account, however, which has been transmitted by telegram gives occasion to suspicion by reason of the rumour as to their intended employment being in connection with Cuba.

We do not, however, see any legal grounds for prohibiting the registered owners from removing the vessels to the graving decks, for no offence against the Statute will be committed as regards these vessels until some steps are taken to equip them for the purpose of their being dispatched contrary to the Act, but we think the vessels should be carefully watched while in the graving dock, and the character of any repairs or alterations promptly reported from time to time to your Lordship.

My Lord,
Temple, January 13, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our previous Reports respecting the case of the suspected vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland" at Liverpool, he was directed to transmit to us, for our immmediate consideration, the accompanying letter from the Treasury, containing further particulars respecting those vessels; and he was to request that we would report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, as to any or what steps should be taken under the circumstances set forth in the inclosed papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the present papers to induce us to alter or modify the Report which we last had the honour to address to your Lordship. The officer should be directed to watch carefully the character of the repairs, and to report from time to time, as upon the character of the repairs the course to be taken as to the vessels hereafter may very materially depend. The length of the proposed trial trip is perhaps suspicious, and we think it might be well to inform the owner that a trial trip will not be interfered with provided that during such trip they are allowed to remain in the control of the Customs, by the presence on board of a certain number of custom-house officers.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th ultimo relative to the suspected vessel "Scud," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying two letters from the Board of Treasury, containing the result of further inquiries which had been made with regard to that ship; and that he was to request we would report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion as to any steps that could be taken under the circumstances as stated in the inclosed papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the information before your Lordship does not, in our opinion, furnish sufficient grounds to warrant Her Majesty's Government in detaining the steam-vessel "Scud" as about to be dispatched contrary to the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act 1871.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received January 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, January 20, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 13th instant, and to our previous Reports upon the subject of the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland," now in the Mersey, which were suspected of being intended for purposes hostile to Spain, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury, inclosing further correspondence relating to the vessels in question; and that he was to request us to take the papers into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the steps which should be taken in regard to the said vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the offer made by Mr. Ross in his letter of the 18th January appears to us to be a reasonable one, and that it will be proper to accept it, and to allow the vessels to be moved from the dock on the production by him of reasonable evidence as to their proposed employment.

With regard to the proposed trial trip, assuming that all reasonable grounds for suspicion have not ceased to exist, when the trip is to be made we think the vessels ought only to be allowed to make it in the custody of Her Majesty's Government.

This custody may properly be a body of marines or of the coastguard, as suggested in the letter of Mr. Hale of the 17th January. The consequences of a mistake being made in detaining these vessels for a time without sufficient grounds are not to be compared with those which might follow from the vessels being allowed to escape if a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act is really contemplated by their owners.

Mr. Hammond added that a communication had been sent to the Board of Admiralty respecting the placing of a guard on board these vessels on their trial trip, as recommended in our Report.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Hale may, in our opinion, properly inform Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson, in reply to their letter of the 17th instant, that there are no objections, on the part of Her Majesty's Government, to Mr. Ross' dealing freely with the two vessels arising out of their antecedents affecting in any way the title to be received by him from Mr. Jones, and that he may also inform them, as soon as Mr. Ross has become the registered owner of the two vessels, Mr. Hale will be happy to receive from him any information which he may be disposed to afford him respecting their intended use and destination.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 22nd instant, relative to the detention of the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland" at Liverpool, he (Viscount Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying further letter, and its inclosures, from the Treasury respecting this case, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion thereupon.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to add that a letter in the sense of our Report of the 22nd instant had been addressed at once to the Board of Treasury, but sufficient time had not elapsed to allow of the result of the communication which we advised should be made by Mr. Hale to Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson, being made known to your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the letter, together with its inclosures, into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Hale may be authorized to inform Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson that upon satisfactory evidence being produced on the part of the present registered owner of the two vessels that they are not intended to be employed contrary to the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act they will be released from further control on the part of the Custom-house authorities. We suggest that, meanwhile, inquiry should be made in the manner which your Lordship may think most fit, whether the Spanish Minister has in fact received from the Spanish Consul at Liverpool a satisfactory report as "to the legitimate nature of the trade in which it is intended to place the vessels," as stated by Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson, in their letter of the 20th January, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 25th January instant, stating that, with reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the detention of the suspected vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Board of Treasury, inclosing a copy of a letter from the Board of Customs respecting the request of Messrs. Gregory, Rowcliffe, and Co. (who are acting on behalf of Mr. Ross) to be informed whether any warrant has been issued by the Secretary of State, in accordance with the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, for the seizure of the vessels in question; and to request that we would cause your Lordship to be informed, at our earliest convenience, what answer should be returned to Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe.

We are also favoured with a note from Lord Enfield, dated the 25th January instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of that day's date, relative to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland," he had the honour to transmit to us therewith, in order that it might be considered in conjunction with the papers before us, a letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court, giving the substance of the Spanish Consul's action in regard to those vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the statement of the Spanish Minister that Mr. Ross' name does not yet appear in the Custom-house Register as the transferee of the two vessels is of importance as regards his title, as registered owner, to claim the free disposal of them. As soon as he has complied fully with the provisions of the Statute as regards the registration of the vessels, and upon his giving a satisfactory explanation of the intended employment of them, no further impediment should, in our opinion, be placed by the Custom-house authorities at Liverpool in the way of his moving them.

As regards the application of Messrs. Gregory, Rowcliffe, and Co., on behalf of

Mr. Ross, they may be properly informed that the Secretary of State has not issued at present any warrant to seize the vessels under the Foreign Enlistment Act.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 29.)

My Lord, Temple, January 27, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch, and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, relative to the circumstances under which the British vessel "Anne Lucy" was detained at the Philippine Islands, and the carpenter of that vessel imprisoned and fined, and a claim preferred in consequence against the Spanish Government by Messrs. Loney and Co., of Iloilo.

That I should perceive that this case involves also the question of the rights or privileges of British Consular officers in Spanish Colonies. A previous despatch from Mr. Consul Ricketts on this subject, the Consular Convention between Spain and Germany therein referred to, and three memoranda connected with this question, were also inclosed; and Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion on the points raised in Mr. Ricketts' despatch now referred to me, and as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in the matter.

I am also honoured with Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th instant, transmitting to me a further despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, with its inclosures, relative to a complaint made by the master of the "Banda" against the Customs authorities of Manila.

That this case, though not actually connected with that of the treatment of the carpenter of the "Anne Lucy," bears upon the arbitrary proceedings of the Manila authorities; and Lord Tenterden was therefore pleased to request that I would take it into my consideration at the same time as the papers sent in the previous letters, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion on the whole matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government is, in my opinion, precluded by the construction which the Earl of Aberdeen placed on the ancient Treaties with Spain in 1845, from maintaining in the present day that they are directly applicable to the Colonies of the two Contracting Parties. I am also of opinion that no solid distinction can be made, as has been suggested, between persons and produce, so as to limit Lord Aberdeen's construction of the Treaties to what regards produce only. It does not, however, follow that because the Colonies of the two Contracting Parties are not within the immediate scope of the ancient Treaties, that Spain is under no obligation towards Great Britain, as an ally and friend of Spain, to treat British subjects who may trade with the Colonies of Spain in the same manner as they are treated in the European dominions of Spain under those Treaties. The law of Spain, as I gather from "the memoranda relative to the application of the old Treaties with Spain to the Spanish Colonies," is to the effect that "the merchant-vessels of foreign Powers, who are allies and friends of Spain, shall be admitted to traffic in the Spanish Colonies in the same manner as in the Spanish dominions in Europe." Although, then, there may be no direct Treaty engagement between the two Powers to that effect, the comity of nations will entitle Great Britain to claim for her subjects trading in the Spanish Colonies similar treatment in virtue of Spanish law to that to which they are confessedly entitled by Treaty in the Spanish dominions in Europe.

Again, with regard to the functions of Her Majesty's Consular officers resident in the Spanish Colonies, to whom I presume it is customary for the Spanish Government to grant its exequatur, Her Majesty's Government may, in my opinion, in virtue of that exequatur, claim for them the privilege of exercising all the functions which Consuls are accustomed to exercise under the comity of nations.

With regard to the immediate matters of complaint against the authorities of Iloilo, Mr. Layard may, in my opinion, properly bring them to the attention of the Spanish Government, particularly as regards the levying of the fines, the repayment of which he may be instructed to claim, as a matter of justice.

As to what regards the imprisonment of the carpenter and two seamen of the "Anne Lucy," much will depend upon the fact whether or not the charges brought against them were found by the Admiral to be frivolous. Mr. Consul Ricketts expresses his belief to that effect, but it may be doubtful, under the circumstances, whether any evidence can be procured in support of his belief, and without such evidence the Spanish Government would probably decline to institute any inquiry into the merits of the case. The point, however, in the case to which Mr. Layard very properly calls the attention of the Spanish Government is the length of time during which the men were imprisoned before they were tried, and the losses incurred by the owners of the "Anne Lucy" in consequence of their vessel being necessarily detained at Iloilo until the men were liberated.

I may add that the case of the "Banda" is also a proper subject for representation to the Spanish Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of this day's date, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 27th instant with regard to the case of the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further letter from Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe, requesting that, in consequence of its not being the intention of the Secretary of State to issue at present a warrant for the detention of these vessels, an order for their release might at once be granted.

That he was further to add that Mr. Rowcliffe, accompanied by Mr. Ross, the owner of the ships, attended personally to deliver that letter, and that Viscount Enfield informed them, in accordance with our opinion, which had been communicated to the Board of Treasury, but had not reached them, that your Lordship was prepared to accept the offer of Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe, and that Mr. Ross should attend with documents to give the necessary explanations.

That Mr. Ross and his solicitor at once accepted the proposal, and, pending a written notice from them to that effect, he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to any answer that should be returned to Messrs. Rowcliffe's letter, and as to the arrangements which should be made for the interview with Mr. Ross and his solicitors, at which, it was presumed, it would be necessary for one or more of Her Majesty's Law Officers to be present.

We are also just in receipt of further letter received from the Board of Treasury in reference to this matter sent us by Lord Enfield.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we recommend your Lordship to answer Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe's letter.

That your Lordship is inquiring into the circumstances of the case, and cannot, therefore, until after the result of that inquiry, to which Mr. Ross and Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe have already agreed, either release the ships or issue the warrant; and that your Lordship will decide at once upon the course you will pursue on the conclusion of that inquiry.

It seems to us that it is only reasonable that the Board of Customs should indemnify the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board as they request.

With regard to the necessary explanations at the proposed interview, it would be advisable, in our opinion, that they should be given in writing, with copies of any original documents which Mr. Ross may desire to submit to your Lordship.

It is for your Lordship to decide whether the Law Officers should be present.

Temple, February 3, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence with the Board of Treasury relative to a suspected vessel at Liverpool named the "Princess Royal;" and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to whether any, and if so what, steps should be taken with regard to the vessel in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly request the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to take such measures as they may think most fit to ascertain whether there is another vessel called the "Titania" in one of the southern ports of England which is for sale and intended, as alleged, for the Republicans in Cuba. That, meanwhile, the Custom-house authorities at Liverpool should be instructed to observe the "Princess Royal," but not to detain her without previous communication with Her Majesty's Treasury, and to report forthwith if any cause of suspicion of mala fides arises.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 31st ultimo relative to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland," he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying two further letters from Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe respecting this case; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the steps which should now be taken.

The correspondence which has taken place since the interview which Her Majesty's Advocate-General had with Mr. Ross and his solicitor at the Foreign Office on the 1st instant, was also inclosed; and Lord Enfield was pleased to add that the statutory declaration made by Mr. Ross is with the Board of Customs, and cannot therefore be sent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Collector of Customs at Liverpool may properly be instructed to allow the vessels to go into any dock at Liverpool which is desired by Mr. Ross. But we think the vessels should be watched, and that any contemplated change of ownership or in the construction of the vessels should be immediately reported.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th instant, respecting the course to be pursued with regard to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence (marked in margin), upon the same subject;* and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, at our early convenience.

We are also in receipt of two further letters in this matter from Mr. Hammond sent us this day, the one stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit two further letters on the same subject, requesting that they might be considered in conjunction with the papers now before us; the other stating that, with reference to his letters of yesterday and to-day, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe, in which those gentlemen demanded, on behalf of Mr. Ross, the absolute and unconditional release of the above-named vessels from further control on the part of the Custom-house authorities; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take that letter into immediate consideration, together with the other papers, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Gregory and Co.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That upon the information now communicated to your Lordship through the Spanish Minister, we think the Customs authorities may properly be instructed to interfere no farther with the vessels, and that Messrs. Gregory may be informed that such orders have been sent to them.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the steps which should be taken in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Queen's Proctor should be instructed to oppose the application. It is advisable, in our opinion, that the opinion of the highest Tribunal should be obtained as the circumstances, if any, under which Her Majesty's Government would be liable to damages for detaining a vessel under 21st section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying translation of a letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court upon the subject of an action which has been brought against the Spanish Consul at Liverpool, for a libel alleged to be contained in a letter published by him in a newspaper of that town; and to request that I would take this letter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Señor Rances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Spanish Minister should be informed that the official character of the Spanish Consul will not protect him against an action for libel under the circumstances mentioned in the Spanish Minister's letter to your Lordship of the 9th February last, but the circumstances mentioned may prove to be a good defence to the action.

It is not competent for the Spanish Minister to reclaim by way of diplomacy against the proceedings instituted against the Spanish Consul, which are in the nature of a civil action, and not of a criminal prosecution.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 21st December, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, inclosing a translation of the evidence of the pilot who had charge of the "Tyne Queen" at the time when she was ordered away from Huelva by the Spanish Health Authorities notwithstanding that she had not arrived from an infected port; and Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, together with the previous correspondence in the case, which was also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether your Lordship would now be justified in instructing Mr. Layard to make a representation to the Spanish Government in favour of the owners of the "Tyne Queen," in the terms recommended in my Report of the 8th September.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship will, in my opinion, now be justified in instructing Mr. Layard to make a representation to the Spanish Government in favour of the owners of the "Tyne Queen," in the terms recommended in my Report of the 8th September, 1871.

The Queen's Proctor to Lord Tenterden.—(Received February 29.)

My Lord, Doctors' Commons, February 29, 1872.

I HAVE the honour to transmit a draft of an affidavit which the Law Officers propose should be made by one of the Under-Secretaries for Foreign Affairs in answer to the application recently made to the High Court of Admiralty for indemnity in respect of the detention of the "Great Northern" and the "Midland."

It is proposed to contend that, on the true construction of the Foreign Enlistment Act, a local authority at one of our ports is justified in detaining a ship until the necessary inquiries respecting her can be made, upon the bare representation by the Minister of a Foreign Court, and without further evidence, that there is reasonable and probable ground for believing that she is intended to be commissioned, fitted out, or dispatched contrary to the Act, and that a reasonable time must be allowed for inquiry, without any necessity for a warrant by the Secretary of State.

It is also considered that, as it may prove inexpedient in most cases, on grounds of public policy, to disclose the information on which the detention takes place, it is desirable to raise the question already referred to, without setting out the correspondence which has passed between the Spanish Minister and the Government, the privilege of withholding such information in the course of such proceedings (which would be acknowledged by the Court) being claimed by the Secretary of State on grounds of public policy.

This case presents a favourable opportunity for raising the question noticed, and if the Court should decide against the construction of the Foreign Enlistment Act for which it is proposed to contend, the Law Officers are of opinion that an amendment of the Act would be requisite.

My Lord, Temple, March 2, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the murder on the 2nd July last at San Juan del Puerto, near Huelva, in Spain, of Mr. James Frederick Robert, a British subject, in the employ of the Buiton and Huelva Railway Company.

That I should learn from these papers the efforts that have been made by Her Majesty's Government to obtain the apprehension and punishment of the murderers of Mr. Robert, and the ill-success which has hitherto attended those efforts; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to what further steps Her Majesty's Government can take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not aware of any further steps which Her Majesty's Government can take in this matter except to urge the Spanish Government not to allow so atrocious a crime to remain unpunished.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received April 13.)

Temple, April 12, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin,* relative to the circumstances under which a fine was levied in the month of December last by the Spanish Customs Authorities at Corunna, upon the British steamer "Erl King," on account of an alleged omission in her manifest; and he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the legality of the course pursued by the Spanish authorities in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the law which has been enforced in this case appears to us to be contrary to the comity of nations. No ship coming into a port from stress of weather or the accidental falling short of supplies necessary to continue her voyage, and not for the purpose of trade, ought to be subject to the fiscal regulations of such port. In this case it appears, moreover, that the master was ignorant of these regulations, and was not allowed to communicate with the British Consul, who might have informed him of them. It seems to us to be a case of great injustice, which your Lordship may properly make the subject of diplomatic representations, and urge the return of the fine.

Temple, March 26, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd day of March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office (March 16, 1872), and its inclosures, reporting the circumstances attending the arrest and imprisonment, by the Spanish authorities at Crab Island and Porto Rico, of a number of British subjects natives of the Virgin Islands, on a charge of murder of which they were innocent; and to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this case appears to us to be one calling for decided action on the part of Her Majesty's Government. The despatch of the Spanish Governor Font shows that Her Majesty's subjects were pursuing the trade of charcoal burning, not merely with the knowledge and by the permission of the Spanish Governor, but at his direct and special invitation. It is an admitted fact that of the crime or any complicity with the crime laid to their charge Her Majesty's subjects were absolutely innocent. It is stated, on evidence which seems to us, as far as we can judge, to be reasonable and credible, that the real murderer was allowed to escape from the scene of the murder by the grossest neglect, and that these innocent persons were treated with great harshness, with unnecessary cruelty, and that their property was plundered and destroyed by the Spanish soldiers, with at least the passive acquiescence of the Spanish authorities, the Governor, who had invited them to Culebra, and then arrested them and ill-treated them with no reasonable ground for his conduct, refusing, as we understand, even to hear their complaints when released or to assist them in any way to recover their plundered property. Under these circumstances, we cannot hesitate to advise your Lordship that you will be well warranted in asking for redress and compensation to be made to these men by the Spanish Government for injuries sustained by them unprovoked and unjustifiable.

We venture to suggest further that the 17th paragraph of the despatch of the 25th January, 1872, from President Mori to Sir B. Pine, may well lead your Lordship, if you think fit, to inquire whether the letters there spoken of as addressed by these men to the Consul at St. John's ever reached him, and if they did why no attention was paid to them; and further, why Acting Consul Cowper, who was, we presume, at Porto Rico when forty-one English subjects were imprisoned there on the 9th November, took no steps whatever till the 20th of that month, and then only in consequence of being put in motion by a despatch of President Mori.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 30, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, with its inclosures, from Mr. A. Holt, respecting the circumstances under which he had incurred a loss of 167*l.* 10*s.* 1*d.*, owing to the imposition of differential duties at Manila on certain goods shipped by Messrs. Ker, Bolton, and Co. to Hong Kong, and there transhipped by Mr. Holt's agent in British and Prussian steamers to the first-named port.

And he (Viscount Enfield) also inclosed a despatch, with its inclosures, on this subject from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila; and was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could properly take any steps in the matter as regards addressing a representation to the Spanish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That this is a case of hardship, and one to which we think the attention of the Spanish Government may properly be drawn, with representation that in fairness the claim should be allowed, though perhaps not matter of strict right. We think, however, that the claim, if refused to be entertained by the Spanish Government, ought not to be insisted upon. In fact, no higher duty was charged on the applicant's goods than had been previously announced, Mr. Holt's real complaint being that a remission of 25 per cent. was made in favour of importers in Spanish bottoms on too short a notice, so that in effect a differential duty was imposed on his goods, as the others could sell 25 per cent. cheaper. Now with regard to remission of duty in favour either of a whole class or a portion of a class, Governments give such notice only as they think reasonable, and no other Government has in strictness a right to interfere.

1872

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received May 15.)

Temple, May 15, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid respecting the property of Miss Elizabeth Perry, an English lady who recently died at Madrid, after residing there for some years. Mr. Layard had taken possession of her property, but was doubtful whether he had any right to do so, as a Diplomatic Agent, or whether an English Consul would have the right to interfere in such a case, under the most-favoured-nation Article in the Treaty with Spain of 1667 (Articles XXXIII and XXXIV, Hertslet, vol. ii, p. 154), which Treaty had been reviewed from time to time, and is still considered in force.

And that your Lordship requested us to take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

As it is stated that the will of Miss Perry is valid according to the law of Spain, we are of opinion that Mr. Layard had no right to take possession of her property as a Diplomatic Agent, nor would an English Consul have had any such right. If she had died intestate by Spanish law, then either the Minister at the Spanish Court or a Consul should have proceeded under the XXXIVth Article of the Treaty with Spain (Hertslet, ii, p. 154), and have caused the property to be inventoried, and deposited with two or three merchants. The express provisions in Clauses XXXIII and XXXIV would prevent any claim by the Consul or Diplomatic Agent under the provisions of Clause XXXVIII, even if that clause could be fairly construed to extend to the goods of a deceased person, which we think very doubtful. The intention of the framers of the Treaty evidently was that the executors named in the will should take possession, it being apparently and not unreasonably assumed that a testator would appoint at least one executor resident in the country, but that if there was no will, then that the British Minister or Consul should take care of the intestate's goods.

Temple, May 24, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, in which he states that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong, and other documents, relative to a dispute which has arisen between the Supreme Court of that Colony and the Spanish Consul, as to the right of administering the estate of a Chinaman who died on board the Spanish vessel "Attagracia," on the high seas, while on a voyage from Havana to Hong Kong; and to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the Colonial Office on the subject to which they relate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Mr. Hammond's letter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the law upon the subject of foreign Consuls and their privileges, and especially the claim to administer to the effects of intestates dying under the supposed jurisdiction of the Power of which they are Consuls, is very correctly stated by the Attorney-General of the Colony; and that upon the general subject of Consular rights and privileges, the opinion of Sir J. D. Harding and the despatch of the Duke of Newcastle, which have been sent to us, appear entirely satisfactory. Your Lordship may, therefore, if you think fit, properly express yourself to this effect in any answer you may return to Lord Kimberley.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating, with reference to our Report of the 13th February, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury, inclosing a further Report from the Customs respecting the "Titania," a vessel which it was stated certain persons had endeavoured to purchase for the use of the Cuban insurgents.

That the former papers relating to that vessel were likewise inclosed; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was any ground for interfering with her.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the fitting of the "Titania" with a number (thirteen) of water-tanks, upon which planks are being laid to form a deck, and the intended shipment of a large quantity of compressed hay, would not, in our opinion, justify the arrest of that vessel.

It will, however, be proper to continue the watch on that vessel, that it may be known whether she takes on board arms or military stores, or a number of men beyond her ordinary crew.

Temple, May 29, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, upon the subject of the detention by the Spanish authorities at Manzanillo, in Cuba, of the British sloop "Lark," of Jamaica, and th imprisonment for fifteen days of the persons on board her.

That we would see from the despatch of Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid No. 74 of the 14th March, that, in compliance with your Lordship's instructions, he had called the attention of the Spanish Government to the case, and had remonstrated against the harsh treatment of the crew, and the want of attention shown to the representations of Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana on the subject.

That your Lordship had not yet, however, instructed Mr. Layard to make any claim upon the Spanish Government for compensation to the sufferers, and he (Mr. Hammond) was to state to us that, before coming to a decision upon that point, your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with our opinion as to the claims put forward, which we would observe already amounted to 16,000*l.*, although four of the persons on board had not yet sent in claims.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the seizure of the sloop "Lark" in Spanish waters, where she was without national flag or regular papers, and the taking her into Manzanillo by the Spanish gunboat "Astato," were legitimate acts.

But the imprisonment of the men on board, and the detention of the "Lark" for fifteen days, are, in our opinion, strong grounds for asking compensatiun.

The claim, however, of 16,000*l.*, or more than 1,000*l.* a-day, seems to us excessive, and before instructing Mr. Layard to make any claim on the Spanish Government for a sum as compensation, your Lordship might require full and detailed information to show how so large an amount is made up, and whether any, and what, farther claim will be made on behalf of the other four men on board the "Lark."

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which had been addressed to Mr. Newdigate, M.P. by Mr. William Underhill, setting forth the circumstances under which he had been hitherto unable to obtain from a Spanish Railway Company payment of a sum of money alleged to be due to him under a contract entered into with the Company by his father, now deceased, and himself, in partnership.

And he (Viscount Enfield) was pleased to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, dated the 14th February, 1870, wherein he reported the steps which he had at that time taken on Mr. Underhill's behalf, but without success; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could properly interfere further in support of Mr. Underhill's claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Underhill having entered into a contract with a private Company in Spain has, according to his own account, not taken the means open to him by the law of that country to enforce his claim under the contract against the Company.

The answer of Signor Sagasta, inclosed in Mr. Layard's despatch, seems to us to meet the case, and, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government ought not to interfere diplomatically in support of Mr. Underhill's claim until he has been denied justice by the proper Tribunals in Spain.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the state of the caves when examined by Admiral Inglefield is quite consistent with the account which several officers give of the condition of the caves before the seamen were admitted, and inconsistent with the damage described in the Spanish Report.

And the two inquiries which have been made into the conduct of the seamen show, in our opinion, that the seamen who went into the caves were sober and in no way misconducted themselves there.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was now to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Layard commenting upon that instruction; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we adhere to the opinion already given, that where a British subject dies in Spain leaving a will valid according to the law of Spain, no British Diplomatic or Consular Agent in Spain has any right, under the present Treaties, to take possession of the property of the deceased.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana, in which he requested instructions for his guidance in the event of an application being made to him to sanction the arrest of any Cuban insurgent who might arrive at that port on board an English mail steamer.

Mr. Hammond inclosed a Report by Sir R. Phillimore upon a similar question which arose at Islay, in Peru, in 1865; and stated that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be addressed to Mr. Dunlop.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana be instructed that he has no right to interfere in order to prevent the arrest of any Cuban insurgent who may arrive at that port on board an English mail steamer, provided the arrest be effected whilst the steamer is in Spanish territorial waters, and that if any application should be made to him to sanction such arrest, he should decline to sanction the same.

My Lord,

accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing despatch from the Governor of Jamaica, giving full details as to the action of the authorities in the matter.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose previous correspondence on the subject, as likewise the correspondence in the "La Have" referred to by Sir Peter Grant; and to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proceedings of the Governor in this matter should be approved.

In a memorandum dated the 6th instant, Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, with a farther despatch from the Governor of Jamaica relative to the proceedings of the "Edgar Stewart" after she left that island.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there was no reason which would have justified the detention of the "Edgar Stewart," and that the proceedings of the Governor of Jamaica with regard to that vessel should be approved.

The presumed destruction of the "Edgar Stewart" by a Spanish man-of-war off the coast of Cuba, and the escape to Jamaica of three of the "Edgar Stewart's" crew, and of a fourth man who had been on board that vessel, does not in any way lead us to alter our opinion that she was properly released by the British authorities at Jamaica.

Temple, July 9, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of that date (we have not seen a second letter of the 3rd instant) relative to the case of the "Edgar Stewart," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a farther despatch from the Governor of Jamaica, from which we would see that, in the course of the proceedings with regard to that vessel, doubts had arisen as to the interpretation of certain provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act 1870, 33 and 34 Vict., cap. 90; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the points referred to in Sir Peter Grant's despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the word "despatch" in section 4, sub-section 8, of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 33 and 34 Vict., cap. 90, does not apply to the case of a foreign ship which comes voluntarily within Her Majesty's dominions, and leaves without having come under the direction or control of any person not on board, and without having received any equipment of any sort.

A contrary construction of the word "dispatch" would lead to an interference with the commerce of foreign countries contrary to the law of nations and not required by the necessity of the case. The procuring equipment of a peaceful character will not make such foreign vessel liable.

The word "dispatch" must, in respect to foreign vessels, receive a like construction in the other parts of the Act in which it occurs.

With respect, however, to British vessels, we are of opinion that if such vessel leave any part of Her Majesty's dominions with the intent necessary to bring her within the Statute, and although there has been no communication with any one not on board, an offence has been committed against the Act, and the penal consequences will, on conviction, attach.

We are of opinion that "stress of weather," in the last paragraph of section 23, does not include the case of a steam-vessel whose machinery has not been damaged by bad weather coming into port in fine weather for the purpose of repair, when she might have chosen some other port.

The last paragraph of section 23 refers to a foreign non-commissioned ship, which shall have received no equipping of a warlike character in this country, and which has come within Her Majesty's dominions without the intention of receiving or adding to her warlike equipment. If so, the words "peaceful voyage" mean that her reaching and staying in Her Majesty's dominions are unconnected with the intent of adding to her powers of employment in naval service.

"Equipping of a warlike character" in the last paragraph of section 23 should, in our opinion, be confined to munitions of war strictly so called, and not extended to articles of ambiguous use, as coals, provisions, or tackle.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, and its inclosure, from Mr. Consul Ricketts, relative to a complaint preferred by Messrs. Loney against the Spanish Customs authorities at Iloilo, together with a précis of these papers and a memorandum upon them by Mr. Layard.

That the ancient Treaties with Spain referred to by Mr. Layard were to be found in the second volume of Hertslet's Treaties sent therewith; and that he also inclosed three memoranda on the general subject of British rights under those Treaties and their application to Spanish Colonies. And that he was to request that we would take Mr. Consul Ricketts' despatch into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue with regard to the matters to which it relates.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the conduct of the Spanish Customs authorities justifies a strong remonstrance on the subject from Her Majesty's Government to the Spanish Government, and a claim for compensation to Mr. Loney.

The remonstrance and claim may be made on the principle that a Government is responsible for the wrongful acts of its officers, and need not be based upon any Treaty rights.

The alleged conduct of Mr. Higgin seems to call for an explanation from him, and for his punishment if the explanation offered be not satisfactory to your Lordship.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the accompanying translation of a letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court respecting a vessel named the "Steady," which he (the Spanish Minister) had been informed had been purchased by Cuban agents for hostile operations against Spain. That he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose letter from the Treasury containing Reports from the Customs authorities at Liverpool and Hull respecting the vessel in question; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government should take any, and if so what, steps in regard to the "Steady."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there does not appear to us, upon the present state of the information, to be sufficient to warrant your Lordship in seizing or even in detaining the "Steady" for the purpose of inquiry. We advise in this case, subject to the determination of your Lordship, not to allow the question to be broadly raised before the Court whether the bonâ fide complaint of the Minister of a friendly Power is or is not, under the present state of the law, "reasonable cause" for the action of the Secretary of State.

Apart from the despatch of the Spanish Minister, there does not appear to be reasonable cause for your Lordship's action, and from what passed upon a former occasion we assume your Lordship to be desirous, under such circumstances, to take the responsibility of inaction.

That the outrage appeared to have arisen out of a debt due to Mr. Townsend, as security for which he had taken two of the slaves of the debtors; and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the legality of that transaction, before deciding whether any steps should be taken to obtain reparation for the outrage.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose a despatch on the same subject from Consul Livingstone, for whom Mr. Hopkins was acting, which gave a different version of the affair.†

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence respecting recent violations of British maritime jurisdiction by Spanish guardacostas, and also a volume containing the instruction addressed to the Government of Gibraltar by the Duke of Buckingham in 1868, and a volume containing a memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office upon the subject of the Gibraltar boundaries. And that he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship how far Her Majesty's Government had a right to prevent Spanish revenue vessels from coming within the territorial waters of Gibraltar, and what steps they would be justified in taking to prevent their capturing vessels within the limits, to enforce the liberation of vessels so captured, or to punish the Spanish guardacostas for the insult offered by the violation of territory.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government has the right to prevent Spanish revenue vessels from coming within the territorial waters of Gibraltar, and would be justified in taking any measures in preventing the capture of vessels by Spanish revenue vessels within the territorial limits, or enforcing the liberation of vessels so captured.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Governor Kennedy in regard to the future official positions of the two Consular officers concerned in the duel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, requesting instructions as to whether he should support a claim made on the Spanish Government by M. Manuel Francisco Carrero for compensation for the illegal seizure and detention by a Spanish revenue cruizer of the French falucha "Algérie," the cargo of which vessel he declared to have been his property; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Layard.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this is a matter rather for the exercise of your Lordship's discretion than a matter of strict law, that we cannot advise your Lordship to support the claim of M. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that, with reference to that part of the Queen's Advocate's Report of the 27th January which relates to the imprisonment in the Philippine Islands of seamen belonging to the ship "Anne Lucy," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, with its inclosures, from which it appeared that the men in question had been released by the local authorities on a Judgment of the Marine Court.

That the previous papers relating to that case were also transmitted; and he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take that case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any indemnity could properly be claimed from the Spanish Government on behalf of the imprisoned seamen.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is evident from the opinion of the Marine Court, inclosed in the despatch of the 24th July, 1872, of Mr. Consul Ricketts, the seamen have been unjustly dealt with, that the charges were not proved, and a nominal fine was all the punishment that could have been properly inflicted on the seamen even if guilty of an attempt at smuggling.

That the principal witness against them was intoxicated at the time when he said the offences of smuggling and assault upon himself were committed, and was not considered worthy of credit.

Notwithstanding which the seamen underwent a long imprisonment, and have been ordered to pay costs.

We are therefore of opinion that some indemnity may properly be claimed from the Spanish Government on behalf of the imprisoned seamen.

And that he was to request that we would take the application into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could properly take any steps on Miss Beecroft's behalf.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the information given by Miss Beecroft is extremely meagre, and we are of opinion that before interceding with the Spanish Government, as Miss Beecroft requests your Lordship to do, she should be asked to state what application, if any, she, or any person in her behalf, has made to the Spanish Government, and with what result.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 15th May instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed papers, as noted in the margin, respecting the position of the English church in Geneva.*

That the church was built, as we would learn from the papers and from a memorandum which accompanied them, by British subjects, upon a site given by the Council of State of Geneva for that purpose to the residents there professing "le culte Anglican."

That there were at the time of this gift no such residents at Geneva except British subjects.

That Her Majesty's Government returned thanks for the gift as one made to British subjects, and the church was built with British funds.

Lord Enfield further stated that some time last year certain non-British subjects claimed a right to interfere in the affairs of the church as professing "le culte Anglican," and Her Majesty's Minister at Berne was instructed to use his good offices unofficially in the matter, but was, at the same time, told that, as the church was not connected either with his Legation or with Her Majesty's Consulate at Geneva, Her Majesty's Government had no positive right to interfere.

That the Council of State of Geneva had now decided in favour of the non-British residents' claims; and that he, Lord Enfield was therefore to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the case, and more particularly whether it would be possible, by making the English church at Geneva a Consular church, either with or without the consent of the Council of State of Geneva, as having been built with British subscriptions, and also upon condition that no contribution towards its expenses is to be claimed under the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, to secure to British subjects alone the right of voting at the general meetings, and of serving in the Committee of Management.

Lord Enfield was pleased to add that, should that course be impracticable, your Lordship would be glad to receive any suggestion we might be able to make for securing the same object.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we do not think it would be proper, or at all according to precedent, that the British Government should interfere, the status of the church and the rights of British and non-British residents being matters to be settled by Cantonal law.

The Council of State of Geneva having decided in favour of certain rights claimed by non-British residents, the British Government cannot, by any proceeding such as is suggested in the letter of Lord Enfield, hope to divert such rights; and we think that any attempt of the kind would lead in all probability to misconception and dispute. No course, therefore, appears to be open which will be free from objection except absolute non-interference.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was to transmit to us therewith a despatch, and its inclosures, which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, inquiring, on behalf of Mr. J. L. Ellenberger, as to the validity of the marriage of his son, Beatus Rodolphus Ellenberger, which was recently celebrated at Her Majesty's Mission at Berne on the strength of the prescribed written declarations, some of which appeared to have been not in accordance with the facts.

That Mr. Bonar pointed out that the formality of an affidavit was abolished, and the applicants for marriage were now only required to subscribe simple declarations, and that no positive rules were laid down by which Her Majesty's Legations were bound to verify the statements so made.

That he (Viscount Enfield) issued at different times to Her Majesty's Diplomatic Representatives abroad, for their guidance, as well as the form of declaration adopted in lieu of the affidavit formerly required; and he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Bonar's despatch, and also as to whether any general instructions in addition to those sent therewith should be addressed on that subject to Her Majesty's Representatives abroad.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Bonar may be informed that the marriage of Mr. Ellenberger is valid within Her Majesty's dominions, notwithstanding the untrue statement as to the age of Mr. Ellenberger.

No general instructions in addition to those in the Circular need be addressed on this subject to Her Majesty's Representatives abroad.

We would, however, submit for your Lordship's consideration whether the law should not be altered by confining its operations to those cases where both parties are British subjects, leaving the case of mixed marriages to the law of the place where the marriage is had, at least in Christian countries.

acquainted with the requirements of British interests in the Regency of Tunis, and very much must of course be taken on his authority in regard to the details of the Treaty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think Articles XXIV and XXV should be made more clear and definite. XXIV should provide that, in criminal trials where the accused is a British subject, he should be tried by the British Consular Court. The words "plaintiff" and "defendant" (XXV) properly apply to civil trials only. We have altered Articles XXIV and XXV accordingly. We are not able to ascertain what Article XXVI is intended to mean. Articles XXIV and XXV appear to provide for all cases, but if it is intended that even in mixed cases where defendant or prisoner is a Tunisian, there is to be a right of appeal to the British authorities, this should be clearly stated, and the Article XXVI should be made by way of proviso or exception to the preceding Article. If, however, it is merely intended that British subjects in the provinces may have their suits decided in the first instance by the native Courts, and then, when they are plaintiffs or accusers, appeal, the Article should be made to express this. We have not altered it, but await further instructions. With these exceptions, we see no objections to the draft Treaty.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis, inclosing a copy of his Report to the Judge of the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople, relative to the acquittal of Vincenzo Chircof, who was tried at Malta for the murder of a Tunisian soldier; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it would be advisable to take any steps with a view to the alteration of the existing law in the sense suggested by Mr. Wood.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there would be, in our opinion, great practical difficulties in the way of altering the existing law in the sense suggested by Mr. Wood, having regard more especially to his proposal that some arrangement might be made with the principal Christian Governments for their subjects to serve as jurymen in places where the number of qualified British subjects should be insufficient. We foresee also considerable difficulty in carrying out the sentence of the Consular Courts in criminal matters elsewhere than within Her Majesty's dominions. We submit to your Lordship whether the jurisdiction at present exercised by the Maltese Courts arising within the Regency of Tunis in criminal matters might not with advantage be transferred by an amended Order of Her Majesty in Council to the Supreme Court of Gibraltar.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence (marked in margin) which had passed between the Foreign Office, the French Ambassador at Her Majesty's Court, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, and Mr. Wood, Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis, respecting a question raised by the Bey of establishing Mixed Tribunals at Tunis for the purpose of deciding civil and commercial suits between natives and foreigners in that Regency.[*]

And that we would perceive the French Government, whose opinion had been asked on this question, agreed to the principle of the proposed measure; but that he (Mr. Hammond) was to say before your Lordship took any further step in the matter your Lordship would be glad to be favoured, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion upon the question generally, and with any further observations which we might have to offer.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have take the correspondence into consideration and the honour to report—

That the principle of the proposed scheme of the Mixed Tribunals may, in our opinion, be properly approved by your Lordship. We would observe that the important question, what is the Code of law to be administered by those Tribunals until a special Code has been agreed upon, remains undetermined, and that, if a special Code is to be framed, it would be expedient that provision should be made for a body of Commissioners to prepare it.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received May 8.)

Temple, May 7, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 30th April last, stating that your Lordship having referred to Sir P. Francis and to Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis, the suggestion made in our letter of the 27th February last, respecting the transfer to Gibraltar of the jurisdiction of the Maltese Courts over criminal cases arising within the Regency of Tunis, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the answers received from those gentlemen, together with the former correspondence, as noted in the margin;[†] and to request that we would take them into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the serious practical difficulties pointed out by Mr. Wood are of such a nature as to prevent the proposed transfer of jurisdiction to Gibraltar, and whether in such case we could suggest any plan by which the failure of justice complained of could be avoided in the future.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the difficulties raised by Consul Wood appear to us to be matters purely for your Lordship to consider. Assuming that all the persons concerned in a trial as witnesses must go through Malta to Gibraltar, it is a mere matter of expense which we should have supposed Her Majesty's Government must have the means, by arrangement amongst the Departments, of considerably reducing.

The other difficulty, as to the reluctance of witnesses (who it seems do now go to Malta) to proceed to Gibraltar, strikes us as one by no means insuperable, and one which at least resolves itself into a question of expense. Sir Philip Francis is decidedly of opinion that, as far as the interests of justice are concerned, it would be very desirable to have Tunisian cases tried at Gibraltar. There seems no objection of law or policy in the way of the suggestion taking effect, and it must be for your Lordship to decide whether, even assuming no better arrangements can be made than exist at present, the increased expense is one which ought or ought not to be incurred for such an object.

Temple, November 16, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 12th instant, stating that the case of the murder of a Tunisian by a Maltese named Chircop had already been before us, as bearing on the advisability of obtaining legal powers to cause such cases to be tried at Gibraltar instead of Malta.

That subsequently to the receipt of our Report of the 7th May on a review of the papers connected with that case, it appeared to your Lordship that, according to the Capitulations with the Porte, as well as under the Treaty with Tunis of 1751, the accused should have been tried by the Bey's Court, as was done in a similar case in the year 1844, with the consent of Her Majesty's Government given after consultation with the Law Officers of the Crown.

That he (Viscount Enfield) was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a despatch which was addressed to Mr. Wood, Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Tunis, inquiring as to that point, and two despatches received from him in reply, together with two memoranda drawn up at the Foreign Office on that case, as well as a third one on the relations between Tunis and the Porte.

That Mr. Wood seemed to have had an erroneous idea of the scope of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act and Orders in Council founded upon it, and he stated that Chircop was sent to Malta to be tried on account of a request from the Bey that the matter might be dealt with by the English Consul-General, coupled with the Treaty between Tunis and Austria of 1856 (copy inclosed).

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, in view of the policy Her Majesty's Government had always pursued of considering Tunis as not independent of the Porte, a Maltese or other British Court could be properly held to have jurisdiction in such cases, and whether, if a similar case should again arise, Her Majesty's Government could properly claim jurisdiction over the accused person, if the Bey should claim a power to deal with the case, as was done in reference to Paolo Huereb in 1844.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that, although Tunis may politically be considered by Her Majesty's Government as part of the dominions of the Porte, yet it may be within the powers of the Bey to renounce a jurisdiction in certain criminal cases over British subjects, and that in such cases a Maltese or other British Court may properly be held to have a jurisdiction.

If, however, the Bey should, on any occasion subsequent to his having renounced his jurisdiction, claim to exercise it, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government could not resist that claim, or exercise a jurisdiction over the accused person against the Bey.

The reasons for determining the right course of proceeding given by Mr. Wood seem to us most material for the sake of obtaining justice in these cases, and with a view to any transfer of jurisdiction from Malta to Gibraltar.

We should observe that Mr. Wood, in his despatch of the 30th September, states that the Bey "wrote a note to Her Majesty's Consulate-General, asking it to proceed to the trial and punishment of the culprit," but the inclosed note seems rather to mean that the culprit had been tried, and requests that he be subjected to capital punishment for the crime.

Temple, January 25, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 30th December last respecting the claim of Mr. J. Rivolta on the Roumanian Government, Mr. Hammond was directed to transmit to me a further letter from that gentlemen, and he was to request that I would take this letter, together with the former papers, which were also inclosed, into my consideration, and that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon the observation made by Mr. Rivolta.

I am also honoured with Lord Enfield's letter of the 24th instant, transmitting to me a further letter from Mr. J. Rivolta on the subject of the Ward and Rivolta claim on the Roumanian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Green's despatch of the 2nd February, 1867, that Mr. Rivolta is justified in asserting that Prince Couza made a promise to Mr. Green that the caution money should be returned, but the promise appears to have been verbal, and I do not gather from the correspondence that Mr. Green had at that time made any official representation to Prince Couza's Government, so that the promise of the Prince could properly be held to be binding on the Government of his successor, Prince Ghika.

It was otherwise with the Government of Prince Ghika, but the undertaking of his Government was limited to bringing the question before the Roumanian Chamber. It may be that there was bad faith on the part of that Government in not supporting effectively the motion when before the Chamber. This is a circumstance which may have weight with your Lordship. Further, if Mr. Rivolta's additional statement is borne out, that Mr. Green obtained from the Ministers of Prince Couza a formal reavowal of the promise of the Prince, of which I am not aware that there is any record in Mr. Green's despatches, the case against the Roumanian Government would be stronger than I have considered it to be.

Looking, as I have already observed, to the equity of Mr. Rivolta's claim, and the recognition of its equity by the Administration of Prince Charles Ghika, I see no objection to your Lordship authorizing Mr. Green to give such support as he well can to the agent of Mr. Rivolta in his proposed endeavour to induce the Roumanian Government to fulfil the promise of Prince Couza.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople (No. 9, Commercial), relative to complaints against certain regulations in regard to the exportation of silk cocoons recently adopted by the Porte; and Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take the matter into consideration, together with the stipulations of the Treaty between this country and Turkey of the 29th April, 1861 (Hertslet's Treaties, vol. xi, p. 561), and that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the regulations are beyond the "meaning" of the Treaty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the regulation in question is not upon the face of it within the meaning of the Treaty of the 29th April, 1861 (Hertslet, vol. xi, p. 561), but the working of it may bring it within the mischief intended to be guarded against by abolishing "permits" (teskérés) under Article II of that Treaty.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Council of Foreign Bondholders, with reference to the Régie lately established by the Ottoman Government on the tobacco tax in that country, the proceeds of which tax were previously assigned as a security to the bondholders of the Ottoman Loan of 1862.

A memorandum upon the subject from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, who is now in this country, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Council of Bondholders. The former papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the bondholders may be properly informed that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople will be instructed to use his good offices in support of a request on their part that the Ottoman Government shall allow the Syndicate to exercise its functions in the manner contemplated by the original contract, but that your Lordship must decline to comply with the request of the Committee, "that your Lordship should instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador to request the Ottoman Government at once to pay in the sums now due for the current half-year, in accordance with the terms of the contract."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as far as we can judge, there are no provisions in the new Turkish law which your Lordship has been pleased to submit to us calling for any observation. It does not appear to be intended to place foreigners in any different position from that which they now enjoy by Treaty, and indeed Article 5, by inference, preserves their rights. My Lord,

WE are are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th April, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers marked in the margin, relative to certain alterations intended to be made in regard to certain fees levied at Her Majesty's Consulate-General at Constantinople.*

That in the draft of the proposed new Order in Council sent therewith a fee of 10*s.* instead of 5*s.* was inserted, as directed in the last instructions to Sir Philip Francis, for the service of applying for ships' Firmans. Your Lordship considered, however, that in order to prevent doubt or dispute the clause had better be to the following effect, namely, a charge of 5*s.* for each application for a Firman or Firmans for each vessel. Your Lordship also thought that as the Harbour-master's present fee or gratuity, referred to in the first instruction to Sir Philip Francis, which is henceforth to cease, was not received on account of Her Majesty's Government, it might not be necessary to advert to it in the new Order in Council.

Lord Enfield was pleased further to say that he was accordingly to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and amend the draft Order to the above effect, unless, in regard to the latter point, the Harbour-master's present fee, we are of opinion that reference should be made to it, and in that case he was to state, for our information, that it is a customary payment, not received in virtue of any authorization from the Foreign Department, but in accordance with a general usage on the part of Harbour-masters of foreign Powers at Constantinople, and that it varied in amount usually in some proportion to the tonnage of vessels.

Lord Enfield also added that the draft Order, when approved by us, would be submitted to Her Majesty in Council.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have made the alteration in the sum to be charged for obtaining Firmans in accordance with your Lordship's direction. We have made no further alteration. Understanding that the fees proposed to be abolished in the draft Order as it stands, are in fact to be abolished, it seems to us best to state their abolition on the face of the Order, so as to remove all possible ground for suggesting Government authority for them.

Lord Enfield was pleased also to say that other papers, as marked in the margin, were inclosed,[†] in which, with reference to the case, the general question was raised as to the protection which could properly be afforded to persons in Turkey who, not being themselves British subjects, might be acting as agents for firms in this country; and added that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the matter, and also with any remarks which we might have to offer on Sir P. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, stating that Feroz Shah, the son of the King of Delhi, who played a prominent part in the Indian mutiny, is now residing at Constantinople;[*] and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government should take steps for his arrest, and if so, what would be the proper course to pursue.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, whether Her Majesty's Government should take steps for the arrest of Feroz Shah must, in our opinion, depend upon the effect which his arrest would produce in India, and upon the present state of things in India respecting the mutiny. We are not sufficiently informed upon those two points to be able to advise your Lordship upon the real expediency of arresting Feroz Shah, but we would suggest that, unless some just and certain good or evil consequences would follow from his being arrested on one hand, or his not being interfered with on the other, Her Majesty's Government should take no notice of Feroz Shah's residence at Constantinople.

The India Office, however, may be able to give your Lordship the information upon which you will form the right judgment as to the course to pursue.

We are not informed with sufficient accuracy what were the exact relations between British Government and the King of Delhi to be able to say with certainty how far the the son of the King of Delhi can be treated as a British subject, and if the arrest of Feroz Shah be determined on we are of opinion that application should be made to the Porte in the manner pointed out by Sir H. Elliot.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers relative to the marriages in Ottoman dominions of Maltese subjects of Her Majesty, and to the difference of opinion entertained by the Registrar-General and Sir P. Francis as to their exemption from the provisions of the Consular Marriage Act; and he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the application of the Consular Marriage Act to Maltese and Colonial British subjects generally.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We think the Consular Marriages Act provides a way of marrying of which British subjects, colonial or not, may, if they please, avail themselves. But that the Act (see section 21) does not oblige British subjects to marry in all cases under its provisions if valid marriages can be had independently of the Act, either by a lex loci, or under the general law, or by other law peculiar to the parties marrying.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 29th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying memorandum, with its inclosures, which had been communicated to your Lordship by the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, who had also applied to your Lordship to instruct Her Majesty's Consul at Damascus by telegraph to prevent the person referred to, Joseph Joshua, leaving that place, or selling his property, pending the commencement of legal proceedings in the Consular Court; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the matter into immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be taken therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the bank is of course at liberty to take what measures they think fit to secure the immediate action of the Consular Court against Mr. Joshua.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, relative to a question which had arisen as to the right of British subjects to participate in the coasting trade of the Ottoman Empire.

That he (Lord Tenterden) inclosed a memorandum, with its inclosures, which had been prepared at the Foreign Office, bearing on that subject; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador in the matter.

That we would preceive that the three principal points to be considered were the right to the coasting trade as regarded goods; secondly, as regarded passengers; and the question of the limits to be assigned to the port of Constantinople.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople may be instructed to insist upon the right of British ships to the coasting trade within the Ottoman dominions as regards both goods and passengers.

This right being derived from Article I of the Treaty of 1861,* and the Treaties between Belgium and Turkey, 1838, Article XI,† and between Greece and Turkey, 1855, Article X, and indirectly from Article XIX of the Treaty of 1861.‡

There is not, in our opinion, anything unreasonable in the contention of the Ottoman Gouernment that the Bosphorus contutstitutes the Port of of Constantinople.

That the navigation within the limits of that port should be subject to the restrictions imposed by the Ottoman Government is not inconsistent with any Treaty stipulations, and Her Majesty's Ambassador may be instructed to concede that point if insisted upon.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers relative to an alleged traffic in slaves between the north coast of Africa and Constantinople through Malta.

That he was more especially to draw our attention to Sir P. Francis' letters of the 19th and 26th September, inclosed in Sir H. Elliot's despatch of the 28th of that month, and to the remarks made on those letters by Sir C. Straubenzee in his despatch which formed the inclosure in the Colonial Office letter of the 30th ultimo; and he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, together with the others, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the correctness of the views of Sir P. Francis.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the views of Sir P. Francis, expressed in his letters of the 19th and 26th September last, are practically correct, and are not practically different from those entertained by Sir C. Straubenzee.

Sir C. Straubenzee and Sir P. Francis both agree that the buying and selling, receiving and carrying on board ships, persons known to be, or to be intended to be, slaves, is an offence. The observation of Sir P. Francis that the matter rests with the police and ships' agents at Malta and Stamboul show this to be his meaning, and Sir C. Straubenzee states his understanding of the law to be precisely the same.

Both agree that where the blacks supposed to be slaves assert that their condition, whatever it may in reality be, is voluntary, the law cannot take effect. And we presume this state of things suggested to Sir P. Francis the expression "voluntary subjection," as something not identical with slavery.

Your Lordship will best appreciate the illustration of "voluntary subjection" given by Sir P. Francis in the case of a Turk travelling with his family, of whom some at least are in a sense slaves. But we would observe upon that the great difficulty of carrying into execution in the Levant the most rigid interpretation of Acts against a Slave Trade.

We regret to have troubled your Lordship at unusual length, but, whilst we agree with the ideas entertained by Sir C. Straubenzee, we could not, without going into some detail, report that we at the same time considered the views of Sir P. Francis to be also correct.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 15th December ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Russell Gurney, marked "Private," and inclosing the memorial presented to the Claims Commission in the case of Mr. Barclay, together with the demurrer to the claim which had been filed on the part of the United States' Government; and Viscount Enfield was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion on the points raised by Mr. Gurney.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that a natural-born subject of Great Britain is not personally debarred from a locus standi before the Commissioners under Article XII of the Treaty of Washington by the circumstance that he has acquired an American domicile under the law of nations, although it may well be that his claim for compensation may be materially affected by that circumstance.

and that he was to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with any observation we might have to offer thereupon.

That since the said memorandum had been drawn up, a further letter had been received from Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode, which was transmitted therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

With reference to the memorandum of the 16th January, 1872, we may explain that we thought it desirable, before considering the validity of the claims of Messrs. Leech and Co., to ascertain that they had not by their own neglect precluded themselves from now bringing forward such claims. This being now ascertained, we think that, before any further step is taken, it is necessary to inquire into the particulars of such claims, as the statements already furnished are not sufficiently detailed to enable us to advise as to so much of the claims as relates to the goods destroyed by the Federal troops.

With regard to the cotton destroyed by the Confederates, no claims would have been admitted by the Commission at Washington if the acts complained of had been committed within the period mentioned in the XIIth Clause of the Treaty, and therefore no representation to the United States' Government should be made as to that portion of Messrs. Leech and Co.'s claims. We recommend that Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode should be requested to furnish your Lordship with full particulars of all the circumstances under which the destruction of their cotton by the Federal forces on the 17th and 18th April, 1865, took place. That when such particulars are furnished your Lordship will consider whether your Lordship can properly direct Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to recommend this part of their claim to the favourable attention of the United States' Government.

My Lord, Temple, February 17, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 9th February and the 17th July, 1871, upon the subject of the measures to be taken to give effect by legislation to the Treaties recently concluded with the United States and with Portugal for the abolition of the Slave Trade Mixed Commission Courts, he was directed to refer to us the drafts of two Bills prepared with this object by the Government draughtsman.

That in calling our particular attention to Mr. Jenkyns' observations upon the incorrect use of the term "maritime prize," as applied to slave ships, as necessary in order to bring the Bill into harmony with the Convention with the United States, Lord Enfield was pleased to inquire whether we can advise Her Majesty's Government to submit both Bills to Parliament for sanction.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as regards the Bill to carry into effect the Convention with Portugal, subject to certain amendments noted in the margin, we think the Bill correct, and that it may be submitted to Parliament.

With reference to the Bill to carry into effect the Convention with the United States and Mr. Jenkyns' observations to which our attention is directed, we think it is not the duty of the Government draughtsman to prepare a Bill which he himself is of opinion is "incorrect," and "a mere evasion of the terms of a Convention" with a foreign Power, which this Government is bound to carry into effect in its integrity. It is needless to say that we cannot advise Her Majesty's Government to submit such a Bill to Parliament, and we are the more surprised that such a Bill should have been sent to us for approval, after the clear opinion given by the Law Officers in February 1871, which appears to have been treated with total disregard by Mr. Jenkyns and Mr. Rothery.

We have made the necessary alterations in the draft Bill, which, as we have altered it, we think may be submitted to Parliament.

We think it desirable that in future the procedure in cases of slave trading should be assimilated to that which obtains in all ordinary cases of maritime prize.

My Lord, Temple, February 17, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Sir E. Thornton (No. 42), respecting Mr. Hansard's claims against the United States' Government on account of cotton belonging to him which had been destroyed by the United States' forces in 1865.

That we would perceive the first of these claims related to some cotton which he had purchased in partnership with a Mr. Hughes, of Georgia, and that it was destroyed between the 16th and 19th April, 1865.

And that the second claim related to some cotton bought by Mr. Hansard on his own account, forty-six bales of which were seized by order of a special Agent of the United States' Treasury during the month of December 1865.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was also to transmit to us a previous despatch of Sir E. Thornton's (No. 277), forwarding a copy of a Bill that had been submitted to the United States' Senate in December last, proposing to authorize the Government to compensate those persons whose cotton may have been seized after June 1865; and further, to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Sir E. Thornton in regard to Mr. Hansard's claims.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Sir E. Thornton should be instructed to decline to present Mr. Hansard's earlier claim to the United States' Government, and to inform Mr. Hansard that your Lordship is of opinion that his earlier claim was not presentable to that Government at any time, by reason of Mr. Hughes, of Georgia, having a joint interest in the claim; and his later claim ought to have been submitted by Mr. Hansard in due time to the Court of Claims, and that his alienage was in fact no bar to his bringing his later claim before that Court. But it is stated by Mr. Hansard in effect that this claim was brought before a Government Department at Washington, which had allowed it, when an Act was passed by Congress which prevented payment. Before advising as to what should be done in respect of this second claim, we think that details should be furnished to your Lordship to show when and how this claim was brought before the United States' Government, and when and by whom it was allowed, and what documentary evidence there is to prove that the claim was entertained or allowed by any Department of that Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington calling attention to the Report of the Commissioners of Claims under the Act of Congress of the 3rd March, 1871, which accompanies Sir E. Thornton's other despatches, therewith inclosed, as regards the presentation of claims of foreigners domiciled in the United States during the late civil war on account of stores or supplies taken from them for the use of the army of the United States; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the decision of the Commissioners of Claims as to the proper interpretation to be given to the Act of Congress of the 3rd March, 1871, is, in our opinion, correct as regards the claims of domiciled foreigners.

We are of opinion, however, that domiciled foreigners, although they are not within thes cope of the Act of Congress of the 3rd March, 1871, and although, according to strict international law, they are not entitled to claim compensation for losses sustained from the military operations of the belligerents, are not debarred from appealing to the equity of the United States' Government on the ground that a domiciled foreigner who conforms himself to the laws of the country is usually considered as entitled to the same protection or compensation for injury from acts of violence which is accorded by its Government to the loyal citizens of the country.

Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode (March 4), forwarding a detailed statement accompanied by affidavits of their claim against the United States' Government for the destruction of their cotton by the Agents of that Government in April 1865; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to this claim.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the former correspondence for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we cannot recommend your Lordship to present this claim to the United States' Government. The claim is stated to be for cotton burnt during the civil war. It appears from the affidavits that the warehouses in which the cotton was stored were, together with their contents, burned by United States' troops under the command of one Colonel Garrard.

There is nothing to show why the warehouse was burnt except that it is stated to have been done by the order of General Wilson, the superior officer; under these circumstances, it must be presumed to have been a regular operation of war, and, therefore, not entitling a neutral to claim compensation for goods so destroyed.

That it would appear that Mr. Trenchard referred his claim to Mr. Henry Howard at Washington, who returned it to him as not coming within the provisions of the Treaty of the 8th May, 1871; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Trenchard.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the case of Mr. Trenchard is clearly not within the scope of the Treaty of Washington. On the other hand, if the seizure took place two months after the declaration of peace, it would clearly be a wrongful seizure if it was made on the pretext that the cargo was contraband of war.

We should advise that some inquiry should be made of Her Majesty's Consul at Charleston as to the circumstances of the seizure, and that Mr. Trenchard should be informed that Her Majesty's Government will give due consideration to his statement, and, after the necessary inquiry, will communicate further with him.

Temple, March 20, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, on a question which had been raised as to the proper interpretation to be placed upon the XIVth Article of the Treaty of Washington.

That that Article, which was practically identical with the IIIrd Article of the Claims Convention of the 8th February, 1859, stated that "Every claim shall be presented to the Commissioners within six months from the day of their first meeting, unless in any case where reasons for delay shall be established to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and then, and in any such case, the period for presenting the claim may be extended by them to any time not exceeding three months longer.

It appeared that the Washington Commissioners considered that under that Article no application from any claimant for extension of time for the presentation of a claim could be received after the expiration of the first period of six months, unless notice of his claim, or at least of his intention to make a claim, had been given within that period.

On the other hand, it would be seen on referring to the accompanying volume p. 112 et seq.) that under the Convention of 1853 claims were presented "on leave" after the expiration of the six months period.

That it was not stated when that leave was obtained, but there was no trace of any application for leave before the expiration of the six months; and Sir Edmund Hornby, who was the British Commissioner at the time, believed that no such application was made, but that the practice was to receive any claim made within the further period of three months, if proper reasons for delay were given.

That the period of six months under the present Treaty expired on the 26th instant, and that your Lordship would therefore be glad to be informed whether in our judgment the interpretation placed on the words of the Treaty Article by the London Commission of 1853, or that now given to them by the Washington Commission, was the right one; and in the former case, your Lordship requested our opinion as to the precise instructions, if any, which should be furnished by telegraph to Her Majesty's Agent to prevent any injury arising to British claimants.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our judgment, the interpretation placed on the words of the Treaty Article by the London Commission of 1853 is the right one. The persons who establish reasons for delay are expressly excepted from the obligation of claiming within the period of six months, and there is nothing in the Article except the word "extended" which could be alleged to show that any application for further time or any notice of a claim was to be made within the six months, but we think it an unwarrantable construction of the words of the Article to infer this from the mere use of the word "extended." The word "extended" we think is used in regard to the further period to be granted as defining its limit, and does not refer merely to the original time, so that the Article means a further time may be granted, and that there is no difference between "a further time" and an "extension of time," or an "enlargement of time."

A judicial interpretation of similar expressions has frequently taken place in the Courts of Chancery; thus the general order of the 7th August, 1852, as to the appeals, is, "No appeal from any decree, &c., shall be allowed unless the same is set down and the requisite notice served within five years from the date of such decree, &c., but the Lord Chancellor or Lords Justices shall be at liberty, when it shall appear to him or them, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, to be just and expedient, to enlarge that period." The practice under this order has been settled to allow of an application for leave to appeal to be made after the expiration of the period of five years. So as to the word

"extended" used in the 25 & 26 Vict., cap. 89, sec. 124, which, after allowing appeals, proceeds as follows:—

"Subject to this restriction, that no such rehearing or appeal shall be heard unless notice of the same is given within three weeks after any order complained of as being made in manner in which notices of appeal are ordinarily given according to the practice of the Court appealed from, unless such time is extended by the Court of Appeal."

Under this section the practice is in a proper case to extend the time for appeal, i.e., to give leave to appeal, although the application to extend is not made till after the twenty-one days. We are of opinion that Her Majesty's Agent should be instructed to insist before the Commissioners that they had the power to grant, and ought to grant, further time to all claimants where reasons for delay shall be established to their satisfaction, although no notice of the claim has been given befor the expiration of the six months, and to support his contention by reference to the practice of the Commission of 1853 and of the English Court of Chancery in the instances above referred to.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 27th November last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Stewart (March 25), inclosing copy of an amended memorial respecting his claim against the United States' Government which he had forwarded to Washington to be submitted to the Commissioners.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) transmitted to us, for our convenience, the previous correspondence with Mr. Stewart;* and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Stewart.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly inform Mr. Stewart that you see no reason to alter the opinion conveyed in your Lordship's letter of the 30th January last.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th April instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 4th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Stewart (April 12), requesting to be informed, whether Her Majesty's Government will "in urging his claims upon the United States' Government, insist amongst other points upon the belligerent rights of the Confederate Government;" and to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

Mr. Hammond also stated that the former papers relating to Mr. Stewart's claim were annexed for convenience of reference.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 19.)

Temple, April 19, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to a letter from Mr. J. M. Vernon (March 21), respecting his claim against the United States, together with the answer which your Lordship caused to be returned to it (April 9), and also to send to us a despatch from Sir E. Thornton (No. 190), forwarding correspondence on the same subject; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether any further steps should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That it seems, from the correspondence between Sir Edward Thornton and Mr. Fish, that Mr. Vernon is regarded by the Government of the United States as a person formerly engaged in active and persevering efforts to assist the cause of the Confederate States, in one of which he lived for some time, if he was never naturalized as an American citizen. Mr. Vernon's own letter to your Lordship of the 21st March, 1872, is apparently perfectly consistent with Mr. Fish's statements. Nor is there anything in these papers to contradict them. We gather that no practical obstruction is likely to be given by the American Government to any movements of Mr. Vernon having for their object the furtherance of his claim, whether that claim be well or ill founded. And under these circumstances we cannot advise your Lordship further to press that Government to release Mr. Vernon formally from the pledges which he has given. He appears to aim at no other definite or practical object in his communications to your Lordship.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th February, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Thornton, forwarding a letter from Mr. Hansard giving further details, which, in accordance with our advice, he (Mr. Hansard) had been requested to furnish in regard to his second claim against the United States' Government; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the paper into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in respect to this claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think Sir E. Thornton may be properly instructed to support Mr. Hansard's second claim diplomatically, by making such representations respecting it to the United States' Government as will, in your Lordship's judgment, be most likely to induce that Government to provide for the payment of the claim.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, asking for instructions in the case of Mr. McLeod's claim against the United States' Government on account of the detention of his schooner "Mary Agnes;" and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the claim of Mr. McLeod is not one which ought to be supported diplomatically by Her Majesty's Government. It appears the schooner "Mary Agnes," in respect of the seizure of which the claim for costs and damages is made, was seized for a wilful breach of the then revenue laws of the United States, but that, fortunately for Mr. McLeod, the owner, the Statute under which the vessel was seized was repealed after the seizure and before the institution of the suit for condemnation. Under these circumstances, the Court dismissed the suit without costs, and we think this decision in accordance with the justice of the case.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th April instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 19th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Thornton (No. 216), inclosing a further letter from Mr. J. M. Vernon, on the subject of his wish to be released from his pledge not to return to the United States; and to request that we would take the paper into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir E. Thornton in regard to it.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to add that the former papers were returned therewith for convenience of reference.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the further papers sent to us by your Lordship do not lead us to change or modify the opinion we expressed in our Report of the 19th of this month. Mr. Vernon is apparently subject to no practical hindrance to the presentation of his claim, nor is he likely to be so. But it does not appear to be a case in which it is reasonable to expect the Government of the United States formally to release him from pledges which he has given them.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington (No. 213), inquiring what course he should pursue respecting the claim of the owner of the British brig "Sarah

Thornton on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the owners of the "Sarah M. Newhall," having omitted to pursue the ordinary and obvious course of appealing if they were not satisfied with the measure of justice afforded them by the Admiralty Court of the United States, have no ground for calling upon Her Majesty's Government to endeavour to obtain for them diplomatically that which, but for their own conduct, they might probably at least have obtained by ordinary course of law.

My Lord,
Temple, May 10, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th May instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Bateson, Robinson, and Co. (May 3), requesting the interference of Her Majesty's Government on behalf the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co. against the United States' Government, which the British Agent to the Claims Commission had declined to present, on the ground that it arose out of acts committed after the 9th April, 1865; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to the claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the claim made in this case appears to be beyond the scope of the Treaty of Washington, but, on the assumption that the statements in the memorial admit of no contradiction or explanation, to be one which in itself it might be quite proper for Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to present for the favourable consideration of the United States' Government. It is, however, a curious and suspicious circumstance that certain assignees of the claim, and not the persons themselves injured, are now prosecuting it, and invoking the aid of Her Majesty's Government. And it seems to us that Her Majesty's Government are not called upon to interfere in favour of assignees, when the persons who have sustained the alleged injury have so long been, and remain, quiescent.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that with reference to previous correspondence in regard to Mr. Stewart's claim against the United States' Government, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us copies of three further letters from that gentleman; and he was to request us to take them into consideration, together with former papers, which, for our convenience, were inclosed, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Stewart.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is quite evident that Mr. Stewart is contemplating the bringing an action against your Lordship, and we think the best course is for your Lordship to inform him that he is at liberty himself to obtain an opinion from Sir Roundell Palmer upon the question if he thinks proper to do so, but that your Lordship cannot accede to terms of compromise of his claim, and sees no reason to alter the opinion expressed in the letters of the 30th January and the 9th and 23rd April last. That if Mr. Stewart, on consideration, desires the whole of his claims to be withdrawn, and will make a request to your Lordship to that effect, such request will be complied with.

My Lord,
Temple, May 27, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating, with reference to our letter of the 18th March, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, forwarding a Report from the Consul at Charleston as to the circumstances of the seizure of the barque "Nutfield," on which Mr. Trenchard's claim against the United States' Government was founded; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which should be pursued with regard to the claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears, from the information supplied by Mr. Consul Walker, that Mr. Trenchard's original claim on the ground of a seizure of his ship the "Nutfield" is entirely without foundation.

We think the claim, the only one which has any existence in fact, for damage to some bales of cloth seized and afterwards restored by the Customs is, considering the mis-statements of Mr. Trenchard, one which your Lordship may properly decline to press.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Howard, stating that the Claims Commissioners had agreed that their next meeting should be held at Newport, Rhode Island, on the 11th September next.

That the XIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington (copy inclosed) provides that the Commissioners "shall meet at Washington at the earliest convenient period after they have been respectively named," and says nothing with regard to adjournment to any other place, whereas, in the case of the Alabama Claims Assessors, it is specified in Article X of the Treaty that "The Board of Assessors shall be organized in Washington, with power to hold their sittings there, or in New York, or in Boston."

That your Lordship thought it possible that objection might be taken to the decisions of the Commission if given at a place other than that mentioned in the Treaty; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion on the point in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as no provision is made for the meeting of the Commissioners at any place other than Washington, we are of opinion that they cannot, for the purposes of the Treaty, meet at any place except Washington, and that any decision which they may give, save at Washington, will be open to discussion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

Temple, July 1, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Isaac Parr, complaining of the refusal of Mr. Howard to present the memorials of Isaac Parr, William Parr, and Elizabeth Luck to the Claims Commission; and that he was to request us to take this letter into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the facts related in the memorials are such that Mr. Howard was right in not presenting them to the Commission, and that your Lordship may return an answer to that effect upon the first part of the letter to your Lordship from Mr. Isaac Parr.

As to the second part of the letter, in which Mr. Parr begs your Lordship to intercede with the Government of the United States on behalf of the memorialists, irrespective of the Treaty of Washington, we think your Lordship may inform Mr. Parr that further particulars and evidence should be furnished of the losses and injuries which are alleged to have arisen from the conduct of the United States' authorities after the close of the war, these being the only losses and injuries as to which any action can be taken.

As to Isaac Parr, he does not state whether the armed persons who hung him were or were not soldiers of the United States, or under whose authority they acted.

As to the losses of property after the war, it would seem that the property in question was in the possession of the Confederate authorities at the close of the war, having been seized by the Confederate troops during the war and taken from them, and not from Messrs. Parr; and if this were so, no claim could be maintained against the United States' Government; but the statements in the memorials are not very clear.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating, with reference to our letter of the 23rd May, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Stewart, inquiring the reason of the omission from the memorial presented on his (Mr. Stewart's) behalf by Mr. Howard to the Claims Commissioners of certain portions of his claim; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take that paper into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Stewart's letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the claim for 52,071 dol. 52 c. which forms the subject of Mr. Stewart's letter to your Lordship appears to be for money current in the southern part of the United States in 1864, amounting to the original claim of Mr. Stewart.

We presume this means Confederate currency.

Your Lordship may, therefore, properly refer Mr. Stewart to your letter to him of the 30th January, 1872, for the reason why this part of his claim has been withdrawn by Mr. Howard.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 6.)

My Lord,

Temple, July 6, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating, with reference to our letter of the 3rd ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter of from Mr. Russell Gurney relative to the proposed adjournement of the Claims Commission to Newport; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether there was any objection to the Commission holding meetings at Newport, provided its awards were delivered at Washington.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That no place being named in the Treaty except Washington for the meetings of the Claims Commissioners for the purposes of the Treaty, we are of opinion that formal meetings of the Commission at Newport should not be held. It may be worth while, however, to suggest that there is no objection to meetings of the Commissioners, as individuals, at Newport or elsewhere, and that at such meetings informal discussions as to the principles of decision, and even on the matter of the claims themselves, may take place without objection.

These informal meetings may possibly facilitate and expedite the business to be transacted at formal meetings of the Commission.

These informal meetings, however, must not be attended by the Agents or Counsel of either party, nor be made matter of record, inasmuch as all formal meetings and acts of the Commission must, we think, to be within the Treaty, take place only at Washington.

My Lord, Temple, July 10, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 5th ultimo, on the claim of Messrs. Shand and Higson against the United States' Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Bateson, Robinson, and Morris, forwarding evidence in support of the claim; and that he was to request us to take that paper into consideration, in connection with the former correspondence, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which should be pursued in regard to the claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in the absence of excuse for the burning of the warehouses where the cotton was stored at Columbus, the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co. seems from the evidence now supplied by Messrs. Bateson, Robinson, and Co. to be one which it may be quite proper for your Lordship to have presented to the favourable consideration of the United States' Government; the claim is not within the Treaty of Washington, and the United States' Government may probably be able to explain satisfactorily why the warehouses were burned after the war was over, an act which appears to have been one of wanton destruction.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 4th instant, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Stewart, stating that he was unwilling to withdraw his claim against the United States' Government without some compensation; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take this letter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the previous papers for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this letter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Stewart may be told, in answer to his letter of the 15th instant, that he is aware, from Lord Enfield's letter of the 30th January last, of the reasons why part of his claim has been withdrawn; and that your Lordship cannot make Mr. Stewart any compensation for his withdrawing his claim, either in the whole or in part, against the United States' Government.

My Lord, Temple, August , 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th day of August instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 5th ultimo, as to the question of the meeting of the Claims Commission at Newport, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a telegram from Mr. Howard, stating that the Commissioners, at their last meeting, formally adjourned to Newport, and inquiring whether there would be any objection to their meeting there, in order to re-adjourn to Washington, or whether he should take any steps to protest against such meeting.

Mr. Hammond further stated that he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Mr. Howard on that point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that there is no objection to the Claims Commissioners meeting at Newport, in the manner and for the purposes which were pointed out by your Lordship's letter to Mr. Howard of the 6th July, 1872, and also for the purpose of adjourning or fixing their next formal and official meeting to and at Washington.

Mr. Howard should, in our opinion, be instructed not to file any protest or take any action before the meeting of the Claims Commissioners at Newport.

And the meeting should, as we had the honour of reporting to your Lordship on the 21st June last, be considered in all respects to be outside the Treaty, and arranged by the Commissioners for their own convenience.

My Lord,
Temple, September 2, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that placards, similar to the one he then inclosed, had been numerously posted up in the neighbourhood of the London and St. Katherine Docks, and he was to request that we would consider the same, and acquaint your Lordship whether the matter afforded any sufficient grounds for remonstrating with the American Government or with the American Minister in this country.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we can see no legal objection to the placard.

But your Lordship might properly, in our opinion, call the attention of the American Minister in this country to the placard, and press upon him that any British subject who may engage to serve on board the "Wabash," or any other United States' ship, should be so engaged subject to being discharged in the event of a war between the United States and Great Britain, or between the United States and any country with which Great Britain may be at peace.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may instruct Sir E. Thornton to bring the case of the barque "Grace" again to the attention of the United States' Government, and to urge that since the result of the trial of the United States' Judge Campbell, at Savannah, shows that the subjects and the property of the subjects of a friendly Power have suffered, in the former case, treatment no less than persecution, and in the latter case great, though indirect damage, from the irregular and informal proceedings of a Court of the United States, compensation should be made by the Government of the United United States to the persons who have been injured by those proceedings.

That the course suggested by the United States' Commission, of attempting to make the Judges of the Court liable in damages by actions, is not the remedy suitable where, as in the present case, a gross outrage has confessedly been committed by a Court of Justice against the persons and interests of the subjects of a foreign Power.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th September instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 28th May, 3rd June, 5th July, and 9th August, respecting the question of holding at Newport the sittings of the Mixed Commission under the Treaty of Washington, he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that, in anticipation of the Commission not having completed its labours before the ensuing summer, when the setting in of the unhealthy season would necessitate a suspension of its sittings at Washington, Sir Edward Thornton had suggested that the meetings of the Commission might be held somewhere out of Washington, but the formal documents, such as awards, to be signed at Washington.

Mr. Hammond further stated that Sir Edward Thornton said that Mr. Fish sees no objection to informal meetings, attended by the Agents and Counsel, being held at Newport and elsewhere; and that he was to request that we would consider the matter, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether, if Mr. Fish would agree to an exchange of notes to that effect between the two Governments, such an arrangement would be satisfactory, and the validity of awards under the Treaty of Washington would, under such circumstances, be not liable to be called in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered the matter referred to us and have the honour to report—

That if the two Governments exchange notes agreeing to the arrangement proposed by Sir E. Thornton, and the meetings of the Commission be held according to that arrangement, the awards made under the terms so agreed upon will not, in our opinion, be liable to question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Manley Hopkins should be informed that the claim of the Hawaiian Government is inadmissible in law.

No neutral has a right to complain of another neutral for furnishing means or munitions of war (whether men or materials) to a belligerent. It makes no difference that the belligerent who receives the supplies afterwards uses them to attack the subjects of a Power (either with or without a declaration of war) with which such belligerent was as peace when the supplies were furnished. The Power whose subjects were attacked without a declaration of war would have a claim for compensation on the belligerent, but none on the neutral who furnished the supplies.

My Lord, Temple, December 6, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that we had on several occasions been requested to favour your Lordship with our opinion in regard to claims brought forward by British subjects and others interested in vessels and property destroyed by the "Alabama" and vessel of that class, to be indemnified by Her Majesty's Government for their losses.

And that the communication which he (Mr. Hammond) inclosed, received from the Board of Trade, referred to such claims advanced by merchants and underwriters as are now put forward by the Salvage Association, and similar claims may be expected to be presented by other parties.

And that your Lordship was, therefore, desirous to learn our opinion generally upon the merits of the claims, on whatever ground they were preferred, and whether made on the strength of the award of the Tribunal of Arbitration at Geneva, or any other allegation, so that your Lordship might be prepared at once to deal with such cases, and, more immediately, to return an answer to the Board of Trade.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was therefore to request us to give the matter our earliest consideration, and report our opinion, and the grounds on which we may arrive at it, as to the liability of Her Majesty's Government to British subjects for the acts of the "Alabama" and other similar vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government is not liable to British subjects for the acts of the "Alabama" and other similar vessels.

1. The finding of the Tribunal of Arbitration of Geneva was based upon the principle of the obligations and duties of the British Government, as the Government of a neutral country, towards the subjects of a foreign belligerent Government.

That finding in no way and in no degree affected the duties or obligations of the British Government in respect to British subjects.

2. The British Government was under no obligation towards British subjects to prevent the sailing of the "Alabama" or other similar vessels, and was guilty of no negligence in those respects towards British subjects.

3. The acts of the "Alabama" and of other similar vessels were committed under a duly recognized belligerent flag; the Government under whose flag those acts were committed is alone liable for the commission of the acts of such commissioned vessels.

And the fact that such Government has ceased to exist does not place the liability on the British Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have not before us the former papers, which showed the title of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co., as assignees of Messrs. Johnson; nor have we the memorial of Messrs. Shand, or copies of the evidence in support of that memorial.

If the statement in the note of Mr. Fish to Sir E. Thornton of the 11th November, 1872, to the effect that Messrs. Johnson had no interest in the destroyed cotton, the claim of Messrs. Shand cannot be farther supported.

My Lord, Temple, December 16, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence which had passed between Mr. Howard, the Agent to the Claims Commission at Washington, and the Foreign Office, as to the testimony of Sir George Cartier, which was required to rebut certain statements made in two of the memorials from citizens of the United States presented to the Commission.

That we would see that it had been arranged that Sir George Cartier, who was now in this country, should give his evidence before the American Consul-General, at noon on the 7th January, and that Mr. Howard had given notice to that effect to the United States' Agent.

That we would find in Mr. Howard's despatch No. 70 of the 26th November, which was written before his (Mr. Hammond's) telegram communicating the above arrangement reached him, full particulars as to the regulations under which the evidence was to be taken, and we would see that he (Mr. Howard) recommended that Counsel should be appointed to examine Sir George Cartier.

And that your Lordship considered that Dr. Deane would be the proper person to take charge of the case; and he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request that, after taking the papers into consideration, we would agree with him as to the course that should be pursued, and advise your Lordship as to any farther steps that might be necessary, and specially whether it would be desirable to ask Lord Monck, or his Secretary to give confirmatory evidence, as suggested by Mr. Howard.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the course suggested by Mr. Howard may properly be followed, and that it would be desirable to obtain the evidence of Lord Monck or, if he cannot attend, then of his Secretary.

The papers should be in the hands of Counsel as soon as can be.

My Lord, Temple, February 10, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 23rd October last, on the subject of two outrages committed, at the instigation of General Pulgar, the President of the State of Zulia, on British subjects, Mr. Hammond was directed to state to me that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas availed himself of the discretionary power allowed him, and demanded the dismissal of General Pulgar as the best course to obtain redress. Mr. Hammond was now to transmit to me the accompanying despatch, and its inclosures, from Mr. Middleton, from which I should perceive that his demand has not been complied with; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any further steps that should be taken in the matter. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 25th November last, relative to the claim of Mr. Pierre Sora against the Government of Venezuela, for compensation for losses which he had sustained in consequence of the proceedings of the party in arms against the present Government of that Republic, Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to me the accompanying further letter from the claimant, and to request me to take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received March 12.)

My Lord, Temple, March 11, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington upon the subject of the claims of United States' citizens upon the Government of Venezuela, and the steps contemplated by the United States' Government with a view to obtain a settlement thereof. The draft to which this despatch is an answer, and a letter from Mr. Eastwick, the representative of British holders of Venezuelan bonds, were also inclosed, together with a memorandum showing the present state of affairs in regard to British American and other claims on Venezuela; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the character of the American claims on Venezuela, as explained to Sir Edward Thornton by Mr. Fish.

A despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, showing the respective positions of foreign claims on Venezuela at the end of last year, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the character of the first and second classes of claims on the part of the United States against Venezuela, as explained to Sir Edward Thornton by Mr. Fish, may, in my opinion, be properly regarded as international.

With regard to the third class of claims, I am unable to form an opinion of their character in the absence of all information as to the details of them. A similar remark will apply to the fourth class of claims, with the exception of the case of the American steamers, the seizure of which, under the circumstances set forth in the "Daily Patriot" of the 27th January, 1872, may properly be regarded as a fit subject of an international claim.

I have, &c.

Temple, June 3, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a correspondence relative to a seizure by the Colonial authorities at Trinidad of a sloop named the "Violet" on suspicion of being intended for the conveyance of warlike stores to Venezuela; and he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any notice should be taken of the proceedings of the Venezuelan Consul-General in connection with this matter.

That he was further to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion on the instructions which, as stated in the Colonial Office letter, the Earl of Kimberley proposed to address to the Governors of British Guiana and Grenada relative to the export of arms to Venezuela.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the correspondence inclosed in the letter from the Colonial Office does not show that the Venezuelan Consul-General at Trinidad was personally cognizant of or implicated in the manufacture or in having possession or intended conveyance of warlike stores to Venezuela, and that the letter to the Consul-General from Mr. Brooks of the 25th March, 1872, is for the present all the notice which need be taken of his proceedings.

If, however, it should come out in the trial before the Supreme Court in the matter of the seizure of the sloop "Violet," that the Consul-General acted illegally in respect to the warlike stores, it will be right to communicate with the Governments whose Consul he is at Trinidad, in order to his removal from his offices, and also to bring him to trial.

In reference to the second subject in Mr. Hammond's letter, we are of opinion that the instructions which Lord Kimberley proposes to address to the Governors of British Guiana and Grenada relative to the export of arms to Venezuela are sufficient.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 7.)

My Lord,

Temple, September 6, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence (see list) relative to the outrages committed at the instigation of General Venancio Pulgar, the President of the State of Zulia, and his brother Don Rafael Pulgar, on Mr. Joseph Harris and Mr. O'Connor.

That in the case of Mr. O'Connor, your Lordship had decided, on the advice of the late Queen's Advocate, that redress must be sought through the Courts of Venezuela. It was therefore unnecessary that we should pay any attention to such parts of the correspondence as related to that (Mr. O'Connor's) case.

That in regard to the case of Mr. Harris, we would see that, on the advice of the Queen's Advocate, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas was instructed to use his discretion whether to demand the dismissal of General Pulgar, or pecuniary compensation to Mr. Harris, and that Mr. Middleton adopted the former alternative.

That the Venezuelan Government, however, declined to dismiss General Pulgar at first, upon the ground that Mr. Harris was born in Venezuela, and was therefore a Venezuelan citizen, and subsequently, upon farther ground that he was illegitimate.

That under these circumstances, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion—

1. As to whether the demand for the dismissal of General Pulgar should be farther pressed; and,

2. As to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Middleton in reply to the last paragraph of his despatch No. 55 of the 1st instant, in regard to the exact line of conduct he (Mr. Middleton) should observe towards the children of British subjects born out of wedlock, but recognized by their father.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That the demand made by Her Majesty's Government for the dismissal of General Pulgar should not be farther pressed, since at the time when that demand was made Her Majesty's Government was acting on information that Mr. Harris was a British subject, which he is not.

2. That children born out of wedlock take their nationality from their mother at their birth, and will not acquire the rights of, and ought not to be treated as, British subjects when subsequently recognized by their father.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 12.)

My Lord,

Temple, November 12, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence relative to the case of Mr. Luciano Agostin, a British subject, who was arrested and imprisoned for fifty hours in July 1871, by the authorities at Caracas, in Venezuela, for having neglected to comply with an order to supply a baggage-horse for the public service.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be taken in the matter to which they related.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the order to supply a horse was served on the 1st July, 1871.

Mr. Middleton's letter to Señor Guzman, remonstrating against this order, was written on the same day. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Agostin was arrested on the 4th.

Mr. Middleton again remonstrated on the 5th, but the release was delayed on the excuse of a public holiday till the 6th.

Mr. Middleton's letter of the 23rd September, 1871, received no answer.

Mr. Middleton again wrote to Señor Barrios on the 23rd September, 1872, and received an answer dated 5th October, 1872, justifying the course followed by the Venezuelan Government, on the ground that Mr. Agostin had disobeyed a summons to appear before a Venezuelan authority, and treated the Venezuelan authorities with disrespect.

Mr. Agostin denies that he received any such notice as Señor Barrios seems to refer to, and Mr. Agostin also denies all disrespectful conduct towards the Venezuelan authorities.

If Mr. Agostin is to be relied on, and we see no reason to doubt his accuracy, we are of opinion, from the facts and dates above referred to, that an insult has, through Mr. Agostin, been thrown upon the British Government by the Venezuelan authorities, and that Mr. Middleton may be instructed to require an apology being made to the British Government, and reasonable compensation (the 3,000*l.* demanded by Mr. Agostin seems to us preposterous) be made to Mr. Agostin.

Temple, April 18, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which your Lordship had received from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, inclosing a Report, from the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Columbine," of the capture of a slave dhow attended by bloodshed and loss of life; and he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to how far Her Majesty's cruizers are entitled to enforce the liberation of slaves, and the surrender of resisting crews of slave dhows on those parts of the African coast where the Sultan's authority is merely nominal.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, considering the barbarous state of the country in question, and that the nominal Sovereign, although bound to suppress the Slave Trade, cannot fulfil his Treaty obligations on this part of the African coast, we think Her Majesty's cruizers may properly compel the liberation of slaves and the surrender of resisting crews on those parts of the African coast where the Sultan's authority is merely nominal, by the use of all necessary force.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received April 12.)

Temple, April 10, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence relative to the manner of dealing with the estates of intestate British subjects, more particularly seamen in Russia; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That from the various and not altogether consistent statements made in the long series of documents submitted to us, it is not easy to arrive with certainty at the facts on which your Lordship desires us to advise. From the despatches of Mr. Abbott it would appear that at least at Odessa the Russian authorities are in the habit of conceding to the English Consuls all reasonable power and authority in the matter of the goods of intestates, and from the concluding sentence of Mr. Hertslet's Report, it would seem that at Moscow in 1867 "a custom" existed in the assumed absence of Treaty rights whereby the English Consuls were allowed the practical control of the goods of intestate Englishmen dying there. All this is, however, inconsistent with the fair effect of the correspondence between Consul Carruthers, the English Chargé d'Affaires and the Russian Minister at St. Petersburgh. It is possible and even probable that the state of things on the subject varies according to the various characters and dispositions of the English and Russian functionaries in different parts of Russia. But the state of things at Taganrog, as narrated by Consul Carruthers, is a serious evil in itself to whatever cause it is to be ascribed, an evil well warranting, if you think fit, your Lordship's interference with the Russian Government to prevent its recurrence by means of new Treaty stipulations. We are of opinion that the XVth Article of the Treaty of 1859 would not give our Consuls the power they ought to have, because the very question of succession upon intestacy is specifically dealt with in the XIIIth Article of the same Treaty. But we think it only reasonable that if it be not the law of Russia it should become so by Treaty, that the Consuls should represent the family of such of his countrymen who die intestate, he being obliged, in order to maintain their rights, to submit to the same laws as any native Russian subject, but that the Consul should be allowed to stand in the place of the next of kin or heirs and represent them before the Russian Courts. This is, mutatis mutandis, the state of things which exist, or at least, under Treaties, may exist in England, and is therefore a state of things the legal allowance of which the English Government may fairly ask at the hands of a friendly Government.

Temple, April 11, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's memorandum of the 9th instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 4th instant, respecting the administration of the estates of intestate British subjects in Russia, he was desired to transmit the accompanying papers, with the request that they might be taken into consideration in connection with those already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Since writing our Report of yesterday, the 10th April, we have had the advantage of seeing the further papers sent to us by Lord Enfield on the 9th April. They do not induce us to make any substantial change in what we have already written.

Mr. Mitchell's memorandum confirms the view we had already expressed as to the effect on Consular rights of the most-favoured-nation clause in the French Treaty. But we gather both from his paper and from the despatch of Lord Augustus Loftus, that it is not impossible the Russian Government may be inclined to concede to English subjects some immunity from the inconvenient and oppressive provision of the Russian law in relation to intestacy as at present existing. And it would certainly be worth while to endeavour to obtain some relaxation of some of its provisions, especially that most inconvenient one, that two years must in all cases elapse before any administration can be had of the intestate's effects, a provision in the case of English sailors which is practically confiscation. It would be also very desirable to clothe the English Consuls with the official character of representatives of the deceased intestates for all purposes of obtaining administration.

Temple, July 22, 1872.

My Lord,

Is a State whose neutrality has been guaranteed so entirely independent in its relations with other Powers (whether such Powers are or not parties to the guarantee), as to admit of its entering into any engagements with them or any of them (or either category), bearing on its neutral character, without communicating with, or obtaining the concurrence of, the guaranteeing Powers?

In obedience to your Lordship's request we have the honour to report—

That a State whose neutrality has been guaranteed does not by reason of such guarantee lose its independence.

The guarantee is only an engagement on the part of the guaranteeing Powers that the neutrality shall not be violated from without.

Consequently the guaranteed State retains the paramount right of entering into any Treaty engagement with any other Power.

Where such new engagements defeat the object for which the neutrality was guaranteed or prejudicially affect the guaranteeing Powers or make the guarantee more onerous, such engagements should in good faith be communicated to the guaranteeing Powers, and these will be released from the guarantee unless they give their consent to the new engagements.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that an inquiry had been put to you by one of the Foreign Ministers at this Court whether a Secretary of a foreign Legation accused of blows and wounds ("coups et blessures") upon an English subject could be prosecuted before the English Courts.

And that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the answer which you should return to that inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that a Secretary of a foreign Legation (not being a British subject) accused of blows and wounds ("coups et blessures") upon an English subject could not be prosecuted before the English Courts.

| 45 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 2, 1873 | Judicial Reforms in Egypt. As to the proposed mode of selecting the Judges over the new Tribunals. Scheme of the Khedive may be carried out. The French proposal for a second French Judge of Appeal would give a preponderance, and would on that account be objectionable | 24 |
| 46 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 5, | As to the dispute between the Daïra of the Khedive and the Ramlé Railway Company. Course that should be pursued by Colonel Stanley, Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General. Her Majesty's Consular Court has no jurisdiction in the matter | 25 |
| 47 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July , | On complaint of Messrs. Barker and Co. against the Egyptian Government for destruction of the palisade surrounding their coal yard at Alexandria. They should be told Her Majesty's Government cannot support their claim | 25 |
| 48 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 21, | On claim of Mr. Samuel Hood against the Egyptian Government for 100*l*., on his arrest and detention by the police. Her Majesty's Government should not take any action in the case, as the soldiers who assaulted Mr. Hood were sufficiently punished | 25 |
| 49 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 1, | As to claim of Messrs. Joyce, of Alexandria, against the administrator of the Khedive's sugar estate, for the sale of damaged sugar. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere | 26 |
| 50 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further respecting the claim of Messrs. Joyce, of Alexandria. No reason to alter opinion already expressed | 26 |
| 51 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Sept. 30, | On complaint of Messrs. Bott and Co., for the non-fulfilment of a shipping contract on the part of the Egyptian Government with Messrs. Barker and Co., and also to the alleged detention of British vessels at Alexandria while loading ballast. Approves the case being brought before the Mixed Commercial Tribunal; but this claim, and that of Messrs. Wilson, should not be pressed on the Egyptian Government | 26 |
| 52 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 9, | Further respecting the complaints against the Ramlé Railway Company. No steps whatever should be taken as regards Mr. Schutz, a shareholder, and the original "concessionaire" | 27 |
| 53 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | Claim of Mr. Isaac Pariente on the Egyptian Government cannot be supported by Her Majesty's Government | 27 |
| 54 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 4, | Further respecting the complaint of the Ramlé Railway Company against the Egyptian Government. Her Majesty's Government cannot give assistance to Mr. Flemming or Mr. Hugh Rose, shareholders of the Company, and they may be told they must accept the responsibility of a Tribunal in Egypt | 28 |
| 55 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 5, | Further respecting the complaints of shareholders of the Ramlé Railway Company against the Egyptian Government. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere in the cases of Messrs. Wilson, M'Lay, and Co., or Mr. Bulkeley | 28 |
| 56 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | As to a case of disputed salvage at Suez, and the Tribunal before which it should be tried. To avoid delay, Her Majesty's Consul-General had been instructed to allow the case to go before the Egyptian Tribunal, and this Court has jurisdiction in the matter | 29 |
| 57 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 4, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Isaac Pariente against the Egyptian Government. No reason for Her Majesty's Government to support his claim when a remedy by way of appeal was open to him, which he declined to avail himself of | 29 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 58 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 7, 1873 | Proposed Treaty between France and Belgium, and Articles relating to the most-favoured-nation clause, and provision in case of the duty on raw materials not being imposed, and whether these would affect the Protocol about to be proposed to the French Government. No reason to alter the Protocol, as the clause is the same in both Treaties | 30 |
| 59 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | As to the French Treaty, Protocol, and the amendment in the wording to be proposed in the revised draft | 30 |
| 60 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 10, | The duties charged by the French authorities in the Gaboon River on goods transhipped from one vessel to another in transit for this country were properly levied | 31 |
| 61 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | As to the Protocol to be negotiated with the French Government with regard to the French Treaty. That proposed by the French Government too vague and ambiguous to be adopted. The proposal of Her Majesty's Government more preferable in form | 31 |
| 62 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | On claim of French Government brought before the Tariff Commission, by M. Ozenne, of the right to alter the scale of drawbacks in Annex No. 1 of Treaty of the 5th November, 1872. The question of drawbacks no longer an open question, but is decided by the Tariff in Annex 1 | 32 |
| 63 | Lord Chancellor.. | 19, | Opinion that as long as the Pouyer-Quertier clause remains the French Government cannot lay duties on raw materials so long as other foreign nations are not subject to compensatory duties on the introduction of raw materials. Necessity of the Protocol proposed being very clearly expressed | 32 |
| 64 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | Suggestion of Mr. Kennedy that notarial duties performed at Paris under 18 & 19 Vict., cap. 42, should be carried out at Her Majesty's Consulate, and not at the Embassy, is a good one, as an Embassy may refuse to perform notarial acts in the presence of a Consul | 33 |
| 65 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 24, | As to the difficulty a British subject at Havre had to register the birth of his son as Horace Richardson Goodday, on account of the French law prohibiting the "prénoms" of modern date being put on the register. Instructions might be given to Lord Lyons to obtain an alteration of the law as regards British subjects | 34 |
| 66 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | On claim of Mr. Hinton on the French Government on account of the occupation of the Hôtel des Bains at Cherbourg, of which he had a lease, by order of the French military authorities, during the war. Cannot suggest further steps to induce the French Government to pay to him the amount of the original sum awarded | 34 |
| 67 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 3, | As to the contract entered into before the war with Mr. Porter for gasworks, and correspondence with Mr. Brogden and Mr. Silverthorne on the subject. This case not one for representation to the French Government | 35 |
| 68 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | The "Exposé des Motifs" which prefaced the Projet de Loi, to enable the President of the Republic to ratify the Treaty of Commerce, will not invalidate the agreement as to the construction of the Treaty recorded in the interchange of notes of the 29th January | 35 |
| 69 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | On request of Messrs. Prévité and Greig to be relieved from paying the "surtaxe d'entrepôt" on a cargo of bitumen from Trinidad to London, and there transhipped to France. Her Majesty's Government should not bring the request before the French Government, as this is levied alike on French and English vessels | 36 |

| 70 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. , 1873 | As to the decision arrived at by the French Council of State in a prize case, that no other evidence is necessary to prove the neutral character of cargoes captured on board enemies' ships than that of the papers found on board. It would be a question for consideration whether a representation should be made, as a contrary practice is adopted in this country and America | 36 |
| 71 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | Further respecting the case of Mr. Porter, against whom legal proceedings had been taken in the French Courts, on account of certain gas contracts, and in which Mr. Brogden was implicated, and as to the reply to be sent to Mr. Silverthorne on behalf of Mr. Brogden. The case must be left to the French Tribunals | 37 |
| 72 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | On claim of Mr. David Jones for damage to his house and property at Blois, which the French Government refused to entertain. As to the instructions to be given to Lord Lyons. The claimant should apply to the proper authorities, as advised by M. de Rémusat | 37 |
| 73 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | April 25, | As to the form of representation to be sent by Lord Lyons to the French Government on the question of the appointment of Magistrates on the French shore of Newfoundland, and suggests the retention of the words relating to the "protection of the buildings of the fishermen" in the letter from the Colonial Office | 38 |
| 74 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 28, | Instructions that should be given to Mr. Kennedy, the British Representative at the Tariff Commission in Paris, on subject of the claims of importers of mineral oils into France. Points of differences may be referred to the Arbitrator | 39 |
| 75 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 16, | On complaint of Mr. Morrison of the fraudulent imitation in France of the British Government stamp affixed to his medicines, and request for the interference of Her Majesty's Government. He should give further information of the forgery, and, if found true, the French Government may be called on to punish the guilty parties | 40 |
| 76 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the liability of foreigners to military service in France. Lord Lyons need not take further steps in the matter | 40 |
| 77 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 7, | As to the Treaty of Frankfort between France and Germany having a perpetual most-favoured-nation clause | 41 |
| 78 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | As to the interpretation to be put on the XIth Article of the Treaty of Commerce, and the duration of the stipulation with regard to the most-favoured-nation treatment | 41 |
| 79 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | Draft of new Treaty of Commerce may be proposed and sent to Lord Lyons to negotiate. Parliamentary legislation will not be required | 42 |
| 80 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | As to course to be pursued by Lord Lyons on the application of Mr. Maugham, an English solicitor resident in Paris, who was appointed Commissioner to take evidence in a suit against the "Times" newspaper, and who wanted certain documents at the Préfecture de Police on the subject. The attorney to the parties in the suit should apply himself to the French authorities for the evidence | 42 |
| 81 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | Approve draft Treaty of Commerce with France and the draft note to French Government prescribing the subjects with which the Mixed Commission should deal. Suggestions with regard to Article III on question of mineral oils | 43 |
| 82 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 15, | Further respecting the Bill before the French National Assembly on the liability of foreigners to military service. Unofficial requisition should be made by Lord Lyons to obtain reciprocal privileges for British subjects | 43 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 83 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 18, 1873 | As to the action against the "Times" newspaper. Application for documentary evidence refused by French authorities unless applied for through Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris. Lord Lyons may request the French authorities for production of the documents and attendance of witnesses, but to state that he does so in accordance with the practice in similar requests by the Ambassador of a foreign Power | 44 |
| 84 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 16, | Further relative to the liability of foreigners to military service in France. Should concur in deferring making any further representations, as the Bill may not become law | 45 |
| 85 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | On passports having been obtained by two British subjects, named Ashton and Collins, from Her Majesty's Consulate at Nantes, in order to enable a Carlist General to pass with safety into Spanish territory. As to whether punishment can be awarded to the guilty parties. No indictment can be framed against them | 45 |
| 86 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Sept. 15, | On request of Consul at Havre to know whether a person acting for a Vice-Consul, holder of a marriage warrant, can legally solemnize marriages. A person holding such an office cannot solemnize marriages | 46 |
| 87 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Oct. 20, | On the proceedings of Mr. Bennett, the Premier of Newfoundland, in opening a lead mine at a spot on the French shore. Should concur in measures proposed to be taken by Lord Kimberley, as Treaties provide against permanent occupation | 46 |
| 88 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 20, | Further respecting the issue of passports to two British subjects from the British Consulate at Nantes for Carlist purposes. Her Majesty's Government may offer assistance to French Government by way of evidence, so as the offenders may be tried | 46 |
| 89 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | On the proceedings of Captain Miller, of Her Majesty's ship "Sirius," on a voyage round the Newfoundland fisheries, and the correspondence with French naval authorities in consequence; and whether the opinion of the Colonial Law Officer on the question in dispute between the British and French Governments was concurred in; and whether the Colonial Act 23 Vict., cap. 8, should be construed as if there had been a special reservation of Treaty rights in it; and as to the best mode of avoiding the difficulty above indicated. Concur in opinion of Law Officers of the 24th March, 1859, that the French have no right to the fishery in rivers, their rights being limited to fishing in the sea and on the coast, and they have no right to interrupt or molest any British subjects fishing for salmon or other fish in any river in Newfoundland; and agree generally with opinion expressed by Colonial Law Officer on the several questions involved | 47 |
| 90 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | On points connected with the commercial negotiations between Great Britain and France: 1st, on the subject of expertise and customs regulations in France; 2nd, whether the French Government would be justified under Treaties of 1860 and 1873, in event of excise duty on mineral oils of French production being imposed, they could be levied according to the illuminating power of the oil? | 51 |
| 91 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further relative to the question of the excise duties to be levied in France on British mineral oils proposed to be assessed according to the illuminating power of the oils. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in raising any objection to the proposed excise duties on oils manufactured in France | 52 |
| 92 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 5, | On disputes between Great Britain and France on subject of the Newfoundland fisheries. The words of the Treaties preclude the French from the right of fishery in the rivers, but give uninterrupted right of fishery along the sea-coast. The French, however, have not the exclusive right of fishing so as to make the act of fishing on the part of the British illegal, but the English cannot prevent the French from the right of fishing on the coast. The same waters are not to be fished in by both parties at the same time | 53 |

| 92* | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 5, 1873 | Approve drafts of letters to the Bradford Chamber of Commerce and Mr. K. B. Murray, of Paris, on the system of expertise and other customs matters, but suggests the addition of some words | 54 |
| 93 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | Remarks on proposed draft of Supplementary Treaty of Commerce with France and the draft instructions to Lord Lyons. Suggesting alterations | 54 |
| 94 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 10, | As to disputes that have arisen respecting the penalties imposed by the Act 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 45, which were alleged to be not in conformity with the Fishery Convention with France of 1867. Before any changes are made, the French Government should engage to give full effect to the XXXIst Article of the Convention | 55 |
| 95 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | As to steps to be taken by the Commission under the IVth Article of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation of July last relative to the mineral oil claims | 56 |
| 96 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Further respecting the claims for the reimbursement of duties on the grounds of warehousing or storage, levied in excess under provision of Article IV of the Treaty of July last | 56 |
| 97 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | On the draft of the Supplementary Convention of Commerce with France. Remarks on various Articles of the revised Convention, and suggesting alterations | 57 |
| 98 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | Further as to the legal power of a person acting for a British Vice-Consul to solemnize marriages under the 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68. Although the Vice-Consul may have a marriage warrant, a person acting for him cannot legally, under the Act, solemnize marriages | 58 |
| 99 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 12, | As to the instructions to be given to Mr. Kennedy with respect to the claims of the importers of mineral oils into France. Those of Young's Paraffin and Mineral Oils Company answered by former Reports | 58 |
| 100 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | The steps proposed to be taken by Mr. Kennedy in the Anglo-French Commission, with a view to settle the claims of the exporters of mineral oils to France, are right and proper | 59 |
| 101 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | Further relative to the consideration by the British and French Commission at Paris of the claims of the exporters of mineral oils. Cases in dispute may be referred to the Umpire | 59 |
| 102 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | On memorandum of Mr. Kennedy of the statements of the Sheffield and Derby Chambers of Commerce on the subject of fines, expertise, and value of goods, and their bearing on Article IV of the Convention of the 23rd January, 1860. Instructions to be given to Mr. Kennedy as to the interpretation to be put on the word "value," which means the price that the article cost the importer at the time he purchased it | 60 |
| 103 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | As to the trial of eight British seamen, crew of the "Mongol," at Bordeaux, on a charge of conspiracy and mutiny at sea. May be defended by an Avocat, and Consul Hunt should do all in his power to protect the men and communicate with the Consul at Havre, where the trial is likely to take place | 61 |

GENERAL.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 104 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 1, 1873 | As to the proposed amended Circular to Her Majesty's Ministers abroad on marriages between British subjects and foreigners. The parties should ascertain and conform to the requirements of the law of the country in which the marriage is to take place | |

| 105 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 6, 1873 | As to the instructions to be sent to Lord Odo Russell on subject of the registration in the British Embassy of the births of children of naturalized British subjects residing in Germany, whether naturalized in Great Britain or the Colonies. They should not be sent to other Missions .. | 62 |
| 106 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 16, | On question of the proposed re-marriage of Count Kergonët, a French citizen, and Miss Macpherson Aberbain, a British subject, before the British Consul at Brest, being contrary to the Marriage and Naturalization Acts, and subsequent intention of the parties being married at the British Embassy at Paris. Instructions may be given to Lord Lyons and Consul Rainals that when the parties have been married according to the lex loci, similar marriages may be performed at the British Embassies and Consulates .. | 63 |
| 107 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 9, | Case of the Marquise de Seraville, widow of a foreigner. Do not agree with the interpretation put on the 10th section of 33 Vict., cap. 14, by the Home Office, that a woman, being a natural-born British subject, retains her status as a British subject if, after being married to an alien, she becomes a widow before the passing of the Act, and a "statutory alien" after the passing of the Act. Under any circumstances, if no steps were taken to recover her British nationality she remains an alien . .. .. | 64 |
| 108 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 7, | As to the rights of officers of Her Majesty's Navy to search British and foreign vessels for naval deserters. No reason to alter opinion given in October last, and the Admiralty may be informed no such right exists .. .. | 64 |
| 109 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | Further relative to the case of the Marquise de Seraville, a natural-born British subject, who married an alien and became a widow previously to the Naturalization Act of 1870. Are still of opinion that she lost her British nationality and became an alien .. .. .. | 65 |
| 110 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to grants made to British Church establishments abroad. The 10th clause of the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, does not oblige Her Majesty's Government to continue indefinitely the grants made to those establishments .. .. | 65 |

GREECE.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 111 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 19, 1873 | On the proposed grant by Her Majesty's Government towards the expenses of building a church at Patras on a site given by the Greek Government, and a dispute as to the appointment of a clergyman other than one belonging to the Church of England, and whether that grant would make the parties less free. No proof of the building being used for a place of divine worship, but if so, the grant would not have the means of controlling the parties .. .. | 66 |
| 112 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the claim of the agent to a line of steamers at Zante, belonging to Messrs. Papayanni and Mussabini, of Liverpool, to exemption from certain port dues. Not expedient to bring the case officially before the Greek Government .. | 66 |

HAYTI.

| | | | | |
| 113 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 24, 1873 | As to the second Anglo-Haytian Commission on British claims, and the conditions put forward by Mr. Jenkins on the part of certain British claimants whom he represented. The arrangement proposed by the Haytian Government the best that could be arranged .. .. .. .. | 67 |
| 114 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 7, | On the seizure by the Dominican Government of three Dominicans who had taken refuge in the British Vice-Consulate at Porto Plata. Her Majesty's Government should not insist on the surrender of the refugees, or insist on any reparation to the British flag, which was not insulted, as the refugees were taken from the private dwelling of the Consul. | 68 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 115 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 24, 1873 | On satisfaction having been obtained for the forcible seizure by the Dominican authorities of three Dominican refugees taken from the British Consulate given up to Captain of Her Majesty's ship "Niobe," and the British flag rehoisted over the Vice-Consulate by a Dominican officer under a salute of the Dominican batteries. Cannot demand a pecuniary indemnity for General Miezi and his sons, as they were not British subjects .. .. .. .. | 68 |
| 116 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the amount of support to be given by naval officers to the British Consular authorities in affording asylum to political offenders. Cannot lay down general instructions on the subject. The responsibility of acting should rest with the Consular officer who asks for support .. | 69 |
| 117 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 9, | Further on the British claims on Hayti considered by the Anglo-Haytian Commission, and as to the course to be pursued with respect to Mr. Jenkins having put forward certain reserved claims under Class 3. To inform him of the reasons why his applications should not be entertained .. .. .. .. .. .. | 69 |
| 118 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | Further relative to the claims put forward by Mr. Jenkins on the Haytian Government. The decision on the case of Messrs. Gerdis and Co. will apply equally to that of Messrs. Brown and Co. and Messrs. Jackson.. .. | 70 |
| 119 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 3, | Further respecting the case of the "Telegrafo." No reason to alter opinion already given. The Dominican Government responsible for the act of their officer, M. Victoria, and therefore are liable to the whole claim. As to the offer of arbitration in the dispute, this is left for the decision of Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. .. | 70 |

ITALY.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 120 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 1, 1873 | On fears of Dr. Grant, the Rector of Scot's College at Rome, in consequence of the Bill before the Italian Parliament, that the rights and privileges of that institution will be removed. Her Majesty's Government cannot officially ask the Italian Government to secure the inviolability of the right of education there .. .. .. .. | 71 |
| 121 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | As to the liability of British subjects, claimed to be Italian subjects, to military service. A son, born in Genoa, of Mr. Schiaffino, born at Gibraltar, and Mr. Fernando, born at Genoa, and resident in Italy. Neither cases are exempt from Italian law .. .. .. .. .. | 72 |
| 122 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 10, | Instructions that should be sent to Consul Brown, at Genoa, as to the marriage of a British subject to an Italian woman without the consent of the father, required by Italian law. He should refuse to solemnize the marriage .. .. | 72 |
| 123 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | As to the position of certain religious and educational establishments in Rome, and the effect on them by the Bill now before the Italian Parliament for the expropriation of religious establishments there. Sir A. Paget cannot properly interfere, but he may be instructed to watch the measure should the assurances given be not strictly kept .. | 73 |
| 124 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 16, | On representation of the Italian Minister in England that two criminals, on board the "Helene," which put in from stress of weather at Malta, had been set at liberty by orders of the local authorities of the island. According to the present law the release was right and proper, but approve the draft of the Ordinance to meet the case of arrests at Malta .. .. .. .. .. .. | 74 |
| 125 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | As to the validity of the proposed marriage at Naples of Mr. Sutcliffe, a British subject, with a native of Switzerland, under the Consular Marriage Act. The woman will follow the nationality of her husband during his life, and, surviving him, may return to her original nationality | 74 |

| 126 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 25, 1873 | As to the Bill for the suppression of religious corporations in Rome in the Italian Parliament, and the provisions taken to secure the interests of British ecclesiastical establishments, as stated in the "Opinione." If this statement is correct, no protest need be made against the recommendations of the Commission to the Italian Government | 75 |
| 127 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 2, | Complaint of Mr. Arthur Vansittart of an assault committed on him on leaving the Church of the "Gésu" at Rome in company with some friends. No steps need be taken at present, as the subject is before the Judicial Tribunals | 75 |
| 128 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | On memorials, the Nicholson family, for intervention on refusal of the Italian Government to pay the full amount of arrears due to them out of some Italian stock left by the will of Jonathan Hatfield | 76 |
| 129 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 9, | On complaint of Mr. Mercer against two carabinieri, who arrested him at Naples and subjected him to torture, and subsequently put upon his trial. Mr. Mercer must attend the trial with witnesses, and Her Majesty's Consul should watch the proceedings, but Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to pay the legal expenses | 76 |
| 130 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 4, | Further respecting the case of Mr. Mercer, who was acquitted of the acts alleged against him. He is entitled to demand the payment of the expenses of the trial by the Italian Government, and Her Majesty's Government may demand an indemnity to be paid to him as an acknowledgment of the wrongs done to him | 77 |
| 131 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 4, | Further relative to the assault on Mr. Arthur Vansittart on leaving the Church of "Gésu" at Rome. Need not make any further representation on the case | 78 |
| 132 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 15, | On request of Messrs. Payne and Nelson for intervention of Her Majesty's Government in favour of Mrs. Stevens in a suit before the Italian Courts in regard to the succession to the estate of her father, M. Giuseppe Scolaro. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere | 78 |
| 133 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Sept. 15, | On the Report of Mr. Herries, Secretary to Her Majesty's Legation at Rome, on the origin, character, and possessions of the English, Scots, and Irish colleges at Rome, and their position under the law now passed by the Italian Legislature. As to the instructions to be given to Sir A. Paget on the question | 79 |
| 134 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 18, | Further relative to the release of two criminals on board the "Helene," which was obliged from stress of weather to put into Malta, and who, according to the laws of the island, were set at liberty. Agree generally with the opinion of the Crown Advocate on the subject of the proposed Malta Ordinance, but suggest certain alterations | 80 |

JAPAN.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 135 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 30, 1873 | Notification issued by Mr. Watson, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, making the regulations relative to the railway between Yokohama and Yedo binding on British subjects, may be sanctioned by Her Majesty's Government | 82 |
| 136 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 16, | As to the inquiry of Messrs. Wilde, Barber, and Co. whether a judgment at common law against a British subject can be enforced at Yokohama. It must be through the process of the Court, where judgment can be given in evidence | 82 |
| 137 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 28, | On subject of the Marriage Law lately published by the Japanese Government, and clauses relating to marriages with foreigners. Do not agree with the views of Mr. Hannen, ~~Judge of the Divorce Court,~~ and there is no right of interference with the law for residents in Japan | 83 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 138 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Sept. 15, 1873 | As to the negotiations between Japan and the Treaty Powers for the admission of foreigners into Japan. The most-favoured-nation clause in the Treaty with Great Britain would only enable British subjects to go into the interior on the same conditions as other nations | 83 |
| 139 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 15, | On steps to be taken with regard to the administration of the estate of Mr. William Milne, a British merchant, who died in Japan in 1871. Mr. Baber should be informed that Mr. Gower, who has custody of the estate, should still take care of it, and the creditors and next of kin should take legal advice or settle the question between themselves | 84 |
| 140 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 8, | Approve draft Regulations proposed by Sir H. Parkes relative to foreigners travelling in Japan beyond the limits of the Treaty ports. Her Majesty's Government has the power to issue them under the passport regulations. Suggestions as to the alteration of the 92nd section of the Order in Council | 84 |
| 141 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | Instructions to be sent to Sir H. Parkes as to the necessity for British officers and men in the pay of Japanese Government as naval instructors to register themselves as being resident as British subjects, but, if expedient, special reduced fees may be fixed in their case | 5 |

| 230 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | As to the proposed publication by the Municipality of Malaga of a Tariff of export duties in contravention of Spanish Law. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid should not interfere, and he rightly advised payment of the exactions under protest; and he should inform the Central Government that Great Britain holds it responsible for the illegal exactions | 136 |
| 231 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 28, 1873 | Further respecting the case of the "Deerhound," which was suspected of being about to leave this country with arms for the coast of Spain, and as to the reply to be sent to Colonel Kirkpatrick, calling himself Military Representative of Don Carlos VII, in London, and to Colonel Stuart, who complained of the seizure of the vessel in French waters | 137 |
| 232 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | No objection to the suggestion of Colonel Chacon and Captain Phillimore that the evidence of Charles Hooper, the wounded seaman belonging to Her Majesty's ship "Vigilant," be taken before the Spanish Consul-General in London, owing to the disturbed state of Spain | 138 |
| 233 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further relative to the case of the British vessel "Tantivy," which was detained by the Custom-house authorities at Matanzas on account of the charterer not having paid the export duties on a cargo of sugar. Question should wait for Report of Consul Crawford | 138 |
| 234 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 1, | Further relative to the case of the "Deerhound." No reason to alter opinion given on seizure of the vessel | 138 |
| 235 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 2, | Further relative to the seizure of the "Deerhound" by the Spanish man-of-war "Buenaventura." Mr. Macdonell to use extreme caution not to compromise Her Majesty's Government, as the real facts of her seizure are at present unknown | 139 |
| 236 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 15, | As to the right of British subjects in Spain to exemption from forced loans and contributions, and the war tax about to be levied at Barcelona on all property, industry, and commerce, under a law passed at Madrid. British subjects cannot claim exemption from taxes equally imposed on all natives and foreigners | 139 |
| 237 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 15, | Further relative to the case of the "Deerhound," and Report of the inquiry made by Mr. Graham, Her Majesty's Consul at Bayonne, on the subject of the seizure of the vessel; the statements of Colonel Stuart and the captain of the vessel that the arms were put on board at sea is not to be credited. Instructions to represent views of Her Majesty's Government to the Spanish Government | 140 |
| 238 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 20, | Further relative to the case of the "Deerhound," and the steps necessary to be taken. No other course to be adopted than already advised. The Spanish Reports on the subject contradictory | 140 |
| 239 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 27, | Claim of Messrs. McAndrew and Co. for reimbursement of loss sustained by them through the seizure by the insurgents at Cadiz of a cargo of coal shipped to that port on board the "General Ros de Olano." Should not be supported, as they took upon themselves the risk of sending the coals in a Spanish ship during the insurrection in 1873 | 140 |
| 240 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 27, | On the question raised as to rights of Spain to the sovereignty over the islands in the Archipelago of Sulu, by a notice at Singapore of the Spanish Consul, calling attention to a notification issued by the Spanish Government in 1860 prohibiting vessels from resorting there except in cases of distress. Not sufficient information to enable them to say whether the claim of Spain to sovereignty over Sulu can be disputed or not. The notification, however, should be confined to vessels engaged in illegal traffic | 141 |
| 241 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Oct. 1, | Further relative to the imprisonment of British subjects at Humacao, Porto Rico, in August 1871, but now pardoned. Compensation should be demanded for the woman Williams who was found innocent, and on account of her long imprisonment without trial, and the case of the men might be brought to the favourable consideration of the Spanish Government | 142 |
| 242 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | On request made to the Admiralty by the Admiral of the Spanish Government fleet to be supplied with coal at Gibraltar. No reason to refuse compliance with this request | 143 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 243 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 28, 1873 | Further as to the supply of coal at Gibraltar to the Spanish fleet, and the probability of the Spanish insurgents requesting similar favour. As long as the insurgents are not considered belligerents Her Majesty's Government may supply coals to the Spanish fleet, but may refuse the insurgents, as they carry no national flag | 143 |
| 244 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further relative to the case of the "Deerhound," which has been released with her crew by the Spanish Government, who hope that if any British law has been infringed by Colonel Stuart and the crew they will be punished. No grounds for instituting criminal proceedings against them or any of the parties connected with the vessel | 144 |
| 245 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 10, | No steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government on a boat belonging to Her Majesty's ship "Lively" being fired at, and a boy wounded, by a Carlist sentry in the Bilbao River | 144 |
| 246 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | Further respecting applications to Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao from British subjects residing there, for permission to fly the British flag for the protection of their property, and on receiving instructions that they had no right to do so, although Consul Young had issued a prohibition against it, and of which Mr. Woods complained. The Consul exceeded his instructions, but British subjects flying British colours will not add to their right to British protection | 144 |
| 247 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | As to the duty of 5 per cent. imposed on all exports from Spain, and the liability of British subjects to war taxation. The reduction of the tax does not affect the right of imposition, and British subjects cannot claim exemption, as already reported | 145 |
| 248 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Further relative to the war taxes levied in Spain, and the Decree issued by the de facto Government, and claim of British subjects to exemption from them. Her Majesty's Government should not claim any exemption for British subjects from these taxes | 145 |
| 249 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | Further on the refusal of the Spanish Government to remit the fines levied on the British vessel "Erl King." Her Majesty's Government should not enforce the restitution of the fines, but no reason to withhold the publication of the notice proposed to be issued by Mr. Layard | 146 |
| 250 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 21, | On request of the Spanish Representative in this country for measures to be taken to prevent the shipment at Newport of certain arms suspected to be exported for use of the Carlists, and desire of Mr. Downing, the consignee, for the advice of Her Majesty's Government in the matter. The only laws whereby a vessel can be detained under such circumstances are those which affect the Customs regulations, which require a declaration as to goods to be exported, whether contraband or not. The Customs authorities to be informed of Señor Rubio's letter, and Mr. Downing must act on his own responsibility | 146 |
| 251 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | On the proposal that certain stores in the arsenal at Carthagena, the property of the Spanish nation, may be received by Her Majesty's Government as a guarantee for the future payment for coals, British property, seized and consumed by the Spanish insurgents. Her Majesty's Government cannot accept the proposed security | 147 |
| 252 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 1, | Further relative to the shipment of arms at Newport, suspected to be for use of the Carlists, and the precedent brought forward of the expedition to Terceira in 1828-29 being prevented from shipping arms for insurgents. Formerly prohibitions were issued under 33 Geo. II and 29 Geo. III, but the modern policy of the British Government has been not to interfere with the export of munitions of war, and this policy is advised to be maintained | 148 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 253 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 2, 1873 | Further relative to the war taxes levied on British subjects at Barcelona, and the exemptions allowed to French, Italian, and Portuguese subjects, and as to the claim of British subjects to most-favoured-nation treatment or on other grounds. Their former Report was conclusive as regards "other grounds," but Her Majesty's Government have the right to claim exemption under Treaty right, but calls attention to the omission of Spain in the Returns to Parliament of 1843 and 1860, as to the most-favoured-nation clause | 148 |
| 254 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid on the right claimed by the Spanish Government to requsition of horses bonâ fide the property of British subjects for purposes of war. Privileges of exemption may be demanded for all persons attached to Her Majesty's Representative at Madrid | 149 |
| 255 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | Instructions should be sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to demand compensation for the families of British subjects who were executed at Santiago, as those British subjects on board the "Virginius" had committed no offence worthy of death, either against municipal or international law | 150 |
| 256 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | As to the proceedings of Sir Peter Grant, Governor of Jamaica, on the arrival of the British vessel "Virginius," and as to the proceedings of that vessel at Port-au-Prince, as reported to the Admiralty by Commodore De Horsey, the vessel supposed to be intended for the employment of the Cuban insurgents. Want further explanations from the Governor of Jamaica before giving Report | 150 |
| 257 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | As to the system of fines levied by the Spanish Government on foreign vessels in Spanish ports, and the joint protest of British and foreign Representatives on the subject. Approve note of Mr. Layard to Spanish Government, but in future remonstrance should not allude to Treaty of 1667 | 151 |
| 258 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | Further as to rights of British subjects to exemption from forced loans and war taxes, and requisitions for horses, and explanation of Mr. Hertslet as to the omission in the Returns to Parliament of the List of Treaties. British subjects are entitled to exemptions granted to other foreigners. Her Majesty's Government should approve Mr. Layard's letter to Spanish Government of 1st December last and await reply. Translation of Spanish Decree should be obtained | 151 |
| 259 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further relative to the shipment of arms, &c., at Newport, said to be for the use of the Carlists, and an additional quantity brought by the Turkish vessel "Malfilatre" to be removed to Cardiff, purchased by Mr. Hugh L. F. Palmer, alleged to be for sale to the Greek Government. No steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government to prevent the export, beyond directing the Customs authorities to watch closely that their rules are observed | 152 |
| 260 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further respecting the claim of the relatives of the British members of the crew of the "Virginius," who were executed at Santiago de Cuba, to compensation, and the statement of the United States' Government that that vessel had no right to the use of the American flag or papers, though the survivors of the crew were detained pending the result of an inquiry. Demands of Her Majesty's Government should be modified, but the Spanish Government should be called on to explain the charges against the British crew of the vessel | 152 |
| 261 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | Further relative to the execution of the British subjects on board the "Virginius" at Santiago. Conduct of British naval officers judicious, and their remonstrances well founded. Conduct of the Governor of Jamaica ~~should be blamed~~ | 154 |
| 262 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | As to the liability of British Consular Agents, who happen to be Spanish subjects, to serve in the militia | 154 |

|---|---|---|---|---|

SWEDEN.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 264 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 9, 1873 | On request of Mrs. Pihl, a British subject resident at Stockholm, and married to a Russian subject in England, but now deceased, to know if she and her children are to be considered British subjects. She may obtain a certificate of naturalization, and with her children under 21 be deemed British subjects while resident in England, but subject, within the limits of the Russian Empire, to the conditions imposed by section 8 of the 33 Vict., cap. 14 | 156 |
| 265 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 16, | On claim of the Tyne and Wear Iron Steam-ship Insurance Association for compensation from the Swedish Government for damage to the steam-ship "Stagshaw" by the Swedish vessel "Vanadis" in Alexandria Harbour. Her Majesty's Government cannot at present interfere, nor until the Swedish Government refuse to entertain the claim for damages | 157 |

SWITZERLAND.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 266 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 24, 1873 | As to the validity of mixed marriages according to the lex loci, but not performed at the Legation, and proposed form of certificate to be adopted by Her Majesty's Legation at Berne. Suggest alterations in the certificate, and each applicant should be informed of the formalities necessary to be fulfilled | 157 |
| 267 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 5, | As to the marriage of naturalized British subjects at Her Majesty's Mission at Berne. They may claim to be married under the Consular Marriage Act, but a certificate of naturalization must first be obtained on all occasions to make such marriage valid, and a naturalized British subject is in the same position as a natural-born subject, save in the country of his birth, in which case the validity of the marriage would be doubtful | 158 |
| 268 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 31, | As to the claim put forward by the Canton of Geneva to succession duty on the personal estate of Mr. Forbes, formerly Her Majesty's Minister at Dresden, but lately deceased at Geneva. Her Majesty's Minister should not interfere further than to see that the property seized is not unnecessarily injured before the representatives appear | 159 |

TUNIS.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 269 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 13, 1873 | On the proposed rules of procedure in the Mixed Tribunals at Tunis. Approve Sir P. Francis' Report, and Her Majesty's Government may assent to the rules | 160 |
| 270 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 23, | Approve proposed instructions of Consul-General Wood to British Consular Agents in Tunis, for the prevention of the clandestine import and export of goods in vessels under British flag from Tunisian ports | 160 |
| 271 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 23, | As to the restrictions imposed on the Bey of Tunis by his Decree of the 5th July, 1869, establishing the Mixed Commission for liquidating the debts of the Regency to the subjects of foreign Powers | 161 |
| 272 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 10, | As to the right of Her Majesty's Government to continue British protection to Si Hamuda Ben Ayat in Tunis. It would be right and expedient to do so | 161 |

TURKEY.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 273 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 17, 1873 | On claim of Messrs. Laycock and Co. for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government to obtain payment from the Turkish Government for supply of coals delivered in 1868. Her Majesty's Minister at Constantinople should inquire into the facts of the case, and, if found correct, should press for payment | 162 |
| 274 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 1, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Ambassador and the Judges of Her Majesty's Consular Court at Constantinople on the point of jurisdiction raised with regard to the "Arturo," an Italian vessel, claimed as a direlict by the crews of two English vessels in the Black Sea | 162 |
| 275 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 1, | On complaint of Paul Tamagian against Sir P. Francis, Judge of Her Majesty's Consular Court at Constantinople. He should be told there is no sufficient ground for an inquiry | 163 |
| 276 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | Her Majesty's Government should not request the Turkish Government to compensate the family of one of the crew of the "Cashmere," who was murdered by pirates, who carried off a large sum in specie | 163 |
| 277 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 21, | Further relative to the piratical attack on the British vessel "Cashmere." No reason to alter former opinion | 164 |
| 278 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 18, | Further relative to the case of the "Arturo." Views of Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople are correct, and no ship on which a claim for salvage has been made should be allowed to leave until full security for the amount claimed has been given. After security offered, the "Arturo" or other vessels may be released | 164 |
| 279 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | On complaint of Sir Francis Goldsmid of the law passed by the Roumanian Chambers prohibiting the grant of licences to sell spirituous liquors to persons not electors, so that Jews are prevented from carrying on their trade. Representations in concert with other Powers may be made against a harsh measure, but it is not contrary to the XLVIth Article of the Treaty with Turkey of 1858 | 165 |
| 280 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 22, | Proposed draft notice to be issued by Her Majesty's Consular officers on the north coast of Africa for the prevention of embarking negroes on board British vessels without a Consular pass. Commanding officers would be liable to punishment on embarking negroes | 165 |
| 281 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | May 17, | Approve the views of the Advocate-General of Bombay as to measures for prevention of British Indian and protected subjects engaging in Slave Traffic or holding slaves. Cannot report on the Indian Statute, which they have not seen | 166 |
| 282 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 23, | Further relative to the case of the "Arturo." The salvors have a right to bring or place the property within the jurisdiction of their own Courts, both to obtain the security and assess the amount of the awards in the exercise of its jurisdiction | 167 |
| 283 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the dispute between the Turkish Government and the Danube and Black Sea Railway Company. Instructions should be sent to Sir H. Elliot to induce the Porte to submit the differences to arbitration or a Mixed Commission, and the agent of the Company, Mr. Austin, might be assisted | 167 |
| 284 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 8, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, on refusal of the Ottoman Government to pay the holders of Syrian Indemnity Consolidé bonds the interest on the bonds while overdue: 6 per cent. and possibly a compound interest is all that can be demanded for Messrs. Black and Co. | 168 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 285 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 29, 1873 | Approve the course proposed by Sir H. Elliot to be followed on the new regulations issued by the Porte relative to the transmission of property, as British interests are not likely to be injured | 168 |
| 286 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Claim of M. F. Mida for British protection cannot be entertained, as he has returned to his native country | 169 |
| 287 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Approves draft of revised Order in Council prepared by Mr. Riley, in connection with Sir P. Francis, for regulating the Consular jurisdiction in the Ottoman dominions | 169 |
| 288 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. [illegible] | Approve proposed Schedules to the Revised Order in Council, with alterations in the proposed forms to be adopted | 169 |
| 289 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Oct. 3, | As to the claim of Mr. Smylie Robson for 12 per cent. interest on the Syrian Consolidé bonds overdue. Cannot claim more than 6 per cent., but the Porte may be urged to pay compound interest | 170 |
| 290 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | No reason to alter opinion already given as to the right of M. F. Mida to British protection | 170 |
| 291 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 26, | Further as to the Revised Order in Council for the regulation of British Consular jurisdiction in the Ottoman dominions, and the scale of bankruptcy fees | 171 |
| 292 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 2, | Further relative to the claims of British subjects for interest on the overdue Syrian Consolidé bonds. The bondholders would be entitled to their 12 per cent., as the bonds derived their chief value from being terminable | 171 |
| 293 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | As to the marriages of Maltese subjects in the Ottoman dominions, and the special case of a Maltese named Antonie Aquilina. British Maltese subjects are not compelled to avail themselves of the Consular Marriage Act | 172 |

UNITED STATES.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 294 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 3, 1873 | As to the course that should be pursued by Sir E. Thornton on the claim of Mr. George Wigg for seizure of the British steamer "Virgin." Should decline to support him | 172 |
| 295 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 4, | Claims Commission. Will communicate with Dr. Deane as to the evidence of Lord Monck as well as of Sir George Cartier, to be taken before the United States' Consul-General in London, relative to the St. Alban's raid | 173 |
| 296 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | As to the reply to be sent to Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co., with regard to their claim on the United States' Government. Must not further support the claim | 173 |
| 297 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | Approve draft of instruction to Sir E. Thornton, with annexed Protocol, and instruction to Admiral Prevost on the formal demarcation of the boundary between Her Majesty's Possessions and those of the United States of America, under the Treaties of Washington of 1846 and 1871 | 174 |
| 298 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | As to the claims of Mr. Stewart on the United States' Government for destruction of his cotton in 1865 by the United States' troops | 174 |
| 299 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 1, | Further evidence produced by Messrs. Ellman, Raper, and Ellman relative to the claim of Mrs. Cassin, and the evidence of Mr. Young, induce them to state that the claim may be brought to the favourable notice of the United States' Government | 174 |
| 300 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 1, | Her Majesty's Government cannot properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to apply for the extradition of John Robinson on a charge of absconding with money belonging to his creditors. He was guilty of a misdemeanour, but this is not mentioned in the Xth Article of the Treaty of 1842 | 175 |
| 301 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 2, 1873 | Claim of Mr. A. Ravenscroft may be brought to the notice of the United States' Government. Though that Government may refuse to entertain the claim, their reasons for doing so cannot be the same as those used in the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co. | 175 |
| 302 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | Instructions to be given to Sir E. Thornton as to the manner in which the declarations of aliens should be taken in the United States so as to be valid in this country | 176 |
| 303 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 6, | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Shand and Co. against the United States' Government, and reply of Messrs. Bateson and Co. to objections of Mr. Fish to the recognition of their claims. The evidence of Mr. Cromwell, that the cotton was bought by him for Mr. Wigg, should have been brought forward at first, and the claim cannot now be supported | 176 |
| 304 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | No reason for the Additional Article to the Treaty of the 8th May, 1871, for the Mixed Commission to meet out of Washington, not being ratified | 177 |
| 305 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | On protest of Mr. Stewart against the Commissioners of Claims withdrawing his additional claim for the destruction of his cotton by the United States' troops in 1865. He may be informed that, under the XIVth Article of the Treaty of 1871, the Commissioners had the power to reject his supplemental claim, and no further support can be granted. | 177 |
| 306 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | As to the seizure of the vessel "Bessie," of New Brunswick, by the United States' Customs officials. Inquiry should be made into the conduct of the British master by Her Majesty's Consul, as it is evident he was endeavouring to evade a legal demand | 177 |
| 307 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | As to the Bill which passed the United States' House of Representatives for carrying into effect the Treaty of Washington regarding the fisheries. It complies with the provisions of the Treaty | 178 |
| 308 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | Instructions to be sent to Sir E. Thornton as to the rights of British subjects settled in the Island of San Juan. Should keep the question of their land claims before him, though the conduct of the Governor of Washington territory appears satisfactory | 178 |
| 309 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | As to the claim of Dr. Rufus Bratton for compensation on account of his abduction from Canadian territory. Her Majesty's Government cannot demand compensation, as the explanations given by Mr. Fish of the circumstances are satisfactory | 179 |
| 310 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 2, | Instructions to be given to Mr. Howard as to certifying the awards given by the Claims Commission. He should endeavour to get the Rule No. 17 cancelled, so as to prevent money being raised on the assignments | 179 |
| 311 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 2, | Further relative to the refusal of the Claims Commission to allow Mr. Stewart's supplemental claim to be filed. No reason to alter former opinion | 180 |
| 312 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 3, | As to the claim of the Great Western Steam-ship Company against the State of New York for return of head money on passengers, stated to have been levied between 1838 and 1844, a portion of which had been recovered. Her Majesty's Government cannot properly support their claim | 180 |
| 313 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. H. Stewart on the United States' Government. No reason to alter opinion already given on this case | 181 |
| 314 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | Instructions to be sent to Sir E. Thornton on the second claim of Dr. Tumblety on account of his arrest. Should inquire why he did not offer any evidence on the presentation of his first claim, which was disallowed by the Commission | 181 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 315 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 25, 1873 | Approve letter of the United States' Attorney-General to the District Attorney at New York, as to the course to be pursued in a case of attempted violation of the neutrality of the United States | 182 |
| 316 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 5, | Further relative to the case of Mrs. Cassin before the Claims Commission. Cannot press the United States' Government further, as they decline to reopen the investigation made in 1866 | 182 |
| 317 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | As to the reply of the United States' Government to representations made as to the treatment of the British vessel "Grace" and also of Captain Irvine. It does not satisfactorily dispose of the question of the treatment of the latter | 182 |
| 318 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | Claim of Mr. Mogridge on the United States' Government, brought forward by Messrs. Harrison, Beal, and Harrison. The decision of the Commissioners considered final, under Article XIII of the Treaty of Washington of 1871 | 183 |
| 319 | Dr. Deane | 21, | As to memorandum to be prepared to be used in any argument raised upon a certain point before the Commission relative to the XXIst Article of the Treaty of Washington | 184 |
| 320 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | On subject of the Act that passed the Legislature of Newfoundland for carrying out the provisions of the Treaty of Washington relative to the fisheries. Important points to be observed in framing the clauses of the Act | 184 |
| 321 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 2, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. George Wigg for the seizure of the British vessel "Virgin" at Mobile, and request of Mr. F. B. Stuart, official liquidator of the European Trading Company, on behalf of the creditors and shareholders of the Company. Her Majesty's Government should not support this claim | 187 |
| 322 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | Further relative to the recent Act which passed the Legislature of Newfoundland for giving effect to the Treaty of Washington as regards the fisheries. The Act does not sufficiently comply with the Treaty. A Protocol should be signed similar to that for Canada and Prince Edward Island | 187 |
| 323 | Dr. Deane | 9, | As to the privileges accorded to British subjects in return for those accorded to citizens of the United States under the XVIIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington, XXnd Article of which Treaty provided for the appointment of a Mixed Commission. Has prepared a memorandum for use in argument before the Commission, and would wish to have the assistance of the Agent to be appointed to attend the Commission | 187 |
| 324 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | Lord Kimberley may inform Governor-General of Canada, and Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, that they may issue their Proclamations for bringing the Articles XVIII, XXV, and XXX of the Treaty of Washington into force in those Colonies | 188 |
| 325 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | Further relative to the claim of Dr. Tumblety on the United States' Government for arrest. Sir E. Thornton may write the note he proposes to that Government provided he does not commit Her Majesty's Government to support a doubtful claim. He should also write to Her Majesty's Consul at St. Louis to substantiate the facts of the case | 189 |
| 326 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 4, | As to the reply to be sent to the Admiralty, who consider an Article in the United States' Naval Regulations of 1870, relating to convoys, to be contrary to international law, and whether any change should be made in the British Naval Regulations on the same subject. No reason for altering the 11th Article of Her Majesty's Naval Regulations. Remarks on the case of the "Maria," as decided by Lord Stowell, as to the right to visit ships under convoy, and naval officers should be instructed not to insist on visiting such ships | 189 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 327 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 12, 1873 | The claims of Messrs. Parr and Mrs. Elizabeth Luck may be brought to the favourable consideration of the United States' Government, as they were deprived of their property by order of the United States' officers | 190 |
| 328 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | Further relative to the claim of Captain Irvine, of the British vessel "Grace." Her Majesty's Government cannot take any further steps in favour of this claim | 190 |
| 329 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 1, | Further particulars brought forward by Mr. J. W. Miles with respect to the claim of the Great Western Steam-ship Company on the State of New York, for repayment of head-money levied on that Company. Do not alter opinion already expressed | 191 |
| 330 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 6, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Stewart on the United States' Government. He should be told Her Majesty's Government will not interfere with the decision of the Commissioners | 191 |
| 331 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 6, | On request of Mrs. Lambert, a British-born subject and the widow of an American subject, for a Foreign Office passport to return to St. Petersburgh, the United States' Legation having refused to give her one. Mrs. Lambert not entitled to claim a passport as a British subject | 191 |
| 332 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further relative to the claim of Mrs. Cassin against the United States' Government. Reply should be sent to Messrs. Ellman, Raper, and Ellman, that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further | 192 |
| 333 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | As to the instructions to be given to Mr. Howard on his proposal to make a protest against the decision of the Commissioners on Mr. Stewart's claim | 193 |
| 334 | Attorney-General | Sept. 10 | Wants more information as to the alleged violation of the territorial authority of the United States in the case of the abduction of Samuel Joy, a citizen of the United States, and before he is set at liberty | 193 |
| 335 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 15, | On the detention at Fort Garry of certain American citizens charged with an attempt to carry off an Englishman named Gordon by force from Manitoba. The old acknowledged line of boundary between the two States must be taken until the new one is admitted or declared to be the true one | 193 |
| 336 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | 15, | Instructions to be sent to Sir E. Thornton to apply to the United States unofficially as to their interpretation of the Article in their Naval Regulations on the subject of capture for carrying contraband of war | 193 |
| 337 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 30, | The terms of the XXIIIrd Article of the Treaty of Washington are distinct and peremptory as to the appointment of a third Commissioner for the Fishery Commission at Halifax, and the nomination by the Austrian Ambassador in London should not be delayed | 194 |
| 338 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 10, | Further relative to the case of Samuel Joy. He should not have been taken into New Brunswick nor detained there in prison, and Mr. Fish was justified in making the remarks he did in his letter of the 9th October last | 194 |
| 339 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Further relative to the appointment of a third Commissioner under the XXIIIrd Article of the Treaty of Washington. Do not concur with the interpretation put upon that Article by Mr. Fish. The selection is clearly in the Austrian Ambassador in London | 195 |
| 340 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 23, | On request of Messrs. Whitley and Maddock that the claim of Messrs. C. and H. Wilson against the United States' Government may be supported by Her Majesty's Government. They must first give further reasons why the claim was rejected by the United States' Government | 195 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 341 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 15, 1873 | Instructions may be given to Mr. Middleton to press for an apology to the British Government from the Government of Venezuela for insult on endeavouring to enforce the order for delivery of a horse after that gentleman's letter to Señor Guzman; and Mr. Agostini is entitled to compensation for arrest and imprisonment in July 1871 .. .. | 196 |
| 342 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas with regard to the status of British subjects, and children of British subjects born in Venezuela; also to the issue of passports to British subjects who were, while resident, considered to be Venezuelan subjects. In the case of G. Rodriguez he would not be entitled to a certificate of British nationality .. .. .. | 197 |
| 343 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 22, | As to the Decree issued by the Venezuelan Government relative to the rights and duties of foreigners in that Republic, and instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires on the course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in future demands .. .. .. | 197 |
| 344 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas should be instructed no longer to support the claim of Mr. J. B. Mathison sentenced to fine and imprisonment for disrespect towards the authorities .. .. .. .. | 198 |
| 345 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 24, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Agostini for arrest and imprisonment, and refusal of the Venezuelan Government to apologise to Her Majesty's Government for their conduct. Course that should be adopted to obtain redress .. .. | 198 |
| 346 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 4, | Further relative to the case of Mr. Agostini. As to the course to be pursued in case of refusal of the Venezuelan Government to apologise or grant compensation to Mr. Agostini . .. .. .. .. .. | 199 |
| 347 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 6, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas on the claim of Mr. O'Callaghan against the Venezuelan Government, which was brought forward by Mr. McCarthy, agent of the claim .. .. | 199 |
| 348 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | The course proposed to be adopted by Governor Longden at Trinidad relative to the verdict against the British vessel "Violet," detained on suspicion of conveying warlike stores to Venezuela, might properly be adopted. Not advisable to call attention of the Venezuelan Government to conduct of their Consul-General at Trinidad .. .. | 200 |
| 349 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 6, | On complaint of Mr. Bernardo Daly against the course pursued by Her Majesty's Minister at Caracas in the distribution of the money set aside by the Venezuelan Government for the payment of certain British claims. He should be told his application for assistance will be considered .. .. | 200 |
| 350 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | Her Majesty's Government should state to the Venezuelan Government that if the interests of British subjects are damaged by the execution of the two Articles in their Financial Code they will inquire into the facts, and probably demand compensation from them .. .. | 201 |

ZANZIBAR.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 351 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 29, 1873 | As to questions of a technical nature being asked by Dr. Kirk. A British Indian shipowner employing a slave on board his ship, and receiving the wages earned by the slave, the ship would be liable to condemnation, but not so if he was not cognizant of such an offence committed by the captain of the vessel .. .. .. .. | 202 |
| 352 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Sept. 27, 1873 | As to the provisions of the Slave Trade Treaty with Zanzibar. They should be confined to the export of slaves destined for transport, and not extended to slaves following their masters and not to be sold. A ship cannot be condemned for a person representing himself to be a slave being on board. In the Coomba Coomba case the owner should receive compensation .. .. .. .. | 202 |
| 353 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 8, | On report of Dr. Kirk of the trial and conviction of an Indian British subject named Hadji Omar. No proof that he was a British subject, but if so, and he was guilty, the punishment was disproportionate to the offence, and should be remitted and the man released. Dr. Kirk should take a more considerate course of action with respect to his judicial functions .. .. .. .. .. | 203 |

ARTHUR WALMISLEY.

SECOND APPENDIX.

| No. | Name. | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 350A | Law Officers .. .. | Apr. 24, 1873 | Suppression of export of slaves from Zanzibar. Sir B. Frere's suggestions for enforcement of Treaty engagements with Sultan of Zanzibar can only be carried out as an act of war .. .. | 207 |
| 350B | " " .. .. | 25, | Suppression of export of slaves from Zanzibar. Right to enforce Treaty stipulations by Act or Declaration of War not affected by Declaration of Great Britain and France guaranteeing the independence of the Sultan .. .. .. | 207 |
| 350C | Attorney-General .. .. | May 1, | Suppression of export of slaves from Zanzibar. Directions given Sir B. Frere not authorized by, nor within scope of, the Treaty. Consular jurisdiction proposed by Order in Council not authorized by the Act. The Sultan having broken the Treaty, the Government may take action against him.. .. .. .. | 208 |
| 350D | Lord Chancellor .. .. | 1, | Slave Trade in Zanzibar territory. Section 2 of Order in Council of 1867 as to Consular jurisdiction is ultra vires and illegal. Otherwise Sir B. Frere's letter does not, subject to limitations as to visit and detention, infringe the Treaty .. | 208 |
| 350E | Law Officers .. .. | 3, | Suppression of Zanzibar Slave Traffic. Refusal of Sultan to accede to British proposals. In taking action against Sultan should interfere as little as possible with independence of the Sultan and foreign trade. Steps taken by Sir B. Frere not free from objection, but unwise to recall instructions. Should inform Sultan, France, and perhaps other Powers, of intention to enforce Treaty. Examination by Consul in place of passes inconsistent with independence of Sultan .. .. | 209 |
| 350F | " " .. .. | 22, | Suppression of Zanzibar Slave Traffic. Proposed blockade. Mail steamers must not enter or leave a blockaded port, and Vice-Admiralty Court cannot be held at Zanzibar during war with Sultan. ## AFRICA.

No. 1. [Colonial Office.

Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Kimberley.

My Lord, Temple, May 15, 1873.

Importation of arms into Assinee for sale to Ashantees. As to mode of checking.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Holland's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the copy of a despatch which has been received from the Officer administering the Government of the West African Settlements,* and to refer us to that part of it in which it is stated that "large quantities of arms and ammunition were being landed from English vessels for sale to the Ashantees, and that one ship, the , master, had landed no less than 150 cases of muskets and 200 barrels of powder."

2. That it would be seen that Assinee, which lies to the west of Her Majesty's Settlement on the Gold Coast, is a port under French protection, and cannot, therefore, be affected by any Proclamation of the Officer administering the Government of that Settlement, or by any local British Ordinance; but should the present war between the Ashantees and the tribes of the British Protectorate continue, it might become necessary for Her Majesty's Government to endeavour, by such means as they are advised they may legally adopt, to check the importation into Assinee, or other West African ports, of arms and ammunition which readily find their way into the hands of the Ashantees, and thus enable them to prolong the war.

3. That in these circumstances Mr. Holland further stated he was to request that we would report to your Lordship what steps by Royal Proclamation or otherwise can be properly taken by Her Majesty's Government to stop the importation by British subjects, or in British vessels, of arms and ammunition into Assinee or any other neighbouring port outside the limits of Her Majesty's Settlement on the Gold Coast.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to

Report—

That Her Majesty's Government cannot in our opinion take any steps to stop the importation by British subjects, or in British vessels, of arms and ammunition into Assinee, or any other neighbouring port outside the limits of Her Majesty's Settlement on the Gold Coast, other than to obtain the joint offices of friendly Powers to prevent the importation and sale of arms and ammunition into and out of their territory, and to prevent by all means within the power of the Local Government the sale of arms and ammunition to the Ashantees.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 10.)

My Lord,

Temple, September 10, 1873.

Proposed Agreement between Governments of England, France, and Portugal to prevent supply of arms to tribes on West Coast of Africa.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, various letters which had been received from the Colonial Office on the question of the expediency of addressing a representation to the French Government with the view of preventing the importation of arms and ammunition into Ashantee through the adjacent territory of Assinee, which is under French protection.

That your Lordship had hitherto hesitated to make any such representation in the absence of any measures on the part of Her Majesty's Government to prevent the supply of arms to the Ashantees by British subjects.

That it would appear from these papers that our advice had been given against the introduction of a Bill into Parliament to enable Her Majesty to prohibit, by Proclamation or Order in Council, the export of arms, ammunition, and other articles of military or naval use to specified places; and that Her Majesty's Government had not adopted the practice, which, as stated in the Report of the Commissioners of Customs inclosed in the letter from the Colonial Office of the 10th June last, had been resorted to on previous occasions, of prohibiting generally the export of certain articles, but allowing, by subsequent Order in Council, their exportation under bond to other places than those from which it was desired to exclude them.

That your Lordship had now received from the French Chargé d'Affaires an inclosed note, proposing an Agreement between the Governments of England, France, and Portugal, to prevent, by combined action, the supply of arms to the tribes on the West Coast of Africa.

That Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government could properly enter into such an Agreement as was suggested.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was further to inclose a letter from the Admiralty, from which it would be perceived that Commodore Commerell had already addressed a representation to the French Admiral on the Coast, drawing attention to the import of arms and powder through Assinee.

That a copy of a printed statement drawn up in the Foreign Office, of the Acts of Parliament and Orders in Council for prohibiting the export of arms was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

See no reason why such an agreement should not be entered into. Importation of arms and ammunition may be forbidden by Proclamation.

That the importation of arms and ammunition may, we believe, be forbidden, by Proclamation made by the Governor or Governors of the British Settlements on the West Coast, and we see no reason why an agreement, as proposed by M. Dutreil, should not be entered into by the Governments of Great Britain, France, and Portugal.

We are aware that in giving this opinion to your Lordship, we are advising a course of action which may be directly injurious to the manufacturers of arms and ammunition in this country, but it seems to us, and we respectfully submit to your Lordship's consideration, that England should not hold back, out of consideration for a particular branch of manufacture, from adopting a measure suggested by a great friendly Power, in itself lawful and well fitted to promote civilization and the cause of humanity, and to lead in the way of barter and trade to the introduction of other manufactures of at least equal importance.

No. 1.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received June 23.)

My Lord,
Temple, June 23, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship would be glad to receive our suggestion as to the answer which should be returned to the inquiry contained in the inclosed note from the Austrian Ambassador, as to the extent to which sentences of foreign Tribunals could be carried out in England, or be pleaded as a ground of action before English Tribunals, and specially as to whether, if an Englishman, or person resident in England, should volunteer to acknowledge the competence of a foreign Tribunal, the sentence of such Tribunal could, in consideration of the acknowledgment, be executed in England with the assistance of the English authorities. And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to observe that the Ambassador appeared to wish for an opinion on the latter point in the form of a Declaration signed by competent authorities; and that your Lordship would be glad, therefore, to learn our opinion as to whether such a document could be supplied, or whether the reply should be given in a general form.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Austrian Ambassador may properly be informed that the sentences of foreign Courts of competent jurisdiction are received in England as evidence of the facts decided between the same parties.

But that such Judgments cannot be carried out in England without an action founded upon them, as, for instance, where the foreign Judgment is for a definite sum of money, the debt may be made the subject of action, and the Judgment will be evidence of the debt.

This appears to be the nature of the special case referred to by the Austrian Ambassador.

On the general question we are of opinion, as above stated, that foreign Judgments cannot be put into execution directly in England, but an action will lie upon such foreign Judgment, which may be used as evidence of a debt.

My Lord, Temple, January 16, 1873.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the marines who are accused of having committed a murder upon foreigners within the territorial waters of Brazil may be put upon their trial in England, inasmuch as the alleged offence was committed in a navigable river, in a broad part of it below all bridges, and at a point where the tide ebbs and flows, and where great ships lie and hover. The Admiralty clearly has jurisdiction in such a case, and it stands precisely the same as if the alleged offence had been committed upon the high seas, and the marines may be properly put upon their trial at the Central Criminal Court. My Lord, Temple, June 23, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 15th July last upon the case of the Queen Insurance Company, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro, reporting that the Court of Relação had not reversed the sentence of bankruptcy pronounced against the Company, but had merely confined its classification as "casual" and not fraudulent.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the despatch into consideration, together with the previous papers, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should now be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Minister at Rio Janeiro may properly be instructed to endeavour, as he suggests, to settle the matter both with regard to the bankruptcy of the Company and with regard to the agents, Messrs. Taylor and Lyde, without diplomatic action.

Should he fail in obtaining a satisfactory result, your Lordship will be able to decide more clearly what steps then to take.

My Lord, Temple, January 8, 1873.

Seizure of the "Morro" by persons in rebellion against the Government of Bolivia.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would again take into our consideration the case of the seizure of the "Morro" by persons in rebellion against the Government of Bolivia, which formed the subject of our Report of the 5th ultimo.

That the Report and its inclosures from the British Vice-Consul at Iquique was returned, and a Memorandum of a conversation with Mr. Johnston, which occurred subsequently to the receipt of our Report, was also inclosed.

That from the letter from Mr. Nairns, who is agent for the owners of the vessel, as well as Acting British Vice-Consul, to Mr. Morris, of the 13th August, and from Mr. Morris' reply of the same date, it appeared the vessel was placed at the disposal of the latter gentleman as Agent of the Bolivian Government subject to certain conditions, one of which was that the value of the vessel was guaranteed to be made good in the sum of 25,000 soles in the event of her being lost in the service of the Bolivian Government and in consequence of that service.

That it appeared to your Lordship from the statements made as to the voyage, and from the circumstance that there was a passenger on board with sealed papers (probably an officer of the Bolivian Government), that the vessel was, at the time of her capture, actually in the service and being employed on the service of the Bolivian Government. If so, it appeared questionable whether the British flag should have been hoisted on board the "Morro," or, at all events, without the Bolivian flag being hoisted as well.

That there seemed to be, moreover, other considerations connected with the case, such as whether the Bolivian Government could be asked for redress in respect of proceedings of persons in rebellion against them; whether the conditions under which the "Morro" was chartered implied a responsibility for damage as well as total loss; and whether this latter point should not be dealt with in connection with the question as to how far due caution was exercised to keep the vessel out of the hands of the rebels.

That we stated in our Report that, as it appeared that Her Majesty's Government had no diplomatic relations with the Government of Bolivia, we saw no objection to your Lordship's instructing Mr. Vice-Consul Nairns to press the settlement of the case upon the Bolivian authorities. He (Lord Tenterden) was, however, to point out to us that Mr. Nairns is the Acting British Vice-Consul at Iquique, in Peru, and has no means of pressing the settlement of the case upon the authorities of Bolivia; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to suggest, for our consideration, whether the proper course for him (the Vice-Consul) to adopt would not be to take proceedings against Mr. Morris, or whoever might now be acting as Agent for the Bolivian Government, in the Peruvian Courts for the settlement of any claim arising under his contract with that gentleman.

He (Lord Tenterden) was also to request that we would take into consideration the other points in the case to which he adverted, and favour your Lordship by informing him whether, having regard to them, we still adhered to the opinion expressed in our Report of the 5th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Are of opinion that Mr. Nairns should press the claim of the owners of the "Morro" for compensation upon the Bolivian Government.

We are still of opinion that Mr. Nairns, who let the ship "Morro" to the Bolivian Government, should press the claim of her owners for compensation upon that Government.

We see no objection to Mr. Nairns, in the event of the Bolivian Government refusing his application to that Government for redress and compensation, taking proceedings against Mr. Morris, as the Agent of the Bolivian Government, in the Peruvian Courts.

We submit, however, for your Lordship's consideration, whether, in the event of Mr. Nairns failing to obtain redress and compensation by that course, you will not be disposed to take some further action for the insult offered to the British flag by subjects of Bolivia, those subjects being, it is true, in rebellion against the Government authorities.

Employment of a man-of-war may be resorted to in order to enforce compensation if necessary.

We are of opinion that the "Morro," owned, manned, and navigated by British subjects, though hired by the Bolivian Government, was entitled to carry the British flag, being engaged in an occupation lawful to a British subject, and we are still of opinion that, for the outrage to the flag, and for enforcing compensation to the owners of the "Morro," if the Bolivian Government will not submit to the jurisdiction of the Peruvian Courts, or those Courts refuse to entertain the case, the employment of a man-of-war may be resorted to.

The imperfect state of the machinery of the "Morro," which made it necessary for her to keep in shore and was the cause of her easy seizure, and the possible difficulty of the question whether she met with a total or a partial loss, are strong reasons why the owners should be satisfied with a moderate compensation, whether by agreement with the Bolivian Government themselves, or through Her Majesty's Government.

Some satisfaction is due for outrage on the British flag.

In any event, we submit to your Lordship that some satisfaction or apology is due for the outrage on the British flag.

Annex.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor.

I AM unable to agree with the Law Officers as to the insult to the British flag.

It appears that the British Consul at Iquique in Peru chartered this vessel to the Bolivian Consul there, knowing that an armed revolutionary movement was going on in Bolivia, and expressly with a view to the use of this vessel by the Representative of the Bolivian Government at Cobija, for his own preservation, in case he should have to yield to superior force on the part of the insurgents. It also appears that the captain, under this charter, thought proper to sail under the British flag, which (I agree with the Law Officers in thinking) he was entitled to do, but which did not the less leave him exposed to the consequences of an employment by a foreign Government, for a purpose connected with its own measures of defence against its insurgent citizens.

I hold it utterly impossible, under these circumstances, to do more, with respect to the insult offered to the flag, than to ask from the Bolivian Government an expression of the regret, which they must undoubtedly feel, that such an insult should have been offered to the national ensign of this country by Bolivian subjects, though in armed opposition to their Government.

But with respect to the damage to the ship and her equipments, and the loss of property on board by the master and crew, I think there is a strong case for asking compensation from the Bolivian Government, by whatever peaceable means may be most convenient; and the fact that there may be a doubt upon the letter of the contract whether the charterers undertook to make good anything less than a total loss is (in my judgment) one reason why the application should be made directly to the Bolivian Government. It may, indeed, turn out that they may deny having authorized Mr. Morris, their Consul at Iquique, to charter the vessel for their service, in which case different questions may arise. But, for the present, I assume that they did give that authority, and if so I certainly consider that they ought to indemnify the owners and crew from all losses sustained by them, while the ship was in that service, through the acts of the enemies of the Bolivian Government in Bolivia.

The case, however, does not rest here. If the facts alleged in the protest of the principal engineer are true, it would appear that after the vessel had passed out of the power of the revolutionary party at Tocopilla into that of the Constitutional Government at Bolivia, the agents of the Bolivian Government themselves inflicted divers personal indignities upon the engineers and men of the ship, and pillaged a great part of their property.

(Signed) SELBORNE.

30, Portland Place, London,
February 24, 1873.

In the meanwhile, and with reference to the Company, it seems to us, at present, that the decision of the Court of Appeal may probably be right according to the law of Brazil; should this be so, no redress could properly be sought from the Brazilian Government. Upon this point, whether the decision is right by the law of Brazil, Mr. Mathew should be instructed to inform your Lordship.

The agents, however, appear from the minutes of the section of Council of State for the affairs of justice to have been illegally treated, and if so, will be entitled to some compensation from the Brazilian Government.

My Lord,

Temple, August 4, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tente[illegible] letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 5th December and 17th July last, and to Article VI of the Consular Convention between Great Britain and Brazil therewith inclosed, he was to request that we would acquaint your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether the Convention as it now stands will require any authorization from Parliament, or whether Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro might be instructed to exchange the ratification of the Convention with the Brazilian Government as soon as the alteration in Article II, which relates to wreck, in the Convention signed by Mr. Mathew and the Brazilian Plenipotentiary on the 22nd April last, has been agreed to by the Brazilian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Convention as it now stands will not require any authorization from Parliament, and Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro may be instructed to exchange the ratifications as soon as the alteration in Article II has been agreed to by the Brazilian Government.

My Lord,

Temple, August 16, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Mr. Lennon Hunt,* Her Majesty's Consul at Rio de Janeiro, in which the question was raised whether those of Her Majesty's Consuls who are instructed to collect fees on account of Her Majesty's Government are, under the terms of the Marriage Act, 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, entitled to appropriate to their own use the fees leviable under that Act.

That previous to 1858 Her Majesty's Consuls, with the exception of those in China, Japan, and Siam, were authorized to retain all fees by law leviable by them, but subsequently to that date, in conformity with the opinion expressed by the Consular Committee in their Report dated the 27th July, 1858,† of which a copy was therewith transmitted, that such an arrangement was open to serious objections, Her Majesty's Consulates at certain places had from time to time been placed on a different footing, and an allowance assigned to them in lieu of the fees which the Consuls were instructed to collect on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

That on Mr. Hunt's appointment as Consul at Rio in 1864, that post was placed on the new footing. His letter of appointment was therewith inclosed, together with copies of the Circulars of the 8th July, 1859, and the 20th May, 1861, therein referred to.[*]

Lord Tenterden was pleased further to inclose a copy of the Order in Council of the 1st May, 1855,[†] under which Her Majesty's Consular officers are authorized to levy certain fees, a Table of which was annexed, a form of annual return of all fees and remuneration received by Consular officers,[‡] which they are directed, by paragraph 4 of the General Instructions to Consuls,[§] to send home to the Foreign Office, and a copy of the Marriage Act;[‖] and to say that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Consuls who remit fees to Her Majesty's Government should also remit marriage fees, or whether they are entitled to appropriate them to their own use.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Consuls who remit fees to Her Majesty's Government are entitled to appropriate to their own use and should not remit marriage fees.

There is, we consider, a material difference between fees received for the performance of general Consular duties, such as are scheduled in p. 61 of the General Instructions, and the fees received for a marriage. But we do not think it necessary to trouble your Lordship with any observations on that head, because our opinion proceeds on the words of 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, sec. 10, p. 189 of the General Instructions, that the Consuls shall be entitled to have a sum of 20*s.* or 10*s.*, as the case may be, for every marriage, and we think this word "have" means for his own use, as distinct from "take" in the Order at p. 61, and the words "take," "accept," and "receive" in the 6 Geo. IV., cap. 7, sec. 4, p. 17 of the General Instructions.

That in the event of the Brazilian Government refusing to send to England at once such of the emigrants as desire it, the emigrants should be brought home at the expense of the country, and the cost claimed from the Brazilian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord, Temple, January 8, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, inclosing the claim of the Honduras Railway Company for compensation for losses suffered during the late revolution in that country; he (Mr. Hammond) also inclosed previous correspondence showing the disturbed state in which Honduras had been for some time past; and he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the support which Her Majesty's Government should give to the claims now advanced.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th November upon the subject of the distribution of certain sums paid to Her Majesty's Representative in Central America, on account of British claims on Honduras under the Chatfield-Cruz Convention of 1852, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury, from which we would see that their Lordships refused to render any assistance in the matter.

And that, in view of that refusal, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the best course to pursue in order to insure a fair distribution of the money in question, and to protect the Secretary of State against legal proceedings arising out of such distribution.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship might appoint some properly qualified person to act as a Commissioner in the distribution of the money in question.

If your Lordship thinks fit to adopt this suggestion, we advise that no distribution or payment of money actually be made till the whole of the claims and accounts and the Report of the Commissioner have been advised upon and examined on your Lordship's behalf.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing copies of two despatches from the Lieutenant-Governor of British Honduras, reporting the measures which he had adopted to prevent any hostile preparations in that Colony against the Government of Guatemala.

That we would observe that in his despatch No. 195 of the 28th October the Lieutenant-Governor raised the question whether the Foreign Enlistment Act could properly be put in force in cases where evident preparations for hostilities were being made in a foreign State, or whether the Act could only be put in force when hostilities had actually commenced on one or the other side.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon that point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That "The Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," cannot, in our opinion, be put in force until the existence of hostilities.

At the same time we are of opinion that it is the duty of the person administering the Government of any British possession, in this case of the Lieutenant-Governor of British Honduras, to take every possible measure to be able to put the Act in force on the first outbreak of hostilities.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence relative to a complaint made by Mr. Thomas Paris of the conduct of the Guatemalan Government in regard to certain bonds issued by that Government in 1863, in pursuance of a contract made with Mr. Thomas Greenhill for the construction of two iron piers at the ports of San José and Tulate, certain of which bonds are now held by Mr. Paris.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any steps should be taken in the matter to which they relate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from the Report of Mr. Corbett that Mr. Greenhill never completed his part of the contract in consideration of which the bonds were issued by the Guatemalan Government.

That on the failure of Mr. Greenhill to fulfil his contract the Guatemalan Government cancelled, as it had, in our opinion, the right to do, those bonds, and consequently that Mr. Paris may properly be informed that Her Majesty's Government can take no steps in the matter.

Temple, July 16, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, on the receipt of our Report of the 4th instant, your Lordship caused Mr. Paris to be informed that Her Majesty's Government could take no steps in regard to his Guatemala bonds.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was now to transmit to us a reply which had been received from Mr. Paris, in which he maintained that the Guatemala Government, and not Mr. Greenhill, broke the contract, in consideration of which the bonds were issued.

And he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take Mr. Paris' letter into consideration (with former papers inclosed) and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any steps should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That our former Report was founded on the facts stated by Mr. Corbett in his Report to your Lordship dated 26th April, 1873, and we are still of opinion that Her Majesty's Government should take no steps in the matter.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 19.)

My Lord,

Temple, July 18, 1873.

WE are honoured with a memorandum from Mr. Hammond stating that, with reference to his letter of the 12th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two further letters from Mr. Paris relative to his Guatemalan bonds, and that he was to request us to take the letters into consideration together with the papers already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the opinion which we formed, as we have already had the honour to report to your Lordship, upon Mr. Corbett's Report is in no way altered by Mr. Paris' letters of the 12th and 14th of the present month.

We are unable to see what good result, or indeed what result of any kind, can follow from sending Mr. Paris' letter of the 12th July last to Mr. Corbett. Your Lordship, however, will be the best able to judge whether this request of Mr. Paris may not be complied with.

My Lord,

Temple, August 18, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 18th ultimo, and to previous Reports upon the subject of certain Guatemalan bonds held by Mr. Paris, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two further letters from Mr. Paris upon the same subject; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no reason to alter the opinion we have already given. We think Mr. Paris should be informed that Her Majesty's Government will take no farther steps in the matter.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 10.)

My Lord,

Temple, September 10, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st September instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 31st March last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further correspondence, as marked in the margin,* relative to the British claims on Honduras under the Chatfield-Cruz Convention of 1852, and that we would see from those papers that the Honduras Minister in London had tendered the sum of 1,800*l.* (in addition to the sums now in hand) as a final settlement of the claims in question; and that your Lordship had caused M. Gutierrez's offer to be communicated to the representatives of the various claimants, so far as they were known, inquiring whether they were willing to accept the same, and requesting them in that case to agree on a joint representative who should undertake the distribution of the money, and through whom all correspondence with the Foreign Office should pass.

* Mr. Bury, August 23.

Mr. Hammond also stated that we would further see from Mr. Bury's letter of the 23rd August ultimo that that gentleman, who represents as surviving assignee the bankrupt Carmichael estate, considered that he had no power to accept the suggested compromise without the permission of the Bankruptcy Court, now the County Court at Liverpool, the Judge of which would probably require the consent of the creditors, a very large and miscellaneous body; and

That the matter was further complicated by the fact that the Carmichael estate had another claim on Honduras under a Treaty of 1859 which cannot at present be taken into consideration, as the proposal of the Honduras Minister had exclusive reference to the claims under the Chatfield Cruz-Convention of 1852.

That in these circumstances Mr. Hammond was pleased to say that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence which was also inclosed, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Bury; and generally as to the course that should be pursued with reference to the claims in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Bury may properly be answered that, looking to the situation and circumstances of the Honduras Government, a considerable time will probably pass before that Government will be able, and possibly it may never be able, to pay the whole debt, principal and interest, and that consequently it is for the Carmichael creditors and himself to consider whether it may not be to their advantage to accept the compromise.

We are of opinion that the compromise cannot be accepted by your Lordship without the assent of all the parties interested, who should appoint one agent to represent them, and that in the event of such assent not being obtained, M. Gutierrez should be informed that the 1,800*l.* cannot be accepted as a discharge of the debts under the Chatfield-Cruz Convention, and that Her Majesty's Government should earnestly press upon the Honduras Government the necessity of paying the claims under the Convention and under the Treaty of 1859.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 10.)

My Lord,

Temple, September 10, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further correspondence, as marked,* relative to the claim of M. Hilario Goussen to be considered a British subject, and, as such, to be refunded a sum of money extorted from him in 1869 by the Nicaraguan authorities as a contribution to a forced loan.

That the former papers were also inclosed, and that Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take the case into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should now be taken therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the letter of Senhor Castillo, dated the 8th April, 1863, is so direct and official recognition of the British nationality of M. Goussen, and followed by the promise of an order to restore the money collected under the forced loan, that Her Majesty's Government may now insist upon the money, with interest, being repaid by the Nicaraguan Government to M. Goussen.

My Lord, Temple, October 19, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, which your Lordship had received from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch from the Lieutenant-Governor of British Honduras, from which it appeared that he had received notice from General Enrique Palacios of his blockade of the port of Omoa.

That General Palacios, as we would see from the accompanying correspondence, was at the head of the party opposed to the present Government of Hondurus, and he, with his confederates, were in possession of a ship called the "General Sherman," and also of an island belonging to Honduras.

That Mr. Hammond was to request, therefore, that we would take those papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship whether General Palacios and his party were in a position which entitled them to proclaim a blockade of Honduras ports which should be respected by neutral shipping.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That General Palacios and his party are in a position, having regard to the state of things existing in Spanish Honduras, which entitles them to proclaim a blockade of Honduras ports which should be respected by neutral shipping.

My Lord, Temple, November 5, 1873.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 27th October last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which your Lordship had received from the Colonial Office, together with a memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office (September 6), respecting a Proclamation issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of British Honduras forbidding the export of arms from that Colony.

That the Earl of Kimberley having asked your Lordship's concurrence in the approval of that Proclamation, Lord Enfield further stated that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion (1) as to the propriety and legality of the issue of the Proclamation by Lieutenant-Governor Cairns; and (2) as to the terms in which it was drawn up.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to say that the former papers bearing on the case were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the issue of a Proclamation forbidding the export of arms from the Colony may in some cases be legal and proper, but such Proclamation should be absolute, and apply to all exportation of arms, &c., excepting, of course, articles supplied for the use of Her Majesty's service, or the property of Her Majesty.

In this sense, we are of opinion that the Proclamation of Governor Cairns would have been proper and legal had he not added the paragraph respecting the state of hostilities in Honduras and Guatemala.

That paragraph affected the whole Proclamation, which consequently became illegal, since in effect it limited the prohibition of exportation to those States, besides coming very close to a declaration of neutrality.

My Lord, Temple, December 19, 1873.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to certain complaints made by the Guatemalan Minister at this Court against the recent proceedings of Sir Lambton Loraine, Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Niobe," on the Atlantic coast of Central America, and that he (Lord Tenterden) was also to inclose a draft of the reply which your Lordship proposes to address to General Negrete on the subject, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the reply of which a draft is inclosed in Lord Tenterden's letter may properly be sent to General Negrete.

My Lord, Temple, December , 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 5th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further correspondence between that Office and the Colonial Office relative to the prohibition of the export of arms, &c., from British Honduras.

That we would see from that correspondence that Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies wished for further explanations as to the instructions that should be given to the Lieutenant-Governor of British Honduras upon the subject; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the Colonial Office.

That the former papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the objection to the Proclamation in its present form is not one which touches its legality, but which affects its policy. The Government of any country may legally forbid the exportation of any commodity to any or to all places, whether for any special reason or without giving any reason. Such a power belongs essentially to its sovereign right.

There is nothing, therefore, illegal in the form of the Proclamation itself. Such Proclamations were frequently issued by Order in Council in England in former times, as we have pointed out in a recent opinion on the same subject.

But as a matter of policy it has not been thought fit in recent times to treat the prohibition of the exportation of arms to belligerent States as one of the ordinary obligations of neutral Powers. The real objection to the form of the Proclamation is that it appears to assume that the exportation is and ought to be prohibited to a belligerent country, because it is a part of the duty of neutrality so to prohibit it in this special case and to a particular distinction.

This would furnish an inconvenient precedent in the future, and might be appealed to as an argument for pressing on the English Government, by its own example, a policy which it has repeatedly, and, as we think, wisely, declined to adopt.

We should be doing in Honduras what we have refused to do in France and in the United States. We should be supplying out of our own armoury weapons to those who, in the future, may make demands upon us similar to those urged by Prince Bismarck and Mr. Seward.

This, it appears to us, would be inconsistent and unwise. We therefore recommend that the Proclamation should be general in its terms; that it should not be confined to exportation to any particular country, and that it should not refer at all to the relations of belligerents and neutrals.

We see no objection to the provision that the Governor may permit the exportation under a licence from himself, but this power should be most carefully granted.

Temple, December 31, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 10th September last, relative to the offer made by the Honduras Minister at this Court of 1,800*l.* as a compromise of British claims on Honduras under the Chatfield-Cruz Convention of 1852, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Harwood, Banner, and Co., who now represented the estate of Mr. Carmichael, the principal claimant, inquiring whether there was now any objection to an immediate distribution of the money in the hands of Her Majesty's Government, as far as the share of the Carmichael estate was concerned.

That Lord Tenterden was also to inclose the previous papers, and some further correspondence which had passed upon the subject of our above-mentioned Report; and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the 1,800*l.* offered by Señor Gutierrez could not be accepted by Her Majesty's Government as an instalment of the sum due, without prejudice to the claim for the payment of the balance, and whether it would be proper and advisable for Her Majesty's Government to propose to do so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the 1,800*l.* offered as a settlement of the whole claim cannot properly, without Señor Gutierrez's consent, be distributed as a payment on account, and must either be accepted by the claimants in full discharge, or returned to the Honduras Representative.

A representation may properly be addressed to Señor Gutierrez suggesting that, as the claimants are clearly entitled to at least this sum, and as it is already provided and appropriated to the claims, he should consent to its distribution, without prejudice to further claims.

It may be represented to Señor Gutierrez that it would not have been competent to Mr. Chatfield, any more than to Her Majesty's Government, to bind the creditors by any compromise without their consent.

Unless Señor Gutierrez should consent to the 1,800*l.* being treated as a payment on account, the claimants should be informed that if they do not accept the sum in full discharge of their claims, it will be returned to the Honduras Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. J. Michael, stating that, in virtue of a concession granted to him by a person styling himself King of Araucania and Patagonia, he was about to send a ship with goods and emigrants to a port in Araucania, and requesting to be informed whether the proposed expedition would be entitled, in case of need, to British protection.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose correspondence with the Chilian Minister at this Court and with the Home Office, relative to a filibustering expedition said to be preparing in England against one of the provinces of Chile, which expedition would appear to be the one being fitted out by Mr. Michael.

That he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Michael's letter, and as to whether Her Majesty's Government should take any steps in regard to the proposed expedition.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Michael may, in our opinion, be properly answered that your Lordship knows nothing of an Orelie Antoine I, King of Araucania and Patagonia. That Mr. Michael and his property and the passengers will be, as British subjects and British property, entitled to the protection of Her Majesty's Government if employed in lawful business, but that Her Majesty's Government will not interfere to protect either goods or persons from the consequences of any breach of the laws of Chile.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received March 28.)

My Lord,

Temple, March 27, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a draft Ordinance, which had been prepared by the Hong Kong Government, for the purpose of preventing the building or equipment in that Colony of vessels intended for the coolie trade. The Ordinance was accompanied by an explanatory letter by the Attorney-General of Hong Kong, and by a minute of the Emigration Board; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the Ordinance might properly be approved by Her Majesty's Government.

That the case of the "Maria Luz," alluded to in the Colonial Office letter, had already been before us, and we reported on the 29th November that the proceedings of the Japanese Government in that affair, fully set forth and commented upon in the accompanying memorandum by Sir E. Hornby, were justifiable and right.

The previous correspondence on the subject was annexed for reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Ordinance, with the exceptions which we submit to your Lordship, may, in our opinion, be properly approved by Her Majesty's Government.

1. The words suggested by Lord Kimberley in Mr. Herbert's letter from the Colonial Office of the 8th March last, in the second penalty clause, section 4, and in sections 9 and 10, should be inserted.

2. In section 12, after the word "equipped," which is twice used in that section, we are of opinion that in each case the words "within the waters of the Colony, and contrary to the provisions of this Ordinance," should be inserted.

3. Section 17 is, in our opinion, open to all the objections stated by Sir C. Murdoch.

The section as it stands authorizes the seizure under all the circumstances of any ship (British or foreign) which, carrying Chinese emigrants, may come within the waters of the Colony. In fact forbids, under penalty of seizure and detention, the waters of the Colony to every ship wherever equipped and however employed in carrying every description of Chinese emigrants to any part of the world.

We are of opinion that this clause should either be altogether left out, or modified by inserting, after the word "which," the words "after having been equipped within the Colony without the licence of the Governor, and contrary to the provisions of this Ordinance."

We consider the omission of the clause the preferable course.

The case of the "Maria Luz" was one in which the conduct of the Peruvian master towards the Chinese on board his vessel justified the action of the Japanese authorities, and has, in our opinion, but a remote if any bearing at all upon the propriety of the proposed Ordinance.

My Lord,

Temple, March 27, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, covering a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong relative to certain proceedings which were instituted in that Colony against a Chinese officer by a Chinaman, whose extradition he (the officer) had been employed to demand; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions that the Colonial Office should be advised to send to the Governor of Hong Kong for his guidance in any similar case that might arise.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, an officer employed to demand the extradition of a foreigner, and guilty of offences against the laws of the country to which he is sent, as for instance in the commission or subornation of perjury for the purpose of obtaining that extradition, is liable to and may properly be made amenable to the laws of that country.

There may, however, be public grounds upon which such a course may not be advisable.

We are, for the reasons set out in the papers sent to us, of opinion that the Governor of Hong Kong may be instructed that in the case of the misconduct of a Chinese officer in the discharge of his duty when employed to demand the extradition of a Chinaman, that officer should be sent back for punishment to his own Government, and that the Chinaman demanded should not be subject to extradition.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking relative to a difficulty made by the Chinese Government as to the recognition of a British Consul for Peking. The circumstances under which the question had been raised were stated in the accompanying memorandum which had been raised in the Foreign Office; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which it would be best to pursue in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proper course would be to give Mr. Wade (who being on the spot can form a correct opinion of the way out of the difficulty existing at Peking) the instructions which he wishes to receive, namely, that he report to the Prince of Kung that in including Peking within the jurisdiction of the Consular district of Tientsin Her Majesty's Government had no object beyond the exercise of control over British subjects who may frequent the capital, and that the Consul will continue as heretofore to reside at Tientsin, and that in the event of a judicial inquiry becoming necessary in the capital, Mr. Wade, on the application of the Yamên, will be prepared to call on the Consul to proceed to Peking for the purpose of holding the inquiry.

Mr. Wade may be instructed further, as suggested in the memorandum, that if the Chinese Government object to the extension of Mr. Morgan's jurisdiction to Peking, Her Majesty's Government will be happy to give one of the officers of the Legation Consular powers over the Metropolitan Prefecture.

That Sir E. Hornby referred to a Circular of 1853 (copy inclosed), but he seemed to have overlooked the Act 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 61, which provides that "every person acting, &c., in the place of a British Consul, such Consul being duly authorized to solemnize and register marriages, &c., shall be deemed to be a British Consul duly authorized for all the purposes of the Consular Marriage Act."

And that, as the question was one of great importance, and had been raised by the Chief Judge of the Supreme Court, your Lordship would wish to have our opinion upon it; and Mr. Hammond was accordingly to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Sir E. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Sir,

I AM honoured with your letter of the 3rd instant, stating that Mr. G. Jamieson, an officer in Her Majesty's Consular Service in China, now on leave in this country, had informed Earl Granville that he was about to petition the Benchers of the Inner Temple for admission to the Bar before his return to China, and after only keeping eight terms; and that he had requested his Lordship to support his application.

You also stated that you were accordingly directed by Earl Granville to request that I would state to the Benchers that it would be a great convenience to the public service if they would grant this privilege to Mr. Jamieson, so as to enable him to return to China at the expiration of his leave of absence.

In answer to your letter, I beg to inform you that I will bring this matter before the Bench to-morrow, which is the earliest opportunity I have of bringing on the question.

Temple, June 23, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd May last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Hornby (No. 2), forwarding a draft of a revised Order in Council, which he proposed should be substituted for the Order in Council of 1865 constituting the Supreme Court for China and Japan; and to request that we would take the despatch into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the proposed alterations.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that Mr. C. W. Goodwin, Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court, was in this country, and would be prepared to give any explanations or information that we might require; that he resided at 5, Princes' Terrace, Bayswater, and would be ready to meet us at such time and place as we might appoint.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have availed ourselves of the assistance of Mr. C. W. Goodwin, Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court, and gone through with him the draft of the revised Order in Council.

And, in our opinion, the proposed alterations, subject to the suggestions which follow, may properly be made:—

In paragraph 99, the word "hamlet" may lead, as we are informed, to some difficulty of interpretation, and might be omitted without mischief.

In addition to the words "Consular officer," in paragraph 114, the words "Court or" should be inserted, so that the sentence should run, "to the satisfaction of the Court or Consular officer;" and the words "by the Court or Consular officer" should be inserted after the word "ordered."

In reference to the registration of mortgages, paragraph 117, we would suggest that some provision should be made for first, second, and subsequent mortgages; and that as between themselves mortgages, whether legal or equitable, should rank and take precedence according to the date of their registration at the office of the Consular district within which the property mortgaged is situated.

My Lord,

Temple, July 7, 1873.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th June ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 2nd December and 2nd April last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office (June 13), suggesting certain alterations in the draft Order in Council which had been prepared by the Solicitor to the Treasury for amending the Order in Council for China and Japan of 1865, in regard to the deportation of British subjects from China to Hong Kong, and to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the draft may be adopted with those alterations.

Mr. Hammond also stated that he was further to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we saw any objection to such further modification being introduced into the draft as will confer upon the Judge of the District Court at Yokohama the same powers in regard to deportation as are given to the Chief Judge of the Supreme Court.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the letter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the draft may, in our opinion, be adopted with the alterations, and we see no objection to the modification conferring upon the Judge of the District Court of Yokohama the like powers in regard to deportation as are given to the Chief Judges of the Supreme Court.

We desire, however, to submit for your Lordship's consideration whether the discretionary power given by the proviso in red ink, paragraph 3, may not lead to the inconvenience of uncertainty and variance in practice, and had not, on that account, better be omitted.

We have, &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Sir E. Hornby, forwarding a newspaper report of the trial of Mr. G. W. Caine; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the proceedings in the case as therein set forth.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the ruling of Sir E. Hornby and his directions to the jury were right.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 20th ultimo, respecting the case of Mr. Caine, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a farther despatch from Sir E. Hornby upon the same subject; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

Temple, November 11, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the German Chargé d'Affaires, respecting the connection of a German firm with the "Fatchoy," a vessel engaged in the Macao coolie trade, together with the papers laid before Parliament, the various Ordinances bearing on the subject, and a memorandum bearing on the case drawn up in the Foreign Office; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether any farther law should be passed to prevent the recurrence of such cases, and also whether any, and, if so, what, steps could be taken to prosecute Messrs. Elilers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the now existing Ordinance is, if strictly enforced, sufficient to prevent a recurrence of such cases as the "Fatchoy."

And we think the evidence placed before us is not sufficient to support a prosecution against Messrs. Elilers.

My Lord,

Temple, December 16, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch (No. 11) from Sir E. Hornby, the Judge of the Supreme Court at Shanghae, inclosing copies of a correspondence with the Consul at Canton in regard to vessels employed in the Macao coolie traffic; and he had to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That so far as we see there was nothing in the fitting out of the vessel in question which showed that she was to engage in an illegal traffic, and we therefore consider that there was no reason which would have justified Her Majesty's Consul at Canton in interfering in the particular case.

And we agree with the reasoning and conclusions of Sir E. Hornby upon the more general view of the Macao coolie traffic in his letter to Her Majesty's Consul at Canton.

My Lord, Temple, December 18, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 23rd June and 7th July last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the amended draft of the revised Order in Council for China and Japan, in which the provisions of the amended Order relating to deportation from Hong Kong had been embodied; and he was to request that we would take the draft into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the revised Order in Council might properly be issued in the form in which it is now submitted to us.

The former correspondence on the subject was sent therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That since the Order in Council was before the late Law Officers and Dr. Deane, we have had to consider how far it was within the power of Her Majesty's Consular officers to issue passports to British subjects intending to travel beyond, and not within, the Treaty ports of Japan.

The proposed Regulations for that purpose appeared to us not altogether consistent with the existing Order in Council, and they are equally inconsistent with the revised Order, clause 8, p. 87.

We suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that a provision might be with advantage introduced into this part of the revised Order sanctioning the proposed Regulations.

In other respects the revised Order in Council may properly be issued in the form in which it is now drawn.

My Lord, Temple, December 19, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch (No. 10) from Sir E. Hornby, inclosing copies of despatches he has addressed to Her Majesty's Consuls at Shanghae and Foochow, with reference to the Rules framed by the Tea and Silk Guilds of those ports; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we have not any very clear statement of the nature of the Rules referred to in Sir E. Hornby's despatch, nor of the extent to which such Rules are enforced.

In the absence of such information we cannot advise that Sir E. Hornby would be justified in making any formal remonstrance to the Chinese Government, but if the enforcement of the Rules is found prejudicially to affect English traders, we see no objection to his calling the attention of the Chinese authorities to the injury resulting to trade from such Rules being allowed to exist.

My Lord, Temple, December , 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, forwarding a Code of Rules, drawn up by the Consul at Shanghae, for the management of the prison at that port; and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the power of Her Majesty's Minister to make those Regulations under the Order in Council of 1865.

That a copy of the Order in Council was inclosed therewith for convenience of reference, together with a letter from the Home Office, to whom the Regulations have been submitted, forwarding a Report on them by the Director of Convict Prisons.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are disposed to think that section 85 of the Order in Council may be taken to extend to a power to make Regulations for the governance of persons detained in prison.

But it seems clear that the punishments provided by Rules 40 (last part), 41, and 42 are not warranted by any authority conferred by the Order in Council.

If it is thought desirable that such Rules should be made, it will be proper that express provision should be made for the case in the amended Order in Council for China and Japan, which, it is believed, are under consideration.

But, in the meanwhile, the operation of these Rules should be suspended.

In the second paragraph of the 85th clause there is a stipulation which appears to have been infringed as to the letter, that, save in case of urgency declared in any such Regulations, such Regulations shall not have effect unless and until they are approved by Her Majesty.

We do not find in the Regulations any urgency declared, yet the Regulations are stated to be in force for the period of twelve months without Her Majesty's consent.

It would be well that Mr. Wade's attention should be called to the second paragraph of the 85th clause, and that the Regulations should be withdrawn until after Her Majesty's assent has been signified.

My Lord, Temple, July 3, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit a note which had been received from the Danish Minister at this Court, stating that considerable inconvenience is frequently caused by the refusal of executors in England to pay over legacies left to Danish subjects who are minors until such legatees have come of age.

That General de Bülow inquired whether executors are, in fact, authorized or (as has been asserted) compelled by English law to retain legacies under such circumstances, in the manner described, even when the property was left unconditionally; and in case the law of England should not confer such a right, he was anxious to know what steps are necessary to obtain the payment of the legacies to the Danish authorities charged with the administration of pupillary estates, the organization of which is stated to be such as to offer all proper security for the interests of the parties concerned.

And that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take this paper into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to General de Bülow.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, General de Bülow may be answered that executors would not be justified, according to the law of England, in paying to the Danish authorities legacies left to infants.

But the executors may, under 23 & 24 Vict., cap. 145, pay to the guardian of the infant, or apply for his maintenance or education, the income of the property.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in approving the scheme proposed for the settlement of outstanding claims against the Egyptian Government whether made on the part of Austrian and Italian subjects, as stated in Mr. Hammond's letter to us, or, should the case arise, on the part of British subjects, to which the despatch of Colonel Stanton refers.

papers, a farther despatch, and inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul at Alexandria relative to the claim of Messrs. Wills, Manché, & Co. on Her Majesty's Government, in connection with a sum deposited in the hands of a former British Consular Agent at Port Saïd; and that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and inform your Lordship whether Mr. Stanley's last despatch caused us to alter the opinion which we have already expressed in regard to the liability of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord, Temple, March 10, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th November last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with previous papers in the case, a letter, and inclosures, from the Board of Admiralty, wherein the question is again revived as to whether the Egyptian steamer "Charkieh" was to be considered a ship of war, and consequently not liable to arrest pending the legal proceedings arising out of her collision with the "Batavier;" and he was to request that we would again take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, with the answer which should be returned to the Board of Admiralty on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We think that the Board of Admiralty should be informed that they should answer Messrs. Clarkson's letter by a statement of the substance of paragraph 3 of Mr. Vernon Lushington's letter. Having perused the further papers sent, we think, having regard to the additional evidence now produced, that the "Charkieh" was a national vessel; but of course these points will be decided by the Admiralty Court.

My Lord, Temple, March 24, 1873.

That he also sent us a copy of the final Report which had been unanimously agreed to by the Representatives, together with a letter from Nubar Pasha, transmitting the Règlement which he had drawn up in conformity with it. He likewise inclosed the papers noted in the margin showing what had passed, with a view to the appointment of the Commission which had now tendered its Report.

That that Report we would perceive, previous to its final adoption, must, in the first instance, obtain the sanction of Her Majesty's Government, and it was with that view that he (Mr. Hammond) was directed to request our opinion upon its provisions, and whether we considered that the proposed arrangement could be accepted.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed two despatches from Sir H. Elliot with reference to the proceedings of the French Representative in his discussions on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proposed arrangement may be accepted, and the Report receive the sanction of Her Majesty's Government.

We do not think it necessary to trouble your Lordship with any remarks upon the two despatches, with inclosures, from Sir H. Elliot, except this, that the conduct and suggested object of the French Representative are strong reasons why Her Majesty's Government should sanction the Report as soon as possible.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Vice-Consul at Alexandria, asking for instructions in regard to the deportation of a British subject, under a sentence of imprisonment passed by the Consular Court, to this country for the purpose of completing the term of his sentence; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the case into consideration, in connection with the Order in Council of November 1864, a copy of which was inclosed, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the course recommended by Mr. Lane could properly be followed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the course recommended by Mr. Lane cannot, in our opinion, be followed. There is no provision for continuing the imprisonment in England, and therefore the prisoner, on reaching England, would be entitled to claim his discharge.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 24th March, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a farther despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, inclosing copies of a correspondence which had passed between Nubar Pasha and himself (the Ambassador), and also with his German, French, and Italian colleagues, respecting the mode in which the Khedive proposed to select the Judges to be appointed to preside over the new Egyptian Tribunals; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request our opinion as to whether the scheme proposed by the Khedive could be properly accepted.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed despatches relative to the desire expressed by the French Ambassador at Constantinople that a second French Judge of Appeal should be appointed in the event of a vacancy arising amongst those who might be first appointed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the scheme proposed by the Khedive may properly be accepted.

The desire expressed by the French Ambassador, if carried out, would ultimately give the French a preponderance among the Judges of Appeal, and exclude a Judge of some other nationality, and is therefore objectionable in itself, and contrary to the views already expressed on the subject by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the statements contained in General Stanton's letter of the 22nd June last, which we assume to be true, are a complete answer to the claim of Messrs. WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, with its inclosures, from Messrs. Bott and Co., complaining of the alleged non-fulfilment of a shipping contract on the part of the Egyptian Government with Messrs. Barker and Co.

That Messrs. Bott's letter also referred to an alleged vexatious detention of British vessels at Alexandria while loading ballast.

That as, however, this latter question was one rather of administration than of law, your Lordship desired to ask our opinion only with regard to the first-named question, a Report on which was contained in the inclosed despatch from the Acting British Consul-General in Egypt; and that Mr. Hammond was accordingly to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Vivian with regard to Messrs. Barker's claim upon the Egyptian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Vivian is quite right in his view that the complaint should be brought before the Mixed Commercial Tribunal, and that official pressure should not, except in cases of proved miscarriage by that Tribunal, be brought upon the Egyptian Government.

That view, generally correct, is particularly so in the present case, in which there is some doubt as to the rights of Messrs. Bott or Messrs. Wilson, and the question is one of contract.

Mr. Vivian may therefore properly be instructed not to press the claim upon the Egyptian Government.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 28th October last, stating that, with reference to the Reports of the Law Officers of the 5th June and 9th October last, on the subject of the complaint of the Ramlé Railway Company against the Egyptian Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us letters from Mr. Fleming, the Chairman, and from Mr. Hugh Rose, a shareholder of the Company, requesting the assistance of Her Majesty's Government on their behalf; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether there is anything in them to induce us to alter the opinion already expressed on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no reason to alter the opinion which we have already expressed on this subject.

We take the liberty of suggesting for your Lordship's consideration whether Mr. Fleming may not properly be told that the matter is not one for the interference of Her Majesty's Government, and that he must, if so advised, take his own choice of a Tribunal in Egypt and accept the responsibility.

My Lord, Temple, November 5, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in a memorandum from Lord Enfield of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Wilson and Co., urging the case of the Ramlé Railway Company against the Egyptian Government.

We have also received a further memorandum from Lord Enfield, transmitting us a letter from Mr. Bulkeley, urging the case of the same Company against the said Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully read the letters of Messrs. Wilson, McLay, and Co., and Mr. Bulkeley. The questions between the Company and the Egyptian Government are, as we have had the honour of submitting to your Lordship, fit for the decision of a Tribunal or by arbitration, and do not in our opinion need, and would not justify, any interference on your Lordship's part.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 10th November instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin,* relative to a question which had arisen as to the Tribunal before which a case of disputed salvage at Suez should be tried, and that we should observe that, in pursuance of the opinion expressed by Mr. Reilly in the inclosed memorandum, and in order to avoid delay, your Lordship had instructed the Acting Consul-General in Egypt by telegraph to allow the Egyptian Tribunal to judge the case in the present instance, without making it a precedent, until he should have received further instructions in the matter; and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer with regard to the general question of jurisdiction in Egypt in cases of salvage.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th November ultimo, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 24th October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further communication from Mr. Isaac Pariente (November 10), again urging his claim against the Egyptian Government; and to request that we would have the goodness to take that letter into our consideration, in conjunction with the previous papers therewith inclosed, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in supporting this claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord, Temple, January 7, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 20th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Brussels, together with a copy of the first two Articles of the draft Treaty of Commerce between France and Belgium therein referred to. These were the Articles containing the most-favoured-nation treatment clause, as well as a provision for the case of the duty on raw materials not being imposed; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, having regard to the stipulations of those Articles, we saw any reason to alter, or add to, the Protocol which Lord Lyons had instructions to propose to the French Government (draft inclosed).

That he was to state that, as the French Assembly met again yesterday, and the Report of the Paris Tariff Commission had been agreed to and was about to be signed, it was of great importance that your Lordship should be furnished with our opinion at our earliest convenience, in order that the negotiation of the Protocol, which had been delayed until the text of the Franco-Belgian Treaty could be examined, might be proceeded with and the Treaty submitted to the Assembly for approval.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We see no reason to alter the proposed Protocol, which in paragraphs 2 and 3 seems to us to provide for the imposition of compensatory duties in the same way with that provided by the IInd Article of the French and Belgian Treaty.

The most-favoured-nation clause is the same in both Treaties.

My Lord, Temple, January 8, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of to-day, stating that, with reference to our Report of yesterday on the subject of the French Treaty Protocol, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing a revised draft of Protocol, together with an explanatory memorandum, and he was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the words "which has been accepted by the two Governments," at the end of paragraph 2, p. 1, of the draft Protocol might, without inconvenience and with possible advantage, be omitted.

The word "consequently," in paragraph 2, p. 5, is, in our opinion, a word which had better be omitted, the word "and" being used instead.

The word "moreover," in paragraph 1, p. 12, might, in our opinion, be well omitted.

In other respects we are of opinion the amended Protocol may be adopted.

My Lord, Temple, January 10, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 25th May, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing the reply of the French Government to the representations which were addressed to them in regard to the duties charged by the French authorities in the Gaboon River on goods transhipped from one vessel to another in transit for this country. That your Lordship desired him (Lord Tenterden) to observe that there did not appear to exist any Treaty stipulations between Great Britain and France applicable to that French Colony; and he was to request that we would take that despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the French authorities could properly levy the duties in question.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of to-day, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Lord Lyons, together with the previous correspondence, respecting the Protocol which he was instructed to negotiate with the French Government with regard to the manner in which the Treaty of Commerce was to take effect; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Protocol, as drawn on the part of the French Government,, leaves the question of the imposition of the tax on raw materials, and the effect of the imposition being levied or not, is too vague and ambiguous a form, and we consider the Protocol prepared on the part of Her Majesty's Government to be preferable on that account, and not open to the objections made to its form or substance.

That an arrangement should be come to between the two Governments by "notes" does not appear to us a desirable course, particularly when the negotiation has so far proceeded, but your Lordship is better able to form an opinion upon the subject, knowing the difficulties which the French Government may experience.

No. 63.

Memorandum by Lord Selborne.

I THINK that the position in which this matter stands is very embarrassing.

It seems to me clear that, under the Law of July, as long as the Pouyer-Quertier clause remains unrepealed the French Government cannot lawfully levy the duties on raw materials mentioned in that clause, as long as there are any foreign nations from which the same raw materials can be introduced into France without being subject to compensatory duties.

But it is by no means clear that M. Thiers takes precisely this view of the effect of that clause. In the printed correspondence there is more than one indication that the idea exists in some quarters in France that it might be competent for the Government to levy on raw materials imported from Great Britain or British possessions the duties under the Tariff of the Law of July, on the ground that by the Treaty Tariff compensatory duties are leviable on British manufactures, although the same duties might not be capable of being levied upon similar raw materials imported from other countries. Such a state of things could scarcely be satisfactory to British merchants, if it could lawfully be done in France, which (as I read and construe the Pouyer-Quertier clause) it could not.

It seems to me, on this point, very important to remember the public declarations made by M. Thiers in his Message of the 13th November, 1872, to the National Assembly, at p. 45 and 46 of the Confidential correspondence. He then said distinctly that the first condition of the Treaty was "la perception au 1er Décembre prochain de nos taxes fiscales;" and "Les taxes fiscales mises sur les produits étrangers, notamment sur les matières premières, et les droits compensateurs qui en sont la consequence nécessaire, seront perçus à partir du 1er Décembre prochain sur toutes les provenances de la Grande Bretagne, d'après le Tarif voté par vous le 26 Juillet dernier."

I should infer, from M. Thiers' dislike of the substance as well as the form of the Protocol proposed on our part, and from his impatience of the suggestion that the duties on raw materials, under the Tariff of July, may not, in fact, be levied, that he still retains the views and intentions indicated in the paragraph, and that he is prepared to act in a distributive sense on the words of the Pouyer-Quertier clause, i.e., to treat the raw materials imported from any particular foreign nation as subject to have the duties levied on them, if he has acquired a right to levy compensatory duties on the manufactures from similar materials of the same nation.

This Message having been M. Thiers' public announcement of the Treaty to the Assembly, and it being admitted that the Assembly, and not M. Thiers, is in this case the Treaty-making and the law-making power, I am of opinion that the signature of diplomatic notes between M. Thiers and the British Government, without communication to a ratification by the Assembly [sic], would confer upon the Government of this country no rights against France different from those which the Treaty itself (if ratified) would give; at the utmost such notes would only be binding in honour upon M. Thiers himself as Head of the Executive Government of France to the extent of his powers and individual discretion.

When I look to the Treaty itself I find that the IInd Article is absolute, that, as against this country, the duties specified in the Tariff there referred to shall be leviable after the ratification. Unless, therefore, the Tariff itself be so worded as to show that so much of the "total amount of duties leviable," mentioned in the fourth column, as is composed of the duties called "compensatory for the new taxes on raw materials" in the heading of the third column (with the words "scale arising from the new law" above written), is not to be added to the import duties in the second column, unless the duties on raw materials are legally leviable, and actually levied in France—unless this is the true and necessary interpretation of the words of the Annex I—the second Article of the Treaty makes the duties under the columns headed "Total amount of duties leviable" capable of being exacted as duties really differential though assented to (and fixed in point of amount) as to some extent compensatory from the date of the ratification. I incline to think with the Law Officers that the division of the duties in the Annex into three different columns, with these headings, does really mean that the duties in the third column are only to be levied if and when the new taxes on raw materials take effect; any other sense would, as it seems to me, be inconsistent with the reason and the good faith of the transaction. The recitals in the Report of the Commission under Article XXI (though these recitals can hardly be admissible in aid of the construction of the Treaty) are to the same effect. I think, therefore, that if notes are signed as proposed, the British Government will be fairly entitled to say that such notes do but express the mutual understanding of the two Governments, in accordance with the real sense of the language of the Treaty. But I think a Protocol would be far safer and better if communicated to and ratified by the Assembly; because it is most unsatisfactory and can hardly be safe that so important a matter should be left to depend on inferences, drawn not from any direct declarations of the Treaty itself, but from the manner in which the Annex is divided into columns, and from the headings prefixed to those colums.

If we do not intend to acquiesce in the view that the duties in question may be levied against us, if the duties on raw materials are also levied against us (though not against all other nations), we ought to take very good care that the instrument, whether note or Protocol, is on this point unequivocally expressed.

(Signed) SELBORNE.

Temple, February 24, 1873.

My Lord,

That although the difficulty in that particular instance was got over, yet, with a view to future cases of a like nature arising, Lord Lyons was desirous of receiving instructions, as well for his own guidance as for that of Her Majesty's Consul at Havre; and he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Lord Lyons' despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Lord Lyons may be properly instructed to bring the state of the French law, as explained by M. Treitt, to the attention of the French Government, and to place before that Government the great inconvenience which that law so explained enforces on British subjects in France, whilst in its application to British subjects that law cannot subserve the interests of order or of property in France.

And Lord Lyons may be instructed to request the French Government, if the view of the law taken by M. Treitt is right, to procure an alteration in the law as applicable to British subjects, or to give the French authorities some instructions such as those suggested by M. Treitt.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, and inclosures, received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, respecting a claim upon the French Government preferred by Mr. Hinton, a British subject, on account of the occupation of the Hôtel des Bains, at Cherbourg, of which he had a lease, as a hospital, by order of the French military authorities, during the war.

It would appear from the correspondence that experts on the part of Mr. Hinton and of the Intendance Militaire fixed the compensation to be made at 14,435 fr. (about 577*l*. 8*s*.) of which amount, after a long delay, Mr. Hinton received the sum of 1,500 fr. (about 60*l*.), but this case, with others, had been subsequently referred to a Commission charged to settle the amounts of indemnity to be given for losses occasioned by the war; Lord Lyons was informed that the indemnity, as fixed by the Minister of War, had been reduced to 7,340 fr. (about 294*l*.) which was little more than half the original award.

Lord Lyons, as we would perceive, on the strength of the exceptional hardship of the case, addressed the French Government on Mr. Hinton's behalf; but neither the steps taken by his Excellency, nor the remonstrance of Mr. Hinton, nor those of Her Majesty's Consul at Cherbourg, had availed to induce the French Government to pay Mr. Hinton the amount of the original award, and he was stated to have returned to this country in a destitute condition.

That Lord Lyons had accordingly reported the case to Her Majesty's Secretary of State; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the correspondence into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the farther steps, if any, which could be taken in Mr. Hinton's behalf.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons has, in our opinion, taken every step which would be likely to move the French Government or the French Minister of War to alter the determination made on the subject of Mr. Hinton's claim; and we are unable to suggest any farther steps which would effectually, or at all, be taken on behalf of Mr. Hinton.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 5th March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Lord Lyons (No. 96, Commercial, February 22, 1873), inclosing the Projet de Loi to enable the President of the French Republic to ratify the Treaty of Commerce of November last. That the Projet de Loi is prefaced by an Exposé des Motifs, into the sentiments expressed in which Her Majesty's Government were not called upon to inquire, as it is not a document on which any official representation would, your Lordship considered, be properly addressed, in accordance with international usage, to the French Government; but that your Lordship would be glad if we would nevertheless take the Exposé des Motifs into our consideration, and favour you with our opinion whether there are any assertions contained in it placing a construction on the Articles of the Treaty which could be considered to invalidate the agreement as to the construction of the Treaty which was recorded by the interchange of notes of the 29th January.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the Exposé des Motifs.

That Exposé is, in our opinion, a fair and proper statement of the negotiations for and the objects and provisions of the Treaty, and contains no assertions which would place a construction on the Articles of the Treaty invalidating the agreement as to the construction of the Treaty recorded in the interchanges of notes of the 29th January.

The Protocol is probably not referred to in the Exposé because it bears even date with and is taken as part of the Treaty itself; the omission is not, in our opinion, material.

Prévité and Greig, praying to be relieved from paying the "surtaxe d'entrepôt" on a cargo of bitumen brought from Trinidad to London, and there transhipped to France.

That he was to inclose a despatch on the subject from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, to whom the above letter was referred; and he was to request that we would take the same into consideration, together with the accompanying copy of the Anglo-French Treaty of Commerce of the 5th November last, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the observations made by Lord Lyons on the letter of Messrs. Prévité and Greig, praying to be relieved from payment of the "surtaxe d'entrepôt," are perfectly sound, and since the "surtaxe d'entrepôt" is levied alike on French and English vessels, and no question arises on this point under the Anglo-French Commercial Treaty of the 5th November, 1872, your Lordship cannot comply with the application of Messrs. Prévité and Greig in bringing their case to the attention of the French Government with any hopes of relieving those gentlemen.

And that he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the practice in this country and in America has been to require farther proof where the papers found on board were not sufficient to enable the Prize Court to restore or condemn the property upon the evidence of the papers themselves.

We would, however, submit that your Lordship may properly consider whether the decision or practice of a French Prize Court, in a matter not relating to British interests, can be made the subject of any official representation to the French Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 15th instant, stating that upon receipt of our Report of the 3rd instant respecting the case of Mr. Porter, against whom legal proceedings in the French Courts had been taken on account of certain gas contracts, and which had also led to an application from Mr. Brogden, who was mixed up in the case, for the assistance of Her Majesty's Embassy at Paris in certain proceedings with which he also was threatened, your Lordship caused both Mr. Brogden and Mr. Porter's solicitor, Mr. Silverthorne, to be informed that he was unable to furnish Lord Lyons with instructions to take any further steps in this case.

Viscount Enfield also stated that he inclosed, together with the draft of the letter above referred to, a letter from that gentleman in reply, urging a reconsideration of his original application, on the ground that he does not stand in the same position as Mr. Porter, who being engaged in trade in France, he observed, was liable to be dealt with according to French law, and further on the ground of the very limited extent to which he asked for the interposition of Her Majesty's Ambassador.

Viscount Enfield further stated that he was to request that we would take Mr. Brogden's letter into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion whether the further explanation received from him alters in any way the opinion we expressed on the subject, or would warrant any, and if so what, further instructions to Lord Lyons on Mr. Brogden's behalf. That the previous papers were also transmitted to us for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the explanation given by Mr. Brogden in his letter to Mr. Hammond does not in any way alter the opinion we have already expressed.

The question whether and to what extent Mr. Brogden may be liable to criminal proceedings is one for the decision of the French Tribunals, and the case is before those Tribunals. If any such proceedings should be taken against him it would then be time to consider whether any representation should be made in his behalf. There is nothing, in our opinion, at present to warrant Her Majesty's Government in giving Lord Lyons any further instructions on behalf of Mr. Brogden, who is in the position of a person against whom legal proceedings are threatened.

Temple, March 27, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Embassy at Paris, inclosing a copy of a note from the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, respecting the claim of a Mr. David Jones for compensation for damage sustained by his house and property at Blois, and which the French Government still declined to entertain for the reasons stated therein; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature of the instruction which should be addressed to Lord Lyons on the subject.

1873

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the answer of M. de Rémusat to Lord Lyons makes it impossible for Her Majesty's Government or for Lord Lyons again to bring forward the claim of Mr. Jones.

Lord Lyons may, therefore, be properly instructed to that effect; but we see no objection to Mr. Jones being informed by Lord Lyons of the chance that he may possibly receive some compensation, if he thinks proper to apply to the competent authorities in the manner pointed out by M. de Rémusat.

We presume if Lord Lyons gives this information to Mr. Jones that Lord Lyons will tell M. de Rémusat that he has so informed Mr. Jones.

Temple, April 25, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating on the 12th ultimo Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonial Office communicated to your Lordship a copy of the Report with which we had furnished that Department, dated the 6th March, on the question now under discussion between the British and French Governments of appointing magistrates on the "French shore" of Newfoundland.

That he was to transmit to us the draft of a despatch which was thereupon addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, directing his Excellency to make a representation to the French Government founded upon our Report, and a despatch from him inclosing a draft of the communication which he proposed to address to that Government in consequence, but which he had first submitted for approval, with marginal notes which occurred to His Excellency after the note was framed.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) also inclosed a further letter from the Colonial Office containing some observations and suggestions in regard to the ultimate form in which this representation should be framed; and that he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the precise terms which it would be desirable to adopt in that communication.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the observations of Lord Lyons and the Colonial Office upon our former Report, and upon the form of the representation to be made to the French Government upon the subject of appointing magistrates upon the so-called French coast of Newfoundland.

In reference to the suggestion in the letter from the Colonial Office, that the words "to protect the buildings of the fishermen during their absence" should be omitted, we submit to your Lordship's consideration that as the engagements between the two countries allow these huts or buildings to be erected, they ought to be protected from plunder and wilful destruction during the absence of those who have put them up, and we would suggest the retaining of those words, which do not imply more than protection from wilful damage.

The observations in the letter from the Colonial Office upon the notes of Lord Lyons make it needless for us to trouble your Lordship with any remarks, and we are of opinion that the representation may properly be framed in its present form.

Temple, May 28, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with inclosures, from Mr. Kennedy, the British Representative at the Tariff Commission in Paris, requesting instructions on certain points connected with the claims of importers of mineral oils into France, which it is provided in Article 5 of the Protocol to the Anglo-French Treaty of the 5th November should be considered by the Commission; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Kennedy on the various points referred to in his despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion—

1. It is quite possible, in reference to M. Ozenne's proposition, that the questions decided in what is called the "test case" may be all the material questions upon the contracts for mineral oils which can arise; and if so there will be no use in submitting other cases to trial, but that it is impossible, without knowing what the points decided are, to consent beforehand to be bound by any decision, which may turn upon some matter irrelevant to a case similar at first sight.

In reference to propositions 2 and 3, the last clause of Article 5 of the Protocol provides indemnification for actions for breach of contract resulting from the operation of the Law of the 8th July, 1871, in other words, that the person who is prevented by operation of the law from completing his contract, bona fides being assumed, shall be indemnified against all losses caused by actions brought for such breach of contract.

But beyond this indemnification for actions for breach of contract, it is to be observed that the last clause of Article 5 of the Protocol says, "the settlement shall include," &c.; something beyond the indemnification is provided, and the first three clauses of Article 5 state in terms sufficiently exact upon what terms mineral oils are to be supplied to persons in France under contracts entered into before the promulgation of the Law of the 8th July, 1871, and how that settlement is to be effected.

The result is that the English party to the contract is indemnified against actions, and may as soon as the Treaty comes into operation introduce his oils subject to the two clauses of Article 5.

And in answer to his first question Mr. Kennedy may properly be instructed that he cannot consent to all the questions being settled by the decision in a test case, and that the contention of M. Ozenne in his propositions 2 and 3 is right, provided the English contractor is indemnified against all liability for breach of contract.

2. The claim under numeral 15 can only be recommended.

3. The claim under numeral 20 is not, in our opinion, admissable.

4. The phrase "promulgation of the Law of the 8th July, 1871" must, in our opinion, have the strict meaning that the law was made and became an act accomplished, and had ceased to be an intention and project.

5. We see no objection to the notice suggested by Mr. Kennedy being issued for the advantage of both classes of persons to whom he refers.

6. The Commissioners may refer any point upon which they may differ to the Arbitrator, and may make that reference at any time, and probably it will be most convenient to make such reference and obtain the Arbitrator's decision at the earliest available opportunity.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter from Mr. Morison, complaining of the fraudulent imitation in France of the British Government stamp affixed to his medicines, and calling for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this paper into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the information given by Mr. Morison requires some more precise details, as, for instance, the street number and name of the owner of the shop in which the forged stamps are alleged to be sold.

When this information has been furnished, evidence of the fact that the stamps are forged should be procured.

And if the forgery is established, Her Majesty's Government may properly call the attention of the French Government to that fact, and request that Government to prevent the continuance of the forgeries and to punish the person or persons who may be found guilty.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th December last and to previous correspondence respecting M. de Rotour's Bill on military service in France, the effect of which would be to subject the sons born in France of foreign parents to such service, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris on this subject, reporting a conversation with the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, and calling his Excellency's (the Minister's) attention to this measure, which is about to be considered in the National Assembly, and commenting upon various points in connection therewith.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take Lord Lyons' despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with any observations which we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that on the 22nd April of last year we favoured your Lordship with our opinion in regard to the claim of Mr. Insley against the French Government on account of the pillage by the Communists, at the Halles Centrales, of a quantity of butter supplied by Mr. Insley to that Government, in regard to his claim which was forwarded upon our Report; but, as we would perceive from his letter now transmitted to us, he renews his application for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government, having failed in his endeavours to obtain satisfaction from that of France through the ordinary channels; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us again to take this case into our consideration, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course Her Majesty's Government should take in regard to this application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government cannot bring the claim of Mr. Insley to the notice of the French Government.

If the evidence on which Mr. Insley relies to show that he, by his agent, applied for the missing casks of butter before the pillage, was not produced in support of his claim, or was kept back by his own agent, Mr. Insley must suffer for the error of his agent.

If that evidence was brought forward, the French Government has decided upon the effect of the evidence, and is not likely to reconsider the evidence and change its decision.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Germans have, by the Treaty of Frankfort, a most-favoured-nation clause for so long only as they and the French may be willing to observe the terms of the Treaty which give no indefeasible rights.

Temple, July 7, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to the Treaty of Commerce with France, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of the Treaty between France and Germany of the 10th May, 1871, and he was to call our attention to the XIth Article of the Treaty, and to request our opinion upon its effect and the extent to which it might be considered as stipulating for most-favoured-nation treatment unrestricted in point of time.

That the first paragraph of the Article provides that the two Governments "ont pris pour base de leurs relations commerciales le régime du traitement réciproque sur le pied de la nation la plus favorisée." There is no limitation upon this engagement as to time, nor is the Treaty itself limited in duration.

That the third paragraph—"Toutefois, seront exceptées de la règle susdite les faveurs qu'une des Parties Contractantes, par des Traités de Commerce, a accordées ou accordera à des Etats autres que ceux qui suivent: l'Angleterre, la Belgique, les Pays-Bas, la Suisse, l'Autriche, la Russie."

This would seem to mean that the two countries engage to treat each other on the footing of the most favoured nation, with the exception of any advantages accorded by Treaties of Commerce to any country except those specified. That is to say:—

1. That any advantages which have been or shall be accorded to the countries named by Treaties of Commerce or otherwise, shall be extended reciprocally to the Contracting Parties.

2. That any advantages which may be accorded by one of the parties to any third country, by law or by any means other than a Treaty of Commerce, shall be accorded to the other party.

3. That neither party shall be entitled to claim advantages given by a Treaty of Commerce to any nation other than those named, e.g., if France passes a law admitting Spanish wine free of duty, German wine shall also be admitted free of duty; but if France enters into a Treaty of Commerce with Spain, by which Spanish wine is admitted free of duty, then German wine shall not be entitled to be admitted free of duty.

That with regard to navigation the French Government engages, by the fifth paragraph, not to impose any duties on tonnage or flag higher than those which may be imposed on the vessels and cargoes of England, Belgium, Netherlands, Switzerland, Austria, and Russia. All these engagements unrestricted as to time.

And that your Lordship would be glad to be informed, at our earliest convenience, whether we considered the foregoing interpretation of the Article of the Treaty correct, and to be favoured with any further observations in addition to those which he (Lord Tenterden) had indicated which might occur to us upon it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we agree with the interpretation put upon Article XI of the Treaty of the 10th May, 1871, between France and Germany, and have no further observation to make upon that Article.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that the French Government having intimated to Lord Lyons that they desire to negotiate a new Treaty of Commerce to be substituted for the Treaty of the 5th November last, your Lordship had caused a draft to be prepared showing the provisions which Her Majesty's Government would wish to include in the new Treaty; and he (Lord Tenterden) was directed by your Lordship to transmit this draft to us, and to request us to favour you, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion and any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

That it was not intended to propose this draft, at all events at present, to the French Government, but merely to forward it Lord Lyons for his guidance in the negotiation.

Nearly all the Articles were taken from the Treaty of November last, but your Lordship would, nevertheless, be glad if we would advise whether Parliamentary legislation would be required to execute any of them, as, in that case, the consent of Parliament would have to be reserved.

Lord Tenterden kindly inclosed a copy of the Treaty of November last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That referring to the proposed Treaty of the 5th November, 1872, the correspondence and negotiations in relation to that Treaty, and the opinions which were expressed therein, we are of opinion that the draft transmitted to us may properly be forwarded to Lord Lyons for his guidance in the proposed negotiation.

Parliamentary legislation will not in our opinion be required to execute any of the Articles in the draft.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch (No. 659) from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, relative to an application made to him by Mr. Maugham, an English solicitor resident at Paris, who stated that he had been appointed Commissioner in Paris to take evidence on behalf of the defendant in a suit which had been brought against the "Times" newspaper, and who accordingly requested Lord Lyons' assistance to procure copies of certain documents at the Prefecture de Police bearing on the case, and to obtain authority for the custodian of the documents to give evidence under the Commission.

Mr. Hammond also stated that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the course which Lord Lyons should be instructed to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons should, in our opinion, be instructed to inform Mr. Maugham that he cannot take any steps in the matter.

Temple, July 12, 1873.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying memorandum by Mr. Kennedy, inclosing a draft Treaty of Commerce to be substituted for the Treaty signed with the French Government on the 5th November last. That the draft is drawn up on the basis on which Her Majesty's Government were informed by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris that the French Government were prepared at once to negotiate, viz., most-favoured-nation treatment and national treatment of vessels and the settlement of the mineral oil claims. The Treaty to be terminable in 1877, and a Supplementary Convention to be concluded hereafter to contain matters relating to customs expertise and the like.

Lord Enfield further stated that Mr. Kennedy inclosed a draft note to be addressed to the French Government by Her Majesty's Ambassador, prescribing the subjects with which the Mixed Commission to be appointed under the Treaty should deal, and added that as it was of urgent importance that the negotiation should be proceeded with without delay, so as to obtain the ratification of the Assembly before the recess, your Lordship would be glad if we would take the draft Treaty and draft note into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, if possible, before the meeting of the Cabinet this day at half-past 2 o'clock, whether they are right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the draft Treaty and draft note are right and proper; but we wish to point out to your Lordship in Article III of the Treaty, paragraph 1, that the date "14th September," 1871, is for the first and only time introduced. In the Treaty of the 5th November, 1872, as well as in the present draft, the only law referred to on the subject of "mineral oils" is the 8th July, 1871. Should the "14th September" be an oversight, it should be corrected by inserting "8th July." And in the same Article III, last paragraph, after the word "commenced," the words "or which may be commenced" might be introduced with possible advantage.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that upon the receipt of our Report of the 25th ultimo respecting M. de Rotour's Bill on military service in France, as affecting the liability of sons born in France of foreign parents to such service, Lord Lyons was instructed (No. 642 of the 7th July), in conformity with our opinion, that it was not desirable that his Excellency should take any farther steps in the matter than those already taken by him.

That he (Mr. Hammond) inclosed a despatch from Lord Lyons in reply, from which we would see that he is desirous of understanding the exact intentions of Her Majesty's Government in regard to the instruction thus conveyed to him; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to request our consideration of the following observations, as the Bill under discussion, if it becomes law, may have serious consequences to British subjects affected by it.

That under the old common law of England every person born in England was, and remained indefeasibly, a British subject. By the 4th section of the Naturalization Act of 1870, however, it is enacted that "any person who by reason of his having been born within the dominions of Her Majesty is a natural-born subject, but who also, at the time of his birth, became under the law of any foreign State a subject of such State, and is still such subject, may, if of full age and not under any disability, make a declaration of alienage in manner aforesaid, and from and after the making of such declaration of alienage, such person shall cease to be a British subject," &c.

That under the provisions above quoted, therefore, it is within the power of a French subject born in England to divest himself, at his option, of his English nationality, and this being the case, it appeared to your Lordship that it would not be unreasonable to apply to the French Government in order that a similar option might be accorded to British subjects born in France.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the point into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the French Government might not properly be urged to accord the privilege in question to British subjects as a measure of just reciprocity.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to Lord Lyons being instructed to ask that the privilege in question should be formally accorded to British subjects as a measure of just reciprocity.

But we are of opinion that Lord Lyons should, at the same time, be instructed to make the application to the Duc de Broglie unofficially.

Mr. Hammond also said that he was to transmit to us a letter which your Lordship had received from the solicitor to the "Times," stating that he had in consequence made the application to the French authorities, who had expressed their willingness to produce the documents if a request to that effect be made by Her Majesty's Ambassador, but that without such request it is contrary to their practice to do so; and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether, under the circumstances, Lord Lyons might be authorized to comply with the request made by the representative of the defendants in the action.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons may, in our opinion, be properly instructed to comply with the request made by the representative of the defendant in this action. Lord Lyons, however, in making the request to the French authorities for the production of the documents and attendance of the witness, should state that he does so on being expressly informed that the French authorities, in accordance with their practice, accede to similar requests when made by the Ambassador of a foreign Power.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th August instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 25th June last and 15th ultimo, relative to M. de Rotour's Bill on military service in France, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which had been received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris (No. 759) in reply to the instructions which were forwarded to him on the second of our Reports above mentioned, and that we would perceive that Lord Lyons had obtained from M. Treitt, the legal adviser of the Embassy, an opinion as to the exact extent to which the children born in France of British subjects would be affected by the Bill if it became law; and that it would appear that the sole result would be that such children, in the first generation, would have to make a declaration of their wish to be considered as foreigners within one year after attaining their majority, in order to be exempt from liability to military service, that step being at present only requisite for children of the second generation, whose parents, though of British extraction, have themselves also been born in France. M. Treitt further expresses considerable doubt whether the Bill will be adopted, and upon his recommendation, and in the absence of complaints from British subjects of the law as it stands, Lord Lyons proposed to defer, for the present, any representations to the French Government.

Mr. Hammond further stated that he was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and would inform your Lordship whether we concur in the course suggested.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence respecting the issuing of two passports from the Consulate at Nantes to two British subjects named Ashton and Collins.

The passports appeared to be obtained in order to enable a Carlist General to pass with safety into Spanish territory; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether any and what steps should be taken for the punishment of the British subjects in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That whether Consul Clipperton can take any proceedings against Messrs. Collins and Ashton in France depends upon whether they have been guilty of any offence by the French law, as to which question, as far as we are cognizant of French law, the answer must be, we believe, in the negative. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence which had taken place since the receipt of our Report of the 27th August last respecting the issuing of two passports from the British Consulate at Nantes to two British subjects, and which appear to have been obtained for Carlist purposes.

That the correspondence included, as we would see, a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, containing a legal opinion upon the question whether the offence committed is one punishable under French law; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued under the circumstances of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government may properly offer to give the French Government such assistance in the way of evidence, either from the British Consul or his archives, as may enable the French Government to try the offenders.

We have, &c.

No. 89.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received October 23.)

Temple, October 22, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us four letters which had been received from the Admiralty and Colonial Office, relative to a voyage which had recently been made by Captain Miller, of Her Majesty's ship "Sirius," round the Newfoundland fisheries, to his proceedings during the voyage, and to the correspondence with the French naval authorities which had resulted therefrom.

That the circumstances to which, at that moment, most importance was attached, were those connected with the occupation by a Frenchman of a salmon fishery on the Ponds River, on the north-west coast of Newfoundland, within the limits where the French enjoyed Treaty rights to the fisheries.

That the facts connected with the question, as stated in the various papers forwarded therewith for our information, would be found to be as follows :—

That by the Royal Instructions to Governors of Newfoundland in 1789 and 1792, permission was given to the French at that time to fish in rivers to the extent of half a mile above their mouths, but no further. That in the Confidential Instructions to the Commissioners appointed on behalf of Her Majesty's Government in 1859, Sir E. Lytton, then Colonial Secretary, stated that "this permission was in excess of the privileges guaranteed to the French by the Treaties, and Her Majesty's Government are not aware whether it was renewed with peace in 1815."

That the Reports made in 1821 by a French Commission charged with an examination of the French fisheries spoke in several places of the advantages offered by the salmon fisheries in terms implying that, up to that time, they had been pursued only by British settlers.

That an extract from Hautefeuille's "Codes des Grandes Pêches," spoke of the manner in which those salmon fisheries were distributed in 1832, 1837, and 1842, and also of the mode in which they were to be conducted according to the French Regulations of 1842, viz., by "barrages" (raells or weirs) made across the rivers or streams. That the same provision was repeated in the French Decree of 1852 (Article 42).

That complaints having been made in 1842 by British settlers at Cod Roy that the French had interfered with them while fishing for salmon, the question whether the French had the right to fish for all kinds of fish or for codfish only was referred to the then Queen's Advocate, who reported on the 7th July, 1843, "that with respect to the description of fish which the subjects of France were entitled to take, he did not find, either in the Treaties or Declaration referred to, any limitation whatever."

That the actual salmon fishery now in question would seem to have been in the possession of an English subject named Gauge or George from the year 1771 or thereabouts, and to have been taken from him by the French in 1848 (see Captain Lock's Report, 2nd October, 1848, and inclosures in Colonial Office letter of the 10th April, 1852, where it was also stated that the French exacted from the British settlers half the produce of all the river fisheries from Cape Ray to Cape Norman).

That in reply to an inquiry made by the Admiral on the station in 1853, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty were informed in a letter from that Office, dated the 22nd August, 1853, that "it was clearly Lord Clarendon's opinion that the French had no rights under Treaty to fish in any of the rivers or mouths of rivers in Newfoundland, and that their right was restricted to the sea fisheries alone, but without reference to any particular species of fish."

That this opinion was subsequently confirmed by the Law Officers of the Crown in their Report of the 24th March, 1859, which stated: "With reference to all fisheries in rivers, and especially to salmon fisheries therein, we entirely concur with the view taken by the Earl of Clarendon that they are not within the scope of the Treaties and Declarations, and that the French have no right thereto, their fishery rights being limited to fishing in the sea for all kinds of fish. They have certainly no right to interrupt or molest any British subjects fishing for salmon in rivers, or to fish either for salmon or any other fish whatever in any river in Newfoundland."

That no steps, however, appear to have been taken to enforce the view taken by Lord Clarendon. The Governor of Newfoundland, in a despatch dated the 9th June, 1856, stated that "the French have practically excluded the English from the salmon fisheries."

That in the French "Tableau de Répartition" of fisheries drawn for in 1852, there were enumerated eight salmon fisheries on the west and six on the east coast. Of those, however, only one would appear to have been fished by the French at the time of Mr. Perley's tour round the fisheries in 1857, that one being the River of Ponds now in question; and only two at the time of the Mixed Commission in 1859, one of those, again, being the River of Ponds fishery. That both Mr. Perley and the Commissioners gave, in their Reports, a minute description of the manner of conducting the fishery by raells or weirs placed entirely across the river, in exactly the manner now described by Captain Miller.

That in 1863 the question of the salmon fisheries in rivers was again raised by Sir A. Bannerman, then Governor of Newfoundland, in consequence of a report received from Captain Hamilton, of Her Majesty's ship "Vesuvius," who stated that he had been informed by the French naval officer that they claimed the right of salmon fishery in rivers, and that otherwise "they would be unable to fish the River of Ponds in that bay, the best river on the west coast, as from the heavy sea that sets into that bay, and the strong currents at the mouth of the river, they were obliged to set their nets some distance up the fresh water."

That on that occasion Lord Russell, while concurring in the view taken by the Duke of Newcastle that the French rights of fishery were limited to the sea, was of opinion that if British fishermen generally remained undisturbed by the French, it was unnecessary that the question should be mooted.

That a complaint made by a British subject in 1868 that he had been interrupted by the master of a French merchant-vessel while fishing in the River Castor, and half of his fish taken from him, fell to the ground for want of evidence, though the French naval officer seemed disposed to admit that such interference was unjustifiable.

That since that year the question of the right of the French to the salmon fisheries in rivers had, on several occasions, been raised by the British naval officers of the station, but without any definite result.

That in 1859 the French Captain at Basset was reported to have agreed with Captain Pasley, of Her Majesty's ship "Niobe," that the French had no right to the fresh-water fishing, but in the case of the Rivers of Ponds and Castors, he seemed to have imagined the French originally fished those rivers by mutual agreement with the English.

That the replies given in 1872 by the Governor of Newfoundland to certain questions put by Captain Brown, of Her Majesty's ship "Danae," which were submitted to the Law Officers for their approval, stated that the question of the right of the French to the salmon fishing in rivers, and of the distance up the rivers to which such right extends, was in dispute.

That, under those circumstances, the questions which suggested themselves, and on which your Lordship would be glad to have our opinion, were the following:—

1. Whether and to what extent the salmon fishery on the Ponds River, having regard to the place where it is carried on and the means employed, was in excess of the rights of fishery which the French could properly claim under the several engagements entered into by this country.

2. Considering the length of time for which it has been carried on undisturbed, and to all appearance in the same manner as at present, how far Her Majesty's Government would now be justified in making it the subject of a special remonstrance to the French Government, or whether it must not more properly be classed among the questions in dispute between the two Governments, to be discussed by the Mixed Commission to which it was intended that the general question should shortly be referred.

3. What notice could properly be taken of the act of Captain de Boissondey in informing the French occupant of the fishery that he not obey the notice to quit served on him by Captain Miller's orders.

That Mr. Hammond was further to state that your Lordship would be glad to have our opinion generally on Captain Miller's proceedings and correspondence, and to learn whether we concurred in the opinion expressed by the Colonial Law Officer on the several questions involved.

That, in addition to the papers specially connected with the points at issue, copies were inclosed of printed memoranda drawn up at that Office, giving a history of the general question from its origin to the present date, with so much of the recent correspondence as might be useful to us for purposes of reference.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter to us of that day's date relative to the Newfoundland Fisheries question, he was directed by your Lordship to point out to us that, in the event of the appointment of magistrates for that part of the island on the coast of which the French had fishery rights, a very serious conflict of jurisdiction would be likely to occur from the contradictory provisions of the Colonial Acts and of the French Fishery Regulations with regard to salmon fisheries.

That Mr. Hammond inclosed copies of the Acts in question, and we would perceive that section 2 of the Act 23 Vict., cap. 8, positively forbade the construction of weirs or similar contrivances across any rivers for the purpose of salmon fishing, and that the Act contained no provision such as inserted in the later measure of 1862 (25 Vict., cap. 2), reserving "the rights and privileges granted by Treaty to the subjects or citizens of any State or Power in amity with Her Majesty."

That it might be contended that the former Act, although no special reservation clause was inserted in it, must be taken to have been made subject to any rights which were secured to the French by Treaty; but it might be apprehended that the British magistrates would consider themselves bound to enforce the Colonial Law against French fishermen, while the French naval officers would undoubtedly maintain that such fishermen were entitled to follow the course prescribed by Article 42 of the French Regulations, to the effect that the salmon fishery might be conducted by means of weirs or nets in the streams or rivers.

That Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take that matter into our consideration, and would favour your Lordship with our opinion: (1) whether the Colonial Act, 23 Vict., cap. 8, should be construed as if there had been a special reservation of Treaty rights in it; and (2) as to the best mode of avoiding the difficulty above indicated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That we concur in the opinion given by the Law Officers on the 24th March, 1859, "that the fisheries in rivers are not within the scope of the Treaties or Declarations made with or to the French Government by the Government of Great Britain, and that the French have no right to the fishery in rivers, their rights being limited to fishing in the sea, and on the coast, for all kinds of fish. And that the French have certainly no right to interrupt or molest any British subjects fishing for salmon, or any other fish whatever in any river in Newfoundland."

At the same time we are of opinion that British fishermen have not the right to interfere with the French fishermen by running their salmon nets out from the shore into the sea, so catching the fish as they pass along the shore—a practice which, from the papers transmitted to us, seems to prevail, and which interferes with the French sea fishery.

As we understand the facts, the concession said to have been contemplated, by which the French were to be allowed to fish a certain distance up the rivers, was never actually made. But if it had been or were made, we should be of opinion that the concession was but a licence to the French to fish as the British fishermen do, and would not warrant the French in claiming an exclusive fishery in those river waters, or the right to use their own means for catching fish in the rivers.

Apart from this concession—and it seems to us that since the French claims are made to rest on Treaty rights they cannot rely upon the concession—the French pretensions, if good to any extent at all, go to the exclusive right of salmon fishing, however far the rivers may run into the heart of the country.

The words of the Treaties, and of the engagements made by this country, seem to us to give the French a right of uninterrupted fishery of all kinds of fish along the sea coast, but do not give them any right of fishing in any of the rivers.

In answer, therefore, to the first question, we are of opinion that the salmon fishery on the Ponds River, having regard to the place where it is carried on, is in excess of the rights of fishery which the French can properly claim under the several engagements entered into by this country.

And with respect to the means employed by the French, we are of opinion that the French, having no right to fish at all, must, if they obtain any leave or licence to fish, employ only those means which are allowed by the laws of Newfoundland.

2. The second question is rather a matter of policy than of legal rights; but since your Lordship has called our attention to and desired our opinion upon the subject, we submit for your Lordship's consideration the following reasons why a special remonstrance should at once be made by Her Majesty's Government to the French Government:—

(a.) Her Majesty's Government should not, we humbly conceive, suffer without immediate remonstrance the rights of Her Majesty's subjects and a part of Her Majesty's dominions to be violently disturbed, and forcibly occupied by the subjects of a foreign Power.

(b.) If, however, the disturbance of the rights and the occupation of the soil has been from any motive submitted to for some time, a special remonstrance is the more urgently required that the mischief may be put an end to, and at least not extended further.

(c.) Supposing no remonstrance to be made, other rivers may be occupied by the same means and in the same manner as the Ponds River. The French will thus have their title, such as it is, strengthened both by lapse of time and extended possessions.

(d.) The French Government has a right to know in the clearest manner, before any question is raised at the Mixed Commission, that Her Majesty's Government denies the assumed rights of the French in the rivers of Newfoundland, and a special remonstrance seems to us the most direct and proper manner of informing the French Government to that effect.

(e.) If a remonstrance is not made, the French Government may not unfairly urge before the Mixed Commission the acquiescence of the British Government.

(f.) The conduct of Captain de Boissondey is a further reason why the remonstrance should not be delayed.

3. That we are of opinion that although some notice may properly be taken of Captain de Boissondey's conduct, that notice should be very moderate and guarded, and possibly confined to an expression that Her Majesty's Government does not press that subject further owing to the instructions which have been sent to the French naval officers. The difficulty which we have in answering the question with precision and definitely is that it goes to the root of the whole matter. If the French had no right, then Captain Miller acted quite properly, and the conduct of the French officer was altogether wrong. But if the French had the right contended for, then Captain Miller gave a notice which Captain de Boissondey was justified in telling the French occupant to disregard. We think, therefore, that such a notice as we have suggested above will be sufficient.

In answering these questions we have not lost sight of a point raised by Admiral Seymour in his letter of June 1853, namely, the inconvenience and anomaly of allowing French officers to exercise a jurisdiction over British subjects within Her Majesty's dominions at sea or on land. But this anomaly is the necessary consequence of the Treaties, and your Lordship may think it a matter fit for the consideration of the Mixed Commission.

4. We think Captain Miller's proceedings and correspondence show considerable ability and discretion. And we agree generally in the opinions expressed by the Colonial Law Officer on the several questions involved. In one respect, however, we differ from him, since we are of opinion that the French have no right of fishing in the rivers whether above or below high-water mark.

Referring to Mr. Hammond's second letter of the 6th October, the difficulty suggested will not arise if we are right in our opinion that the French have no fishery rights in the rivers. The 25 Vict., cap. 2, being limited to fisheries on the coast, properly has the section 10 relating to Treaty rights, whilst 23 Vict., cap. 8 regulates the river fisheries, as to which there are no Treaty rights.

But if we are mistaken in our opinion upon the French Treaty rights, and these extend to the rivers in Newfoundland, the French may, notwithstanding the 23 Vict., cap. 8, exercise their rights in any manner which they may deem fit, and the Colonial Act may properly be repeated.

No. 90.

Temple, October 25, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship was desirous of obtaining our advice on the following points in connection with commercial negotiations and questions between this country and France:—

1. As to applications made to Her Majesty's Government on the subject of Expertise and Customs Regulations in France, and the opinions of Sir L. Mallet and the Board of Customs, as were set forth in the papers marked in the margin.

2. As to whether the French Government would be justified, under the Treaties of 1860 and 1873, in the event of an excise duty on mineral oils of French production being imposed in France, with an equivalent compensatory duty on similar oils of foreign origin, in assessing such excise and compensatory duties according to the illuminating power of the oil.

That a representation on that subject from Young's Paraffin Light and Mineral Oil Company was therewith inclosed.

And (3) as to whether, in the proceedings for the settlement of mixed oil claims, it would be proper or allowable when the Mixed Commission at Paris, appointed under Article IV of the Treaty of 1873, resumed its sittings, that a notice limiting the time within which such claims should be entertained should be issued by the Commission, and published in the official "Gazettes" in this country and in France. That a draft of a notice to that effect was therewith submitted, and that Lord Tenterden was to request that, if we approved of any such notice being issued, we would report whether the inclosed draft was right and proper in its terms, and if not, that we would amend it as we might deem expedient.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those matters into consideration, and that, if possible, we would be so good as to favour your Lordship with our Report thereupon by the end of this week.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, with reference to his letter of the 20th instant, the letters marked in the margin from the Bradford Chamber of Commerce, containing representations on the subject of expertise in France; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that those representations might be taken into consideration, together with those contained in the papers inclosed in the letter of the 20th instant above referred to.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for consideration together with the papers inclosed in his letters of the 20th and 21st instant, on the subject of expertise in France, the accompanying letter, and its inclosure, from Messrs. Hall, Udall, and Dale.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That we have carefully considered the several documents referred to in the three letters which we have had the honour of receiving from Lord Tenterden on the subject of Expertise and Customs Regulations in France.

So long as the principle of ad valorem duties is maintained, and we are of opinion that this principle is in its general application the most practical and the best, some form of expertise seems requisite.

Assuming that the importer and the Customs in the first instance each appoints a valuer, the difficulty arises in the choice of an umpire.

We believe that some branch of the Government in France, as a matter of fact, always supplies this umpire, and we see that great difficulties may be found in endeavouring to bring the French Government to alter its practice in this respect.

The object should be the obtaining in each case, whether of value or classification, an umpire well acquainted with the nature and history and manufacture of the imported article, and we suggest to your Lordship that, with this view, Her Majesty's Government may properly bring to the consideration of the French Government the necessity of appointing from the Board in Paris as umpire, the person, a member of that Board, who may best be qualified by his knowledge, and to place upon any individual article its real denomination, be it of value or class.

We think that, having regard to the Law of 1822, any attempt beyond this to interfere with the French practice of expertise would fail.

In reference to the French Customs Regulations, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may properly press upon the French Government that no delay should take place beyond what is absolutely necessary in obtaining the decision of the valuers or umpire upon the questions raised.

The delay is a cost, or at the least a loss of profit to the importer, can be of no benefit to the French Customs, and may in some cases open a door to partiality and injustice.

We entirely agree with Sir L. Mallet that "it cannot be demanded that the French Custom-house should hold itself bound to accept the invoice value in exceptional cases" (we should say in any cases), "and that the fair rule to observe is to take the correct value of goods at the place of production at the time of importation, with the addition of costs of transport, assurance, and commission."*

We are of opinion that the French Government would not be justified in assessing a compensation duty according to the illuminating power of the oil. Two kinds of oil only are named, "brutes ou raffinées" (crude or refined), upon which, without reference to their illuminating power, a duty of 5 fr. or 8 fr. per 100 kilog. is imposed, and there the duty must stop.

3. The draft notice is, in our opinion, right and proper in its terms.

No. 91.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received October 30.)

Temple, October 29, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 27th October instant, stating that, with reference to that part of our Report of the 25th instant which related to the question of a duty in France assessed according to the illuminating power of mineral oils, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a paper which shows, probably correctly, the course which the French Government proposes to pursue in the matter; and with reference to our observation that the duty must stop at the (present) rate of 5 fr. or 8 fr. the 100 kilog., he was to call our attention to the first paragraph of Article IV of the Treaty of the 23rd July last, therewith inclosed, which provides that British mineral oils are to pay the duty of 5 fr. or 8 fr. above stated, established by the law of the 16th September, 1871, or that which may be hereafter levied on the like oils manufactured in France.

That a Report of the debate in the National Assembly, relative to the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, was also inclosed, and that there did not, however, appear to be in it any definite statement on that subject on the part of the French Government.

Lord Enfield was pleased further to say that the points to which he was more especially to call our attention in this matter are (1) the grounds on which Her Majesty's Government could object to the new excise and compensatory duty, if there are any tenable grounds; and (2) the extent to which Her Majesty's Government would be justified in urging those objections.

That as it was necessary that the instructions to Lord Lyons on this subject should be sent as soon as possible, Lord Enfield added that he was therefore to request that we would favour your Lordship with our Report thereupon at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That supposing the French Government were to levy an excise on oils manufactured in France higher than the duty of 5 fr. or 8 fr. per 100 kilog., Her Majesty's Government could not, we think, object to such new excise and the compensatory duty on the like oils imported from England, and therefore would not be justified in urging any objection.

But unless such new excise be levied in France, we are of opinion that the duties of 5 fr. and 8 fr. the 100 kilog. should remain, and cannot be affected by the greater lighting qualities contained in one oil as compared with another oil, and to this point our previous Report was more particularly directed.

No. 92.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 5.)

Temple, November 5, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that on the 22nd instant we favoured your Lordship with our Report on various points submitted to us in Mr. Hammond's letters of the 6th instant, respecting the Newfoundland fisheries and the questions in dispute between this country and France.

That after recapitulation of the letters above referred to, our Report states at the fifth paragraph, "The words of the Treaties, and of the engagements made by this country, seem to us to give the French a right of uninterrupted fishery of all kinds of fish along the sea coast, but do not give them any right of fishing in any of the rivers."

That we were aware, from the correspondence so recently before us, that the French Government claim not only the uninterrupted, but the exclusive right of fishing on the so-called "French shore" of Newfoundland, which claim is based to a great extent upon the wording of the British Declaration, signed on the same day as the Definitive Treaty between Great Britain and France, the 3rd September, 1873, and which states: "His Britannic Majesty will take the most positive measures for preventing his subjects from interrupting in any manner by their competition the fishery of the French during the temporary exercise of it which is granted to them upon the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland," &c.

That we were also aware that the question of the right of French subjects to exclusive fishery upon the so-called "French shore," irrespective of the question whether concurrent fishery might not be carried on as long as it did not interrupt the operations of the French fishermen, has been more than once before the Law Advisers of the Crown.

That on the 30th May, 1835, in answer to a reference of a Board of Trade letter of the 12th July, 1834, on this question, the Law Officers reported that, "having taken into consideration the above-mentioned letter from the Board of Trade, together with the Treaties to which it refers, we are of opinion that the subjects of France 'have the exclusive right of fishery on the part of the coast of Newfoundland specified in the Vth Article of the Definitive Treaty signed at Versailles on the 3rd September, 1783.'"

That we should find in the accompanying volume the Report in extenso, as well as the Board of Trade letter to which it refers, which papers had not then been before us, although the Report was alluded to at p. 8 of the printed memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office, which was again inclosed; that a later Report of the Law Officers, however (also alluded to in the same place, and printed in full at p. 60), as we should see, somewhat modified the previous one.

That your Lordship is desirous of ascertaining the precise meaning which you may attach to the opinion contained in our Report above referred to, that the words of the Treaties and of the engagements made by this country seem to give the French "a right of uninterrupted fishery" of all kinds of fish along the sea coast, &c.; whether, in fact, we consider that the French and English fishermen have a concurrent right of fishing on the coast in question as long as the English fishermen do not in any way interfere with or interrupt the French fishing operations, or whether we are of opinion that the French fishermen can properly claim the right of exclusive fishing, to the exclusion of the British and without regard to the above conditions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the French have not the right of exclusive fishing in the full sense of those words, which would make every act of fishing on the part of the British illegal, as contrary to the Treaty and Declaration.

But the French have the right of exclusive fishery in the sense that their fishing operations are not to be interfered with or interrupted by the English. For instance, supposing the French for any reason were to abandon the coast, or any part of the coast, for a time, so that there were no French boats in the waters, we apprehend the British would have a right in such a case to fish the unused parts. And we think this is the meaning of the words "competition" or "concurrence" in the Treaty of 1783, showing that the same waters are not to be fished at one and the same time by French and British, but that the latter are in all cases to give up fishing in waters which the French are in fact occupying.

Temple, November 5, 1873.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 1st November instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 25th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the drafts of letters which your Lordship proposed to cause to be addressed to the Bradford Chamber of Commerce, and to Mr. K. B. Murray, of Paris, in reply to their letters on the subject of expertise and other customs matters which had been submitted to our consideration, and which were also therewith inclosed for convenience of reference.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to say that he was to request that we would take these drafts into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether they are right and proper to be sent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the draft letters to the Bradford Chamber of Commerce and to Mr. K. B. Murray, of Paris, are, in our opinion, right and proper to be sent, but we take the liberty of suggesting the omission in each draft of the words "as well as to the working generally of the system of expertise."

This passage, if retained, may open a very wide question, and is not, as it seems to us, consistent altogether with the statement which immediately follows to the effect that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in pressing the French Government to alter their own legislation.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 8.)

Temple, November 7, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that Her Majesty's Government and that of France having agreed by the IIIrd Article of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation of the 23rd July last that a Convention, supplementary to that Treaty, should be concluded and ratified before the 31st January next, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a Convention which your Lordship had caused to be prepared with the view to carry out this arrangement, and the draft of an instruction to Lord Lyons in regard to this draft Convention.

That we should observe remarks made by Lord Lyons on both these documents; and that he was to request that we would take them into consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, such observations as we might have to offer upon them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the paragraphs marked A and B in Article III, which to some extent are amplifications of Article II of the Treaty, may be useful, and cannot lead, so far as we can see, to any bad result. We therefore think they should remain, but we entirely agree that the beginning suggested by Lord Lyons is desirable.

Article IV seems to us unnecessary.

Article V. The last paragraph in this Article should, if possible, find a place in the Convention. This Article, however, depends upon considerations of policy, and if any difficulty is apprehended the Articles in the Treaties of 1860 may suffice.

Article VI goes, in our opinion, beyond paragraph 3 of Article I, and may be retained.

Article VII. We concur entirely with the remark of Lord Lyons.

Article VIII. We are not aware of the reasons which influenced the Commissioners of Customs in 1872, but in the absence of strong reasons to the contrary we are of opinion that all the Articles should be reciprocal.

Article XIV. We beg leave to suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that the words "in the same manner as disputes as to the value of goods" be added at the end of this Article.

Article XV. Appears to us unnecessary, since it is to a like effect with Article XVI.

In reference to the note of Lord Lyons in paragraph 4 on p. 3 of the draft despatch, the substitution of the paragraph proposed by him may, in our opinion, properly be adopted.

We presume that Lord Lyons would, without specific instructions, furnish your Lordship with suggestions which the course of the negotiation might give rise to, and on any Articles which were likely to lead to discussion or delay.

The words "in regard to invoices and in the" should, in our opinion, be added at the beginning of line 6, paragraph 2, p. 3 of the draft despatch, and the word "in" be omitted in the same place, if the addition meets with your Lordship's approval.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying memorandum and correspondence relative to the Fishery Convention with France of 1867 (copy inclosed), and to request our attention to the question therein controverted in letters from the French Embassy in London and the Board of Trade, as to whether the legal proceedings to be taken under, and the penalties imposed by, the Act 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 45 (inclosed), were or were not in conformity with the Convention. There was likewise the farther question whether the alterations which the Board of Trade had proposed to make in that Act should be made by a fresh Act or by Order in Council.

That he (Lord Tenterden) was therefore to request us to take the several matters into consideration at our early convenience, and that in reporting upon them we would state farther our views as to the course which it would be right to take with respect to the representations made by the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the penalties imposed by the Act 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 43, are in conformity with the Convention.

We doubt whether Her Majesty, by Order in Council, could make the alterations proposed by the Board of Trade, the power in the 7th section of the Act referred to being to impose penalties for the breach of such regulations as Her Majesty may make, and not a power to alter the penalties imposed in breach of the regulations in the Act.

So far as the Board of Trade has approved of any alteration in the penalties in accordance with the wishes of the French Government, we are of opinion that the wishes of the French Government may be complied with, and a new Act applied for.

But we see great difficulty in giving up the power of enforcing the penalty by seizure and sale of the ship.

And we submit to your Lordship that before any changes are agreed to on the part of Her Majesty's Government, the French Government should engage to give full effect to Article XXXI of the Convention, and that such engagement on the part of the French Government should be a condition precedent to negotiation on any other point arising out of or in reference to the Convention or the Act 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 43.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copy of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation concluded between this country and France on the 23rd July last, to request our early opinion as to the course which should properly be taken by the Commission appointed under the IVth Article of the Treaty in regard to mineral oil claims preferred on any of the following grounds, namely :—

1. Warehousing or storage.
2. Deterioration of stock, whether by detention, leakage, or from other causes.
3. Expenses of agents in France of the British companies.
4. Disputes or actions between agents or other persons in their employment and the companies.
5. Losses or other claims in respect of oils imported to and then re-exported from France without payment of duty.
6. Interest on moneys awarded by the Commission, whether in repayment of duties, law expenses, &c.

That he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would consider the four first-mentioned claims, whether preferred as separate and independent claims or in connection with claims for repayment of duty or for indemnification for actions for breaches of contracts.

And that he was also to request our advice as to how claims in regard to contracts which have not as yet formed the subject of any legal action should be dealt with by the Commission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Article IV provides for two cases :—

1. Reimbursement of duties levied in excess.
2. Indemnification for breaches of contract.

In our opinion, none of the four first-mentioned claims, whether preferred as separate or as independent claims, come within the Article.

Claim No. 5 is also, in our opinion, without the Article.

Claim No. 6 is also, we think, without the Article, and interest cannot be claimed as part of indemnification for actions for breaches of contract or in addition to a reimbursement of duties levied in excess.

The indemnification, in our opinion, extends to all cases in which actions may be brought for the breaches of contract specified, and the Commission should endeavour so to provide against claims in regard to contracts which have not yet formed the subject of any legal action, that the defendants may avail themselves of the indemnification in the Treaty.

Temple, November 17, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th instant, he was directed to request our opinion whether claims on the grounds of (1) warehousing or storage; (2) deterioration of stock by detention, leakage, or other causes; and (3) expenses of agents in France of the British Companies or claimants; are to any and to what extent admissible in connection with claims for reimbursement of duties levied in excess, or for indemnification for actions for breaches of contract, under the provisions of Article IV of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873.

That in order to place the matter more clearly before us, though our opinion was requested on the general question, two instances might be cited: (1) where oils have been imported, and claims are preferred for storage and deterioration of stock, pending discussions with the French Customs, the duty in excess having been paid finally, in some cases with, and in others without, any formal protest against that excessive rate of duty; (2) expenses of agents of Companies or claimants in France, who are represented to have been, either entirely or chiefly, engaged in business connected with discussions relative to excessive rates of duty, or in defending the interests of the parties in this country in regard to actions for breaches of contract.

Mr. Lister also stated that he was to add that your Lordship would be glad to receive our Report on these points at our early convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the claims on the grounds (1) warehousing or storage; (2) deterioration of stock by detention, leakage, or other causes; (3) expenses of agents of British claimants in France—are not, in our opinion, admissible to any extent under the provisions of Article IV of the Treaty of July 1873, those provisions being limited to reimbursement of duties levied in excess, and to indemnification for actions for breaches of contract.

The two instances cited by Mr. Lister fall within the general principle of construction which we have above stated, and claims preferred on the grounds suggested in those instances would not be admissible.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the copy of the draft of the Supplementary Convention to be concluded with France, as it had been revised on consideration of our Report of the 7th instant.

That the draft previously referred to was also inclosed.

That we would perceive that Article IV had been omitted, and that, inasmuch as inconvenience might result from rendering the Articles respecting expertise and Customs Regulations reciprocal, the intention of recasting the Articles on those matters in the Treaty and Conventions of 1860 had been given up, and the new provisions which it was sought to introduce had been formed into one Article, the VIIth of the revised draft.

That Mr. Lister was now to request that we would take that revised draft into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest opportunity, with our opinion in regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in stating our opinion upon the questions put to us in Mr. Lister's letter, we can only submit to your Lordship's suggestions, which, being founded on information and knowledge necessarily imperfect, may be either wrong or impracticable or both.

The important Article in the revised Convention appears to be the VIIth, and on that Article we submit for your Lordship's consideration the following remarks :—

The first paragraph provides for security for the payment of "fines," but the revised Convention does not, as the former Convention did (Article XIII), contain any provision on the subject of these "fines," nor upon the costs of the valuation.

It seems to us desirable that an Article similar to Article XIII of the former Convention should be added to the revised Convention, and might conveniently follow directly after Article VII.

We also think that an Article similar to Article XVIII of the former Convention might frequently be of practical use, and might, therefore, with advantage be added to the revised Convention.

These are the only points in the revised Convention upon which we have to make any observations to your Lordship in answer to Mr. Lister's letter.

My Lord,

WE are favoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 15th September, relative to the question of the legal power of a person acting for a British Vice-Consul in possession of a marriage warrant to solemnize marriages under the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap 68, he was directed by your Lordship to point out to us that the Annex to the General Consular Instructions referred to by Her Majesty's Consul at Havre in his despatch which was before us when our Report was written, is not an Act of Parliament relating to the subject, but a Circular to Her Majesty's Consuls abroad from the Foreign Office.

Lord Enfield further stated that he was therefore to return to us Mr. Bernal's despatch, and at the same time to transmit to us a copy of the Consular Marriage Act, and to request us again to consider the subject, with more especial reference to the 19th clause of the Act, and report to your Lordship whether the wording of that clause causes us to change our previous opinion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That when this matter was before the Law Officers on the 15th September last the Act of Parliament, as well as the Circular to Her Majesty's Consuls abroad, was considered by them.

Having now considered the Act of Parliament, and particularly the 19th section, we are of opinion that a person acting for a Vice-Consul is not a person who can legally solemnize marriages under the Consular Marriage Act, though the Vice-Consul in whose place he is acting may hold a warrant authorizing such Vice-Consul to solemnize marriages.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Kennedy, reporting the proceedings of the Commission at Paris with regard to the consideration of the claims of the importers of mineral oils into France.

That Mr. Lister also inclosed a letter on that subject from Young's Paraffin and Mineral Oils Company; and that he had to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Kennedy with regard to that matter.

That a copy of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, was also annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the questions raised in the letter from Young's Paraffin and Mineral Oil Company have been specifically answered by the late Law Officers and Dr. Deane, and Mr. Kennedy has, we believe, been fully instructed on those points.

In reference to Mr. Kennedy's despatch, we are of opinion that the French Government have no claim for duties, whether payable as excise or other duties, over 5 per cent., and the 5 fr. or 8 fr. tax per 100 kilog.

The Commission may, in our opinion, examine, and if necessary correct, in accordance with Article IV of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, the Judgment given by the Tribunals.

We consider that claims which are not preferred in due time, or not supported by proper evidence, should not be insisted upon.

We see no objection to the money awarded being paid in to the Minister of Finance, and paid out by that Department to the claimants entitled to receive the amount.

Mr. Kennedy may, in our opinion, be instructed accordingly on the points to which we have referred, and he does not, as we think, need instructions on the other matters mentioned in his despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 29th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further despatches from Mr. Kennedy (Nos. 133, 134, 135, and 136) relative to the consideration by the Paris Commission of the claims of exporters of mineral oils; and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, together with the papers on this subject already before us, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Kennedy in regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the French principle, it appears from M. Treitt's opinion, differs from the English principle as to counsel's fees, and we are of opinion that if the amount were considerable Her Majesty's Government might properly insist upon these fees being included under the indemnity provided for by the IVth Article of the Treaty of July 1873. But since the amount is inconsiderable, and it is desirable for the interests of the British manufacturers that the whole subject should be settled with the least delay, Mr. Kennedy may be instructed to waive this point.

The duties of 5 per cent. and 8 per cent. respectively may be, in our opinion, properly deducted from the "dommages-intérêts" awarded, but not any higher duties.

The suggested compromise is at an end, and we think rightly so.

We are still of opinion that the 8th July, 1871, must be taken as the date from which the bona fides is to be reckoned. Any other date would lead to much complication in different cases, arising from the means of knowledge professed by different persons, the uncertainty previous to the passing of the law, and other circumstances, and that contracts of the 6th, 7th, and 8th July should consequently be admitted.

On most if not on all the points in dispute we think Mr. Kennedy may properly claim a reference to the Umpire as the means provided by the Treaty itself for a decision.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received January 2, 1874.)

Temple, December 31, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a memorandum by Mr. Kennedy relative to certain statements which had been made before the Mixed Commission by members of the Sheffield and Derby Chambers of Commerce with regard to the questions of fines, expertise, and value; and that Mr. Lister was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, with especial reference to the bearing of the IVth Article of the Treaty of the 23rd January, 1860, therewith inclosed, upon the argument that the value of goods supplied under contracts was to be governed by the manufacturer's price, and not the current market price at the time of importation, and that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Kennedy upon that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship should instruct Mr. Kennedy that the true construction to be put upon Article IV of the Treaty of the 23rd January, 1860, is that "the value" means the price which the article cost the importer at the time he purchased it from the manufacturer or wholesale merchant. There is little in the Article itself which throws any light upon the meaning to be attached to the word "value" as there used. But Articles IV and V in the Treaty of the 12th October, 1860, tend to declare the meaning of the word.

Under Article IV of the latter Treaty an invoice must be produced showing what the goods imported have cost the importer; and by Article V, if goods have been warehoused, the duty shall be levied according to the value of the goods at the time of importation.

This express regulation seems to exclude the price being estimated at the time of importation in any other case than where goods have been warehoused.

We see no hardship to the interests of the French Government if this view be carried out.

It certainly is necessary to the interests of the English importer that the value of English goods should not be frequently left to the judgment of experts, which will be the case if the value be not regulated by the cost.

It is true that if the price be taken at the time of manufacture or sale, and an interval elapses before importation, the value may rise, but it may equally fall, in which case the importer will pay a higher ad valorem duty than the price of the goods would justify. In most cases goods will be warehoused during the interval, if a long one, between the purchase and importation, in which case the actual value at time of importation will be ascertained.

We think Mr. Kennedy may be instructed to obtain, if he can, a clear declaration that the above construction is the one to be placed upon the Articles IV of the Treaties of January and October 1860.

We are not aware that our opinion is required upon any other point in relation to fines or expertise.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches, relating to the case of eight British seamen, part of the crew of the French ship "Mongol," now in custody at Bordeaux, on a charge of conspiracy and mutiny at sea, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that this is a case in which your Lordship, relying upon the Report of Mr. Hunt, should direct that the accused seamen should be defended by an Avocat. As it seems that the trial will probably take place at Havre, and not at Bordeaux, your Lordship may instruct Mr. Hunt to do all that lies in his power to expedite the trial, and also to communicate to the British Consul at Havre all the information he at present possesses in relation to the charge.

If the men be removed to Havre, probably your Lordship will deem it right to instruct the Consul there to protect the interests of the men in the sense we have indicated.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received February 1.)

Temple, February 1, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that, in accordance with the opinion given in our letter of the 22nd October last, a Circular had been addressed to Her Majesty's Consuls abroad (copy inclosed) cancelling the former Circular of the 18th March, and furnishing them with fresh instructions on the subject of the celebration of marriages under the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, in cases where only one of the parties is a British subject.

That according to that Circular no distinction was made between cases in which the man only, and those in which the woman only, is a British subject.

That by the Circular, however, to Her Majesty's Ministers abroad of the 18th March last, approved in our letter of the 28th February, and which still remains in force, the solemnization of marriages at Her Majesty's Missions, under the Act 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91, was prohibited in cases where the woman only is a British subject. (See copy inclosed.)

That it appeared to your Lordship that the practice in regard to the celebration of marriages at Her Majesty's Missions and Consulates abroad should be made as uniform as the existing state of legislation would admit.

That he (Lord Tenterden) was therefore directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of an amended Circular to Her Majesty's Ministers abroad, intended to replace that of the 8th March last, and in which the regulations as to the celebration of marriages between British subjects and foreigners were assimilated to those laid down in the Circular to Consuls of the 28th November last.

That he was to request that we would take the draft into consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we concurred in its terms.

That we would perceive from an opinion given by the Queen's Advocate in 1849 that Sir J. Dodson, though of opinion that a marriage contracted between two British subjects, according to British law, in the house of a British Minister or Ambassador abroad would be generally admitted as valid by the Tribunals of other civilized States, expressed himself unable to lay that down as a fixed and universal rule or principle.

That the Circular farther advised that parties presenting themselves to be married should, even when both are British subjects, be warned to ascertain and conform to the requirements of the laws of any country, not in the Queen's dominions, in which it might be of importance that the marriage should be recognized as valid. Your Lordship would be glad to know if that proceeding was, in our opinion, desirable.

That our opinions of the 17th and 28th February and 22nd October last, with a letter from the Registrar-General, were inclosed, &c.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we concur in the terms of the draft Circular.

And that we are of opinion that it is most important, in cases where both the parties to the marriage are British subjects, and necessary in cases where only one of the parties to the marriage is a British subject, that both parties should be warned to ascertain and conform to the requirements of the law of the country in which the marriage is to be had.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence arising out of a question submitted by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, as to whether he should allow the births of children of naturalized British subjects residing in Germany, whether naturalized in Great Britain or in the Colonies, to be registered in the Registers of the British Embassy at that place.

That the Registrar-General, who was referred to in this matter, having expressed his opinion that such registrations should be made, Lord Odo Russell was, as we should perceive, instructed accordingly, and the Home Office having been consulted as to whether an instruction in a similar sense should be addressed to Her Majesty's Missions abroad generally, and having answered in the affirmative, a draft instruction was accordingly prepared.

That Lord Tenterden, however, whose attention had been called to this matter, had, in the memorandum therein inclosed, stated his reasons for considering inexpedient the instructions which had been sent to Lord Odo Russell on this matter, and that it would be advisable to suspend any further action in this matter until the Regulations for the registration of births and deaths in foreign countries, which the Naturalization Act empowers the Secretary of State to make, are drawn up, and which is deferred until the new Registration Act, to be introduced in the coming Session of Parliament, is passed.

Viscount Enfield also stated that he was to request that we would take this matter into consideration, together with Lord Tenterden's suggestion as to the instruction which, in the present state of the question, might be addressed to Lord Odo Russell, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we agree with the suggestions of Lord Tenterden, and are of opinion that no instructions similar to those sent to Lord Odo Russell on the registration in the British Embassy of the births of the children of naturalized British subjects, whether naturalized in Great Britain or in the Colonies, should be now sent to Her Majesty's Missions abroad.

We are also of opinion that the instructions which Lord Tenterden suggests should, in the present state of the question, be addressed to Lord Odo Russell, should be sent to Lord Odo Russell.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directeded by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, forwarding one from Her Majesty's Consul at Brest, referring to a marriage between Count Kergonët, a French citizen, and Miss Macpherson Aberbain, a British subject.

That the parties, it appeared, having been already married by the civil authorities, according to French law, and subsequently, it would seem, at a French Roman Catholic Church, presented themselves before the British Consul at Brest, to be married again under the Act 12 & 13 Vict., cap, 68, but Mr. Rainals considered that the marriage could not be celebrated afresh at the Consulate, on the ground that by the previous marriage the wife had ceased to be a British subject, which opinion he based upon the Marriage Act above referred to, and secondly upon the Naturalization Act of 1870, which stated that "a married woman shall be deemed to be a subject of the State of which her husband is for the time being a subject."

That the Count de Kergonët accordingly expressed his intention of proceeding to Paris and being married at the British Embassy; and under these circumstances both Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris and Her Majesty's Consul at Brest were desirous of receiving instructions as to the light in which this and similar cases should be viewed, the difficulty raised by Mr. Rainals, which Lord Lyons referred to as a "technical" one, not having hitherto stood in the way of the celebration of such marriages at the British Embassy at Paris or at British Consulates. That he was accordingly to request that we would take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to offer thereupon, as well as with our opinion as to the instructions with which Her Majesty's Ambassador and the British Consulates should be furnished.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the British Ambassador or Consul is not under any obligation to refuse the solemnization of a marriage between a British subject and a foreigner where the parties to that marriage have been previously married according to the lex loci.

The second marriage, whilst it may satisfy the wishes of both or either of the parties, can give no additional validity to and does not throw any doubt upon the validity of the first marriage.

And Lord Lyons says that the ordinary practice in Paris is to have the marriage performed in the Embassy after the civil and binding marriage according to the lex loci.

Your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly give instructions that similar marriages may be performed either at Embassies or Consulates.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence relative to the desire of the Marquise de Seraville, a natural-born British subject, and now widow of a foreigner, to recover her British nationality; and your Lordship would be glad if we would take the case into consideration, and inform you whether we concurred in the interpretation placed in the Home Office letter of the 26th May on the 10th section of the Act 33 Vict., cap. 14 (copy inclosed), viz., that a woman being a natural-born British subject, retains her status as a British subject if, after having been married to an alien, she becomes a widow before the passing of the Act, but is to be deemed a "statutory alien" if she becomes a widow after the passing of the Act.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are unable to concur in the interpretation placed in the Home Office letter of the 26th May on the 10th section of 33 Vict., cap. 14.

In our opinion, every woman being a natural-born British subject, who had become an alien in consequence of her marriage, and had become a widow, but done no act to recover her British nationality at the time of the passing of the 33 Vict., cap. 14, must be deemed a statutory alien, and no distinction can be made from the circumstance of her husband dying before or since the passing of 33 Vict., cap. 14.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 14th October and the 13th November, and that of December last, respecting the rights of officers of Her Majesty's navy to search ships, both British and foreign, for naval deserters, copies of which Reports had been communicated to the Board of Admiralty, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from that Department dated the 11th June, inclosing a memorandum showing the result of an examination of the Records of the Admiralty and of the Admiralty Registry in regard to the question, accompanied by a letter from the Registrar of the Court of Admiralty, and an extract from the China and Japan Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865.

That the subject is one to which the Board of Admiralty attach much importance, and they are desirous that the papers which accompany their letter should be submitted to us, and that we should be invited to state our opinion whether any customary right of search, such as is mentioned in the memorandum, could be considered still to exist; and he (Mr. Hammond) was accordingly to request us to favour your Lordship with our Report upon that point, accompanied by any farther observations which we might have to offer.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That no customary right of search such as is mentioned in the memorandum can be considered now to exist.

In the Report which we had the honour to make to your Lordship on the 14th October, 1872, we stated our opinion on the extent and limits of the right of search which a naval officer might by law exercise; to that opinion we still adhere.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received August 16.)

Temple, August 16, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, the accompanying letter from the Home Office, inclosing a memorandum commenting on our Report of the 9th ultimo respecting the case of the Marquise de Seraville, a natural-born British subject who, having married an alien previously to the passing of the Naturalization Act of 1870 and became a widow, now seeks readmission to British nationality; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

And that he was to add that it appeared to your Lordship that, in considering this case, regard should be had to the 6th as well as to the 10th section of the Act.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the memorandum from the Home Office, and are unable to agree with the conclusion there reached.

The 7 & 8 Vict., cap. 66, sec. 16, enacted that a foreign woman by marrying a British subject acquired the nationality of her husband. (See Mr. Manning's case, 19 L. J. N. S. M. C., 1.)

By the laws of most foreign countries a woman by marriage acquired not only the domicile, but the nationality of her husband, became, as we think, "voluntarily naturalized" in the State of which her husband was a subject, and in the words of of 33 Vict., cap. 14, sec. 6, ceased to be a British subject, and was to be regarded as an alien.

This change of condition might by the same section be effected by an act, in the case before us, by marriage, before or after the passing of the Act.

The Act had in this sense a retrospective effect.

The married woman became (see section 8) a statutory alien.

Sub-section 1 of section 10 must be construed in connection with section 6, and not as a separate and independent section.

We are therefore still of opinion that a woman, a British subject, who married an alien before the Naturalization Act, 1870, lost her British nationality and became an alien according to British law.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the Consular Act of 1825, and to call our attention to the 10th clause, empowering the Secretary of State to authorize Her Majesty's Consuls to issue grants to British Church establishments, and to request our opinion whether the clause conferred a legal obligation on Her Majesty's Government to continue indefinitely a grant which had once been authorized.

That your Lordship presumed that, as grants had from time to time been withdrawn from various Church establishments (all the grants were withdrawn from those in China in 1869), there can be no such legal obligation, but that your Lordship would be glad nevertheless to be favoured with our opinion on the question with reference to the inclosed instruction which is about to be addressed to Her Majesty's Consuls at certain places where, in your Lordship's judgment, the grants could no longer be justified.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion the 6 Geo. IV., cap. 87, sec. 10, does not throw upon

1873

Her Majesty's Government a legal obligation to continue indefinitely grants which have once been authorized.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers relating to a proposed grant by Her Majesty's Government towards the expenses of building a British church at Patras on a site given by the Hellenic Government, and to a difference of opinion between the chaplain and the members of the Protestant community as to allowing a clergyman, other than one belonging to the Church of England, to officiate in the church in question.

That he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the proof of the intended appropriation of the building to Divine worship of the prescribed kind is at present such as to warrant a grant being made by Her Majesty's Government under section 11 of the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, and whether the acceptance of such a grant by the subscribers would render them less free than they would otherwise have been to do whatever they thought right with their church and its services so long as they observed the terms on which the Greek Government gave the land.

That the 11th section of the Act in question would be found at p. 51 of the accompanying volume of Consular Instructions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there is not sufficient proof that the building will be appropriated for the celebration of Divine service, in accordance with the provisions of 6 Geo. IV, cap 87, sec. 11, to warrant a grant being made by Her Majesty's Government under that section.

If, however, such a grant were made, we do not see how the future action of the subscribers, in respect to their church and the services in it, could be controlled.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens relative to a claim which had been preferred by the agent at Zante of a line of steamers belonging to Messrs. Papayanni and Mussabini, of Liverpool, to exemption from certain port dues.

That he also inclosed the papers noted in the margin relative to similar claims to exemption which had been preferred by certain Steam-ship Companies at the port of Syra; and he was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instruction which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Athens with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, since the several agreements were made with the Greek Government by private firms, and without any intervention of a communication with Her Majesty's Government, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Athens may properly be instructed not to bring the matter in dispute officially to the notice of the Greek Government, and not to take any steps which may bring Her Majesty's Government into a diplomatic conflict with the Greek Government on the subject.

The farther despatch transmitted to us by your Lordship's directions does not alter our views, but no doubt nothing would be more desirable than that the Ministers of the different Powers concerned should act together, provided that the Queen's Government is kept free from the quarrels of a private Company with the Greek Government on a question of construction of a commercial contract.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Hayti, together with the letters of Mr. Jenkins and the previous correspondence respecting the second Anglo-Haytian Commission on British claims.

That Mr. Jenkins, who represents a certain number of the British claimants, wished, as we would perceive from the correspondence, to press for conditions not insisted on by the majority of the claimants, and to question the decisions of the Commission.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was therefore to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue in supporting wholly or partially either the views represented by Mr. Jenkins or the decisions of the Anglo-Haytian Commission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government should support the decisions of the Anglo-Haytian Commission, and not, either wholly or partially, the views represented by Mr. Jenkins.

The grounds of exemption to certain British claims, which are stated in Mr. St. John's despatch of the 23rd January last (No. 33), are, in our opinion, sound, and the decision of the Commission should be considered final, and the more so since it has been accepted by the majority of claimants.

We are also of opinion that, as to the mode and time of paying the claims, the arrangement made by the Haytian Government is, if not the only yet the best practical arrangement which that Government may, in the circumstances, be able to carry out.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Port-au-Prince,* reporting the forcible seizure by the Dominican authorities of three Dominicans who had taken refuge in the British Vice-Consulate at Porto Plata; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be addressed to Mr. St. John upon the subject.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to inclose memoranda relative to grant of asylum to refugees in Her Majesty's Legations and Consulates.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Governor Gonzales, in his letter (Inclosure 2 in Mr. St. John's despatch), admits the inviolability of the Vice-Consulate, and says that the seizure of the refugees was effected in the private house of the Vice-Consul.

This distinction between the Consulate and the private house in which the Consul may happen to be residing, possibly at a distance from his official residence, is in our opinion very material.

From Mr. Hamburgher's and Mr. St. John's letters we infer that the place of seizure was in fact the private residence, not connected with the Consulate, and if so we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot properly instruct Mr. St. John to insist on the surrender of the refugees, or on any reparation to the British flag, which last was not insulted.

Mr. St. John, however, says that he has intimated to the Dominican Government that the affair has been referred to your Lordship and to the naval authorities, and that the Consular Body are in favour of the right of asylum in the residence of a Consul.

In these circumstances your Lordship may, from considerations of policy, judge it advisable to instruct Mr. St. John to represent to the Dominican authorities the expediency on their part of a conciliatory course, and that they should surrender the three prisoners, and salute the flag when again hoisted.

That we would farther see, from Mr. John's despatch No. 46 of the 21st ultimo, that General Miezi had applied to him (Mr. St. John) to obtain for him a pecuniary indemnity for the brutalities from which he and his sons suffered after being taken out of the British Consulate; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that Mr. St. John should be instructed to return to General Miezi's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. St. John may be properly instructed to tell General Miezi, in answer to his application that Mr. St. John should apply to the Dominican Government for a pecuniary indemnity for the brutalities exercised upon him (General Miezi) and his sons after they were taken out of the British Consulate, that no such application can be made, neither General Miezi nor his sons being British subjects, and satisfaction for the insult to the British flag and Consulate having been obtained.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosures, from the Admiralty relative to the extent to which British naval officers should support British Consular authorities in affording asylum to political offenders.

That he (Viscount Enfield) was to inclose two memoranda and the draft of a note addressed to M. Cadorna bearing on the subject, and to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature of instructions which should be given to naval officers on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That unless in cases where there may be a recognized practice or a Treaty under either of which British Consular authorities are entitled to afford asylum to political offenders, naval officers should be instructed not to interfere in support of the British Consular authorities.

It is, however, in our opinion, very difficult, if not impossible, to lay down general instructions for the guidance of naval officers in such cases, because they may properly be instructed to protect the British flag and Consulate, and cannot be expected, when suddenly called upon to afford that protection, to distinguish when, where, and how far they may not.

It seems to us that in this state of things the only instruction which can be given to naval officers is that they shall afford protection to the British Consulate, leaving the responsibility of acting not with the naval officer, unless he is clearly wrong, but with the Consular officer who asks for support.

Temple, June 9, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 24th February upon the subject of the British claims on Hayti which have twice been submitted to a joint Anglo-Haytian Commission, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Jenkins and correspondence relative to certain of those claims which were placed by the second Commission in Class III marked "reserved." He (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the correspondence into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued with regard to the claims to which they related.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly decline to comply with the request of Mr. Jenkins.

It appears that, although the cases in Class III and "reserved" were not actually the subject of a decision by the Commission, yet that the fact that in all the cases in that reserved class the property was in the hands of Haytian subjects was considered, and the principle that no compensation could be awarded for the destruction or pillage of goods or property so held was the ground of reservation.

---

* No. 39, March 8, 1873.

1873

It is to be regretted that no decision was actually given, but if the principle were well grounded, and the facts of any particular case brought that case within the principle, it would appear useless to move in support of a claim which would be rejected.

Mr. Jenkins does not deny that the property for the loss of which he claims compensation was in the hands of a Haytian subject.

In our opinion, no compensation for the loss of property so held can be claimed by Her Majesty's Government on behalf of a British subject, and the reference of such a case to the Commission would be useless.

We therefore advise your Lordship to take no farther steps in the matter beyond informing Mr. Jenkins of the reasons why Her Majesty's Government decline to accede to his application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Jenkins may, in our opinion, properly be answered that your Lordship, having on the 13th instant directed him to be informed of the grounds upon which your Lordship declined to accede to his request for a farther reference of the cases of Messrs. Gerdis and Co.'s claim on the Haytian Government, must leave Mr. Jenkins to report to Messrs. Gerdis the decision of your Lordship in the words which he may think best express the result.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th November last, respecting the claim of Her Majesty's Government upon that of San Domingo for repayment of the expenses connected with the detention at Tortola of the steamer "Telegrafo," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Dominican Minister at this Court, in which, after stating the grounds upon which his Government disputed their liability for the sum claimed by Her Majesty's Government (viz., 13,913*l.* 8*s.* 2½*d.*), he proceeded to say that the Dominican Government adhered to their voluntary offer to repay to Her Majesty's Government the sum of 1,864*l.* 3*s.* 2½*d.*, but that they could go no farther, and he concluded by proposing, on behalf of his Government, that the question should be submitted to the arbitration of a friendly Power to be chosen by Her Majesty's Government.

That the sum of 1,864*l.* 3*s.* 2½*d.* was the amount of the expense incurred in the trial of the "Telegrafo," and the appeal to the Privy Council; the much larger sum claimed by Her Majesty's Government being made up by the expenses connected with the action for damages brought against the colonial authorities for improper detention of the "Telegrafo," which action was compromised for 11,500*l.*

That in speaking of the offer to pay this sum Colonel Mendes probably alluded to the promises made to Mr. St. John, reported in his despatches No. 7 of the 24th October, 1871, No. 16 of the 19th June, 1872, and No. 23 of the 23rd August, 1872 (see accompanying volume).

That the previous correspondence relating to the claim was inclosed; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Colonel Mendes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no reason to change the opinion which, on the 29th November last, we had the honour of submitting to your Lordship, that the Dominican Government is answerable for the acts of M. Victoria.

Colonel Mendes may therefore, we consider, properly be answered that Her Majesty's Government, notwithstanding his letter, deems the Dominican Government responsible for the whole claim already made.

Your Lordship will best judge whether the difference between the two Governments should be referred to the arbitration of a friendly Power, as suggested by Colonel Mendes.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rome, inclosing copy of a letter from Dr. Grant, the Rector of the Scot's College at Rome, relative to the apprehensions entertained as to an expropriation of the Roman College by virtue of the provisions of a Bill now before the Italian Legislature.

That in Dr. Grant's letter, as we would perceive, he had raised the following question:—"Under actual circumstances, would not the laws which regulate the comity of nations afford a solid ground for the British and other Ministers in Rome to ask for the inviolability of our right of education at the Roman College?"

That various questions regarding the possible expropriation of educational and conventual establishments in Rome had from time to time been referred to us from the Foreign Office, but as the particular question now put by Dr. Grant has been raised for the first time in connection with the present position and privileges of those institutions, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon it.

1873

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is no ground upon which Her Majesty's Government could officially ask the Italian Government to secure the inviolability of the right of education at the Scot's College in Rome.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the son born in Genoa of Mr. Schiaffino, who was himself born at Gibraltar and the son of an Italian subject, no step towards denationalization having been taken in either case, is not exempt from the Italian law applicable to persons resident in Italy and Italian by the law of Italy.

In the case of Mr. Fernando, the father's nationality by origin is not stated, but it is said that he was born at Gibraltar and that he has resided in Italy for forty-six years. That Mr. Fernando was born in Genoa, and has taken no formal act of election of British nationality as required by Italian law.

In these circumstances Mr. Fernando is not, in our opinion, exempt from the application of Italian law in Italy.

And that he was to request us to take the despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what answer should be returned to Mr. Brown.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as the marriage would not be legal in Italy, the country of which the woman is a subject, and in which the marriage would be had, if at all, we are of opinion that Mr. Brown should be instructed not to solemnize the marriage.

My Lord, Temple, March 20, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that we had at various times had before us questions connected with the position of certain religious and educational establishments in Rome, in which parties in this country were interested, in regard to the effect upon those establishments of the Bill which has for some time been under the consideration of the Italian Legislature for the expropriation of certain Roman Catholic religious institutions; and we were aware that Her Majesty's Minister at Rome had repeatedly urged the interests of the British establishments upon the Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs, from whom he (the British Minister) had received assurances which there appeared reason to believe were satisfactory.

That in consequence of more recent representations made to your Lordship respecting the danger which was supposed to threaten certain of the establishments in question, and specifically those of the Colleges of St. Clemente, Ste. Isidore, Sta. Maria in Porterula, and the English, Scotch, and Irish Colleges in Rome, Sir A. Paget had been instructed to furnish an explicit Report in regard to the exact position and prospects of the establishments above referred to with reference to the application to them of the Bill in question, and to take all proper steps that might appear necessary in the interests of the various establishments.

That the correspondence on the subject was annexed, and in Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 31 of the 5th ultimo, and its inclosures, were contained the latest assurances and explanations of the Italian Government in regard to the question.

That the purport of those explanations was communicated in the letter of the 22nd ultimo to Lord Granard and the other parties who had recently urged the case of the Colleges upon your Lordship's attention, and Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 31 of the 5th February, upon which that letter was founded, was communicated by your Lordship to the Duke of Norfolk as President of the deputation of the Catholic Union of Great Britain; and their observations upon it were contained in the memorandum laid by the deputation before your Lordship on the subject (inclosed).

And that we would take that paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to offer upon the memorandum submitted to your Lordship by the deputation.

Lord Enfield annexed a translation of the Bill now under consideration, and stated that it would be found in Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 303 of the 3rd December last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the explanations of the Bill, and the assurance with respect to its operation, at least in its present shape, given by Sir A. Paget in his despatch to your Lordship of the 5th February, 1873, and the inclosures in reference to the English, Scotch, and Irish Colleges and St. Clemente, Ste. Isidore, and Sta. Maria in Porterula, are so full that your Lordship cannot properly instruct Sir A. Paget to bring the objections in the memorandum from the Catholic Union of Great Britain, received by you on the 1st March, 1873, to the notice of the Italian Government.

Especially as we are of opinion: first, that the subject matter of the Bill, namely, the law on educational and religious establishments in Italy, is a Constitutional question for the Italian Legislature, and with which foreign countries have in strictness no right to interfere in favour of their own subjects, whose status and real property in Italy are under the same law as the status and real property of Italian subjects, and Article 23 provides a means by which other than real property and the proceeds of real property must be dealt with by the two Governments. Secondly, because, in our opinion, the construction put upon the Bill in the inclosures and despatch of Sir A. Paget of the 5th February is the right construction, and that put upon the Bill and memorandum is wrong. At the same time, we see no objection to Sir A. Paget being instructed to watch the progress of the Bill and report to your Lordship, or himself, in case of urgency, address Chevalier Visconti Venosta, if there is reason to believe the assurances given in reference to the establishments in question, whether educational or religious, may not be strictly kept.

Temple, April 16, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, as marked in the margin, on the subject of a representation made to the Foreign Office by the Italian Minister at this Court, referring to the circumstances under which an Italian vessel, the "Helene," having on board two criminals who were being taken to Girgenti, was forced by stress of weather to put into Malta, where, by orders of the local authorities, the prisoners were released, in accordance, as it was stated, with the laws in force in the island.

That the Italian Government having represented the serious consequences which might result from such an occurrence becoming a precedent, and having urged that some understanding should be come to whereby the release of convicts, under the circumstances in question, might be guarded against, the matter had been referred to the Governor of Malta, who had now sent home a Report on the case by the Crown Advocate of the island, inclosing a draft Ordinance drawn up by that officer with the object of meeting the objections raised by the Italian Government in the case of criminals arriving at Malta under arrest, such arrest having been made under a warrant issued by a competent authority in the place where the offence was committed, or otherwise that there was sufficient evidence to support the arrest, if the offence had been committed in the island.

And that he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, first, as to whether the persons on board the "Helene" were, under the circumstances stated, properly released; and, secondly, whether the draft Order in Council prepared by the Crown Advocate at Malta is such as might be passed by the Colonial Legislature.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the release of the two men on board the Italian merchant-ship "Helene" in Malta Harbour was proper.

This state of the law, however, may give rise to so much inconvenience and mischief that, in our opinion, it ought not, at least in Malta, be suffered to continue; and, with that view, we consider that the draft Order in Council prepared by the Crown Advocate in Malta may properly be passed by the Colonial Legislature there.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, and its inclosure, from Her Majesty's Consul at Naples, relative to the proposed marriage there, under the Consular Marriage Act, of Mr. Sutcliffe, a British subject, to a native of Switzerland. That we would perceive that the Swiss Consul-General did not feel justified in giving his consent to the marriage without an authoritative statement on the bearing of the English law on the case, but that he would be satisfied by a statement from Mr. Calvert that Mr. Sutcliffe's declaration was in accordance with the law of this country.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Mr. Calvert would be justified in giving such a statement, and, if not, what course should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Calvert will be justified in stating that the proposed marriage will be in English a valid marriage, and that the woman will follow during his life the nationality of her husband.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 20th ultimo on the subject of the Bill for the suppression of religious Corporations in Rome, now under consideration by the Italian Legislature, the substance of which Report has been communicated to Her Majesty's Minister at Rome, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Sir A. Paget, inclosing a copy and translation of the article affecting foreign Corporations, as published in the "Opinione" newspaper, proposed by the Commission whose Report had not however yet been made public; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the solution proposed sufficiently provides for the interests of British ecclesiastical establishments, supposing the recommendations of the Commission in that respect to be adopted by the Italian Government.

And that the instruction to Sir A. Paget, to which his present despatch is in answer, and his despatches inclosing a translation of the proposed Bill and copies of his late communications with the Italian Government on the subject, were annexed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the recommendations of the Commission, supposing the Report of that Commission to agree with the article published in the "Opinione" newspaper, provides for the interests of British ecclesiastical establishments so far sufficiently that Her Majesty's Government ought not to instruct Sir A. Paget to bring the subject before the Italian Government with the view of protesting against or preventing the adoption of the Report.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence respecting a complaint made by Mr. Arthur Vansittart to Her Majesty's Minister at Rome in regard to an assault committed upon him on leaving the Church of the "Gésu" at Rome on the 30th ultimo in the company of some friends, which, as we would see, had formed the subject of a representation by Sir A. Paget to the Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs, who had assured Sir A. Paget that the circumstances on which Mr. Vansittart's complaint was founded were the subject of proceedings before the judicial authorities.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with any observations which we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from Chevalier Visconti Venosta's note of the 19th instant to Sir A. Paget that Mr. Vansittart's case is the subject of judicial proceedings before the Italian authorities.

1873

There is, we presume, no reason to assume at present that those proceedings will not be fairly conducted, and a right conclusion reached.

We are therefore of opinion that no farther steps can at present be taken by Her Majesty's Government or by Sir A. Paget in the matter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that the two memorials inclosed, Miss D. Nicholson, Mr. A. Nicholson, and Miss G. Nicholson stated that by the will of Jonathan Hatfield they were entitled to certain Italian stock, and that the Italian Government refused to pay more than eighteen months' arrears which are due to them, and they requested the intervention of Her Majesty's Government in order to obtain satisfaction for their claims.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to request us to inform your Lordship whether Her Majesty's Government could properly be called upon to interfere in such a matter, and, if so, what instructions should be sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Rome.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government may not improperly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Rome to bring the facts stated in both memorials to the favourable consideration of the Italian Government, and to represent to that Government that some arrears beyond the interest due on the last three half-years should be paid to the memorialists, who seem to have pressed their claim with due diligence, and ought not, now that the Italian Government admits their right to the principal sum, be prevented by a Statute of Limitations from receiving the interest, hitherto withheld by the Italian Government and not forfeited by the laches of the memorialists.

Temple, July 9, 1873.

My Lord,

That Mr. Mercer, as we would perceive, had in the first instance instituted legal proceedings against the carabinieri, which, however, for the reasons stated in his letter of the 18th December last, he had abandoned, in consequence of which Her Majesty's Minister at Rome had taken up the case officially, as stated in his despatches.

That from the letter just received from Mr. Mercer, dated the 30th ultimo, it would appear that he had received an intimation that some sort of trial had, unknown to him or to Sir A. Paget, taken place, the result of which had been that the carabinieri had been acquitted, whilst Mr. Mercer had been cited to appear before the Tribunals, and had actually attended in the character of the accused party, the trial being adjourned till the 15th instant. Under these circumstances, Mr. Mercer was anxious to know, before that date if possible, what course he should take in the matter, and what was his real position; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Mercer, and the instructions, if any, with which Sir A. Paget should be furnished in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Mercer may properly be told, in answer to his letter, that he should attend, with his witnesses, the trial on the 15th instant, but that Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to pay the legal expenses which he may incur in the trial, or give him any advice whether he should obtain legal assistance.

We think the case is one in which Her Majesty's Consul should be present, and that Sir A. Paget should be instructed to direct Mr. Calvert to attend and see that the inquiry is fairly conducted.

Mr. Mercer may be told that your Lordship has issued that instruction.

Mr. Mercer appears to have been treated with great severity, far exceeding, so far as we can discover, any offence which he can have committed, or had the opportunity of committing, and Sir A. Paget may be instructed to state (not officially at present) that Her Majesty's Government looks upon the case as one of importance, and hopes that all the facts will be fairly brought out, so that the punishment may reach the real offenders.

Temple, August 4, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence which had taken place between the Foreign Office, Her Majesty's Minister at Rome, and Mr. Mercer since the receipt of our Report of the 9th ultimo, with reference to the complaint preferred by him against certain carabinieri by whom he had been arrested in consequence of a dispute between some boatmen.

That from Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 266, and also from Mr. Mercer's letter of the 21st ultimo, we would see that the legal proceedings in this case had resulted in the acquittal of Mr. Mercer of the acts alleged against him in justification of the proceedings of the carabinieri, and that Mr. Mercer now puts the question whether he is entitled, or not, to the payment by the Italian Government of his expenses in the matter, and to the payment of a money indemnity for the treatment to which he has been subjected, to be claimed on his behalf by Her Majesty's Government.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take into consideration all the circumstances connected with the case, with which object the previous papers were inclosed, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in regard to the points now put forward by Mr. Mercer.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report that—

1. The result of the trial being the full acquittal of Mr. Mercer, we are of opinion that he is entitled to the payment by the Italian Government of his expenses in the matter, and that Her Majesty's Government may support his claim.

2. It appears from Inclosure 4 in Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 266 that no prosecution of the carabinieri could by Italian law have been successful. That apparently Mr. Mercer could have taken civil proceedings against the carabinieri, and that he did not do so, and consequently the Italian Government, in answer to any claim for indemnity to Mr. Mercer, may urge that he has not exhausted the remedies open to him by the Italian law.

The reply to such answer, if made, may probably be that a civil action for compensation from the carabinieri for the treatment received by Mr. Mercer at their hands would be an idle ceremony.

And, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government may properly represent to the Italian Government that the treatment of Mr. Mercer by officials of the Italian Government is looked upon as a grave matter affecting the person and liberty of a British subject found by an Italian Court of Justice to have been entirely innocent of all offence, and that Her Majesty's Government requires an indemnity to be paid to Mr. Mercer as an acknowledgment of the wrongs done to him, and some compensation for the unmerited sufferings which he has undergone.

1873

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which had been received from Messrs. Payne and Nelson requesting the intervention of Her Majesty's Government for the protection of the interests of Mrs. Stevens, which are involved in a suit pending before the Italian Courts in regard to the succession to the estate of her deceased father, M. Giuseppe Scolaro.

That Mrs. Stevens was stated to be the widow of a British subject, and to have been the issue of a marriage contracted by M. Scolaro in England, though it did not absolutely appear whether she was born in this country or not, and the course suggested would seem to be that Her Majesty's Minister at Rome should make application to have the proceeds of the estate to which Mrs. Stevens lays claim deposited with the Legation until the final decision of the Court of Appeal, so as to prevent the adverse parties to the suit having the use of the property in the meanwhile.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the case is one in which Her Majesty's Government can properly interfere.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 15.)

Temple, September 15, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th September instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us herewitth a despatch (No. 279) which had been received from Her Majesty's Minister in Italy, forwarding a Report drawn up by Mr. Herries, Secretary to the Legation, on the origin, character, and possessions of the English, Scots, and Irish Colleges at Rome.

That the position of those establishments and of others claiming a British character under the law now passed by the Italian Legislature with regard to the disposal of ecclesiastical property in Rome, had, as we were aware, and under our advice, formed the subject of frequent representations to the Italian Government by the British Minister; that Mr. Herries, in his Report, raised two questions:—

1. As to the expediency of any action with a view to the restoration of the property now held by the English College to the uses for which it was originally intended, and from which it was diverted by a Papal Bull 300 years ago.

2. As to how far the circumstances of the foundation and endowment of the English, Scots, and Irish Colleges can be considered as vitiating the right of any or all of them to lay claim to the character of British institutions and to the protection or good offices of Her Majesty's Government.

That on both these points Her Majesty's Minister asked for instructions in the despatch which accompanied the Report, and your Lordship would be obliged if we would favour you with our opinion as to the answer to be returned to Sir A. Paget on the subject, and with any further observations on the question which might occur to us.

Mr. Hammond also stated that he forwarded to us, for purposes of reference, the original application addressed to Lord Palmerston, in 1848, on behalf of those establishments by Dr. Wiseman, together with the Law Officers' opinion thereon, and the instructions which were founded upon it, and a similar application from Archbishop Manning in 1866, and an instruction founded thereon; and also the whole of the correspondence which had taken place on the matter since the occupation of Rome in 1870.*

That it was obvious that any decision which might be arrived at in regard to the British character of the three Colleges might also affect the three other institutions claiming British protection, viz., Ste. Isidore, St. Clement, and Sta. Maria in Porterula; that some details respecting the foundation of those institutions would be found in the memorial from the Catholic Union of Ireland inclosed in Lord Granard's letter of the 27th January last, and in the inclosures to Sir Augustus Paget's despatch No. 12 of the 14th of that month, both of which would be found among the accompanying papers; and that a copy of the new Italian Law as passed would be found inclosed in Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 238 of the 25th June last.

In a postscript Mr. Hammond added that the circumstances of the foundation of the English College and its claim to foreign nationality would be found argued at considerable length in the sentence of the Court of Appeal at Rome inclosed in Sir A. Paget's despatch No. 60 of the 4th March, 1872, and the latter question was resolved in the negative; that the statement made in the despatch to the contrary is apparently an error.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, it would be useless, and therefore inexpedient, after the laqse of so many years, for Her Majesty's Government to take any direct action for the restoration of any part of the property now held by the English College to the uses for which that property was, according to Mr. Herries (and we see no reason to doubt the accuracy of the facts stated by him) originally intended.

Sir A. Paget might, however, be not improperly instructed to call the attention of the Italian Government to those facts, and to suggest to that Government that some provision might equitably be made for the original charitable purposes out of some part of the property.

2. The circumstances stated by Mr. Herries do, in our opinion, vitiate the right of the several Colleges to a claim, under the character of British institutions, to the protection or good offices of Her Majesty's Government, and Sir A. The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, November 18, 1873.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 14th November, stating—

That towards the end of last year an Italian vessel, the "Helene," having on board two criminals who were being taken to Girgenti, was forced by stress of weather to put into Malta, where, by orders of the local authorities, the prisoners were released in accordance with the laws in force in the island.

That the Italian Minister at this Court represented to your Lordship the serious consequences which might result from such an occurrence becoming a precedent, and urged that some understanding should be come to to prevent the release of convicts under similar circumstances in the future.

That, to meet the objections raised by the Italian Government, a draft Ordinance was prepared by direction of the Governor of Malta, and was concurred in by the Law Officers of the Crown in their Report of the 16th April last; that in that draft Ordinance the Italian Minister wished certain amendments to be inserted, but in the meantime it had been passed by the Colonial Legislature. The Earl of Kimberley therefore instructed the Governor of Malta to submit the observations made by the Italian Minister to the Crown Advocate of the island; and Lord Tenterden further stated that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of his Excellency's reply, forwarding the Report of the Crown Advocate, together with copies of the Ordinance as it now stands, and the draft of a proposed amending Ordinance.

That the correspondence which had passed on this subject since the date of the Law Officers' Report of the 16th April and the previous papers were transmitted therewith, and he was to request that we would take them into our consideration, together with the Report of the Crown Advocate, and favour your Lordship with any remarks we might have to offer on the recommendations of that Report, and the general question on which it bears, especially with regard to extending the provisions of the Ordinance to political or military offences.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the Report of the Crown Advocate, the Ordinance, and draft of a proposed amending Ordinance, together with the other papers transmitted to us.

With your Lordship's permission, we propose to deal first with the general question, which underlies the whole subject, whether, in a place situated geographically as Malta is, it is expedient that Her Majesty's Government should insist upon the right of interfering with persons who may be brought as prisoners by a foreign merchant-ship into Maltese waters—Italian prisoners, for instance, on their way as transports to Pantellaria; French prisoners from Algiers to Toulon; or, for such a case is possible, an American on board an American merchant-ship given up under an Extradition Treaty by France or Italy, or some other country, to the United States, and on his way to America.

If it be said that the ship having such prisoners on board need not have come to Malta, and being there must take the law as it exists, the difficulty, as in the case of the "Helene," which gave rise to the present controversy, exists, in a more complicated form, where the ship has come in not willingly but by stress of weather or other casualty.

But your Lordship, without our taking up more of your time by enlarging on this matter, will at once see how many untoward discussions may arise between Her Majesty's Government and foreign Governments if the right to visit foreign ships for the purpose of inquiring into the cases of prisoners on board those ships is exercised at Malta.

We submit to your Lordship's consideration that which we believe is the rule of the French law in similar cases might with advantage be adopted in Malta, namely, that except for the purposes of customs, and the health, peace, and good order of the port, the ship, though in Maltese waters, should be considered as a part of the territory under whose flag she sails, and should not in other respects be subject to Maltese law.

Passing from the general question to the Report of the Crown Advocate, we agree with the greater part of it, both in the reasons and the conclusions.

There is, in our view, a great difference between persons who have made their way to a foreign country and taken refuge there and those who are brought into the waters and within the territorial jurisdiction of that foreign country on board, and remaining on board, a ship on their way to trial or punishment after trial.

We consider that no analogy exists between the two cases which will admit of any sound argument from or true reference to the principles of extradition.

In our opinion the ship should be, as we have already remarked, taken as part of the territory of the country whose flag she carries, and no distinction should in principle be made in the classes of offences.

We are therefore obliged to differ from Lord Kimberley in respect to political and military offences, and, in our opinion, the Ordinance as it now stands is right in not excluding them.

Your Lordship will allow us further to observe that few things more inconvenient or mischievous in a social, public, or political sense could happen than the release at Malta of every political or military offender who might happen to be brought there as a prisoner.

The Report of the Crown Advocate is so very able that we have great diffidence in disagreeing with him, particularly as he must be acquainted with the state of things at Malta, an advantage which we have not. But, as at present advised, we consider the 2nd and 3rd paragraphs printed in italics on p. 4 of the draft Ordinance open to objections, and would advise their being struck out.

In all other respects, but subject to our observations on the general principle, we agree with the draft Ordinance.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 29th November last relative to the case of the "Maria Luz," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan,* inclosing a translation of a communication which had been addressed to the Japanese Government by the Peruvian Envoy, claiming compensation on account of their proceedings in regard to the vessel, and criticizing the action of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the document into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the merits of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we can only repeat that which we had the honour to report to your Lordship on the 29th November last, that, in our opinion, the action of the Japanese Government in the matter of the "Maria Luz" was perfectly justifiable.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received August 28.)

Temple, August 28, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, respecting a Marriage Law which had been recently published by the Japanese Government, and containing clauses with regard to marriages contracted between foreigners and Japanese subjects; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, with the exception of the last point noticed by Mr. Hannen, and subject to a general exception to be stated hereafter, we do not concur in Mr. Hannen's objections to the Marriage Law proposed or enacted by the Japanese Government. Indeed, even the last point made by Mr. Hannen is very far from clear. For it was held by Sir C. Cresswell, in "Simonin v. Mallac," that a marriage was good and binding in this country between two French subjects because well celebrated according to English law, although the French Courts, including the highest Court of Appeal, had set it aside as null and void according to French law; a case, indeed, not precisely in point in the present instance, but a case founded on the assertion of a right in England very analogous to that which Mr. Hannen conceives to be untenable when claimed by Japan, a right to make a foreign subject with a foreign domicile amenable to our law of marriage with all its consequences. It is, therefore, at the least doubtful whether even upon this last point we have on English principles any right to object to the Japanese legislation.

On all the other points we do not think that the Japanese law, if confined (as it ought to be) to residents in Japan, is at all beyond the competency of a civilized country to enact, subject only to the exception we have above referred to. That exception is the asserted existence of certain Treaty rights on English subjects resident in Japan. These rights must depend upon the words of the Treaty, to which your Lordship has not referred us, but we may observe in general that the reservation of exclusive jurisdiction to English Tribunals over English subjects in Japan would not be necessarily inconsistent with the right of the Japanese to enact what laws they thought fit as to the marriages of their own subjects with foreigners, foreigners having notice of the laws and knowing what they are about when they contract such marriages.

The character of such marriages, if they come to be adjudicated upon in England by an English Court of Divorce, does not seem to us to have any bearing on the question of the right of the Japanese Government to enact this law.

Temple, September 15, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan relative to certain negotiations which have recently taken place between the Japanese Government and some of the Treaty Powers in regard to the admission of foreigners to the interior of Japan.

That under the existing Treaty Regulations foreigners are admitted by right only to the districts under Consular jurisdiction, and the Japanese Government object to relaxing this rule unless foreign Powers agree that their subjects visiting the interior should be subject to Japanese jurisdiction.

That Her Majesty's Government were not prepared to make such a concession, as they did not consider that the administration of the law in Japan afforded sufficient securities for the safety of foreigners, but that Sir Harry Parkes was apprehensive that one or other of the minor Treaty Powers might be induced to give up extra-territorial privileges for the sake of obtaining the admission of their subjects to the interior, and that he inquires whether, if this should take place, and if Swiss, Italians, or any other foreigners were admitted into the interior subject to Japanese jurisdiction, he would be justified in insisting that British subjects should, under the most-favoured-nation clause in our Treaty, be also allowed to go into the interior, but without being bound by the condition as to Japanese jurisdiction.

That a copy of the Treaty between Great Britain and Japan was sent for our information; and that Mr. Hammond was to request that he would take the subject into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instruction that should be sent to Sir Harry Parkes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the most-favoured-nation clause in the Treaty with Japan will not have the operation suggested by Sir H. Parkes.

British subjects could, under that clause, go into the interior only on the same conditions with the subjects of other Powers, and if these latter go into the interior without the extra-territorial protection, the British subject could not avail himself of that protection.

My Lord, Temple, September 15, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Sir H. Parkes relative to the administration of the intestate estate of Mr. William Milne, a British merchant, who died in Japan in the year 1871. Your Lordship had called for a Report on the subject, in consequence of receiving the accompanying letter from Mr. Baber; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the steps that should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Gower, as stated in Sir E. Hornby's letter to that gentleman of the 10th June, 1873, was the simple custodian of the estate. That, as such, he is not called upon nor ought he to mix himself up in any discussions or legal proceedings arising on the administration of Mr. Milne's estate.

And we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may properly direct that Mr. Gower act merely as the stake-holder, leaving the persons interested, whether creditors or next-of-kin, to ascertain and have their rights decided by legal decision, or among themselves. That Mr. Baber should be informed of this determination taken by Her Majesty's Government, and that he may have copies of any of the documents relating to the estate which may be in the possession of the Foreign Office.

My Lord, Temple, December 8, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch (No. 84) from Sir Harry Parkes, forwarding a draft of Regulations which, in concert with his colleagues, he had proposed for the concurrence of the Japanese Government in regard to foreigners travelling in Japan beyond the limits of the Treaty ports; and he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the power of Her Majesty's Legation to make and enforce these Regulations, especially those numbered 3, 5, and 10; and that we would at the same time favour your Lordship with any observations that might occur to us on them.

A copy of the Order in Council for China and Japan was inclosed therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Legation has indirectly, if not directly, the power to make and enforce the proposed Regulations, since the power of granting and refusing passports, and the conditions upon which the passports shall be granted, rest with Her Majesty's Legation, and Regulations 3, 5, and 10 do not form any exception to this principle.

In Regulation 1, line 8 of the draft, we think some changes may be made by substituting for the words written there the following words, "granted to seamen or to any." We have no other observation to make upon these Regulations, which Sir H. Parkes and his colleagues have approved of.

We beg, however, to call attention to section 92 of Order in Council, and to suggest whether it may not be necessary to modify or repeal that section, having regard to the objects of the proposed Regulations.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 27th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch (No. 76) from Sir H. Parkes, raising a question as to the liability of certain officers and men of the British navy, who, by the permission of the Admiralty, were acting as Naval Instructors in the pay of the Japanese Government, to register themselves in the manner prescribed for British subjects resident in Japan by the 114th, 115th, and 116th clauses of the Order in Council for China and Japan; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Sir H. Parkes on the subject.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to say that a copy of the Order in Council was annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That assuming the officers and men in question to be resident in Japan, and not to be borne on the muster-roll of a British vessel there arriving, we are of opinion that they are to be registered in the manner prescribed by the Order in Council (clauses 114, 115, and 116), though they are acting as Naval Instructors in the pay of the Japanese Government. We would, however, point out that a special reduced scale of fees under section 115 may be made if thought expedient in this particular class of cases.

Uhthoff.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the paper into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That unless there is any reason for believing that the vessels referred to in Messrs. Uhthoff's letter are intended to be employed in the military or naval service of some foreign State at war with some friendly State within the meaning of the 33rd and 34th Vict., cap. 90, sec. 8, there is nothing to prevent General Foster or any one else from arming such vessels and taking them to Mexico (which we assume to be at peace), as an ordinary commercial transaction. There is no reason why they should be placed under the English flag, nor do we think it desirable that they should be so.

My Lord, Temple, November 18, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, on receipt of our Report of the 15th November of last year, relative to the attack on Orange Walk in British Honduras by Yraiche Indians, your Lordship addressed a note to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs (draft of which was inclosed), calling upon the Mexican Government to compensate the sufferers, and to take adequate measures to prevent such inroads in future.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to transmit to us the answer of the Mexican Government, together with the subsequent correspondence that had passed upon the subject between the Foreign Office, the Colonial Office, and firms interested in British Honduras; and that he was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps that should now be taken in the matter.

Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to request that we should direct our special attention to the statements in Governor Cairns' despatches Nos. 89 and 128 (inclosed in the Colonial Office letters of the 26th July, 1873, and the 30th September, 1873), in which Mr. Blockley's letter of the 14th May (inclosed in the Colonial Office letter of the 4th July), and in the letter from Messrs. Young and Co. of June 1873, which tend to show that the offending Indians and their Leader were under the control of the Mexican authorities; and that he was to request that we would be good enough to state whether we were satisfied that those statements bring home the responsibility to the Mexican Government, or whether we considered that any further information was required.

That the papers previously transmitted to us were also sent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully read the note of Señor Lafranquerie of the 14th February last, to your Lordship, and also the other documents transmitted to us.

We are of opinion that the statements made by Señor Lafranquerie are extremely vague and general as to the facts, and that the information communicated by Governor Cairns, Mr. Blockley, and Messrs. Young, shows that the Mexican Government if they have not connived at, certainly have taken no sufficient measure to prevent or stop, the planning and execution of the raids complained of or to arrest and punish the raiders when they got back to Mexican territory. And we, therefore, consider that no further information is required on that point.

But Lord Tenterden is pleased to request us to state to your Lordship our opinion as to the steps that should now be taken in the matter.

Your Lordship would, in our opinion, be fully justified in demanding and exacting by the employment of force a compensation from the Mexican Government. Yet we submit for your Lordship's consideration whether it may not be sufficient for the present to inform Señor Lafranquerie that Her Majesty's Government is in possession of evidence which proves the neglect of the Mexican authorities with respect to these raids, both before and after their perpetration, that out of consideration for the Mexican Government, the compensation which is rightly due will for the present not be insisted upon, but that in the event of any future raid Her Majesty's Government will be bound and will not hesitate to demand and exact the fullest compensation for losses incurred by British subjects, and the complete satisfaction for the outrages committed on British territory.

My Lord, Temple, February 7, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting infractions by the Government of Uruguay of a Postal Agreement with Her Majesty's Government, signed on the 28th November, 1853. (See "Hertslet," vol. 12, p. 955.)

That the Uruguayan Government, as we would perceive from the correspondence, maintained that the Agreement, although acted upon for many years, was not binding upon them, as it had never been sanctioned by the Legislature of the Republic, and that they were justified in summarily terminating its most important Articles by the discovery of various abuses.

That Her Majesty's Government, on the other hand, had held that the Uruguayan Government were bound, before altering or terminating the Agreement, to give the notice of one year as required by Article 6. But, as it now appears that Her Majesty's Government have no means, except by the use of force, for securing the continued adherence of the Uruguayan Government to the Agreement, and as it appears from the last Report from the Postmaster-General that the important provisions of Article 2 have now been set aside, there appears to be no longer any use in maintaining an Agreement which the Uruguayan Government refuse to respect; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in summarily terminating the said Agreement of the 28th November, 1853.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Government of Uruguay having, by a recent Decree, pronounced the Postal Convention of 1853 to have had and to have no binding effect, and having infringed the spirit of that Convention by recent acts, Her Majesty's Government will, in our opinion, be justified in summarily terminating that Agreement or Convention.

We would, however, submit, for your Lordship's consideration, whether that summary termination of the Agreement may not affect contracts which may have been made for the conveyance of mails, and also may not put British interests in Uruguay to a serious inconvenience.

On these points we have no information, and your Lordship will be able to judge whether they are entitled to any weight in laying down the course of action which Her Majesty's Government may take.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us three despatches, with their inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, relative to the difficulties which were alleged to be thrown in the way of British subjects obtaining justice when prosecuting their claims upon certain Moorish authorities before the local Tribunals in Morocco.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to inclose a Report furnished by the Advocate-General on the subject, together with the previous papers, and stated that he was to request us to take the same into consideration, in connection with the Treaties between Great Britain, France, and Morocco, referred to by Sir J. D. Hay, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the representations already made by Her Majesty's Minister to the Moorish Government in the matter should be approved, and also as to the instructions which should be addressed to him for his future guidance.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the representation made by Her Majesty's Minister to the Moorish Government inclosed in the despatch of the 14th February, 1873, may properly be approved of, and Her Majesty's Minister may be instructed to act as he has hitherto done, and in concert with his colleagues, in the matter to which that despatch of the 14th February, 1873, relates.

In regard to the despatch of the 20th February, 1873, the instructions to the native notaries is, in our opinion, directly at variance with the Article IX of the Treaty of the 9th October, 1856, and to the Article IV of the Convention of the same date, and the representations made by Her Majesty's Minister in his letter to Seyed Mohammed Barghash, Inclosure No. 4, may properly be approved.

But we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Minister cannot properly be instructed, as he suggests in his despatch of the 21st February, 1873, not to allow a British subject to appear before a Cadi, nor can he be instructed to resent it or in any way make use of Article XII of the French Treaty. Provision for the adjustment of all cases or causes of litigation is made by Article IX of the Treaty of 1856, and Her Majesty's Minister should be instructed to take that Article for his guidance.

My Lord, Temple, September 2, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier relative to a gate tax imposed by the Moorish Government on camels bringing produce from the interior of Morocco.

A copy of the Treaty of the 9th December, 1856, referred to in the above despatch, and of a previous despatch from Sir J. D. Hay, the concluding paragraphs of which relate to the matter, were inclosed; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the legality of the tax in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the effect of the gate tax may be indirectly to impose a toll or charge in respect of goods or produce purchased by British subjects and conveyed from some place in Morocco to a port therein in the shape of an increased rate for carriage is obvious, and so far the gate tax is contrary to the spirit of Article III of the Convention of 1856.

We cannot, however, advise your Lordship that the gate tax is illegal, and we are of opinion that the course suggested by Sir J. D. Hay, and his notes to the Moorish Minister and British Vice-Consuls, may properly be adopted.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch (No. 65, Consular, September 15, 1873), and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister and Consul-General in Morocco, asking for instructions as to the quarter to which should be forwarded a notice of appeal from a decision of the British Vice-Consul at Mogador in a suit brought by an Italian firm against a British company; and that Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take Sir John D. Hay's despatch into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what instructions should be sent.

That a copy of the Order in Council of the 27th August, 1857, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Order in Council provides for the trial in the Consular Court of civil cases between British subjects and between British and Moorish subjects, but does not provide for the trial of such cases between British and foreign other than Moorish subjects.

The silence of the Order, therefore, as to the course of appeals in these latter cases is consistent; and as the Consular Court has no jurisdiction, no appeal is provided for to correct the sentences of the Court.

We are therefore of opinion that Sir John D. Hay should be instructed to inform

My Lord, Temple, March 24, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that in referring us to the previous Reports of the Law Officers of the Crown, marked in the margin, on the subject of Messrs. Swanzy's claims against the Netherlands Government, arising out of the plunder of their property at Dixcove, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, with all the former papers, a farther despatch, and inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at the Hague, containing the reply of the Netherlands Government to the last representation he addressed to them on this case, founded on the affidavit of the Dutch Serjeant Kwater Kwassie.

That in our Report of the 1st July last we were good enough to advise your Lordship that that deposition alone, from its detailed recapitulation and straightforward recital of facts, caused us to modify the opinion we had otherwise formed that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in lending an official support to those claims, and to recommend that the Netherlands Government should be called upon to give a satisfactory answer to the affidavit.

That he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the whole case, and the last reply of the Netherlands Government, into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether or not Her Majesty's Government should continue to support Messrs. Swanzy's claims, and if so, upon what grounds.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the deposition of Serjeant Kwater Kwassie is fully answered by the evidence forwarded to your Lordship by Sir E. Harris, with the answer of the Netherlands Government.

And your Lordship cannot, in our opinion, continue to support the claim of Messrs. Swanzy.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 24th March last, on the subject of Messrs. Swanzy's claim on the Netherlands Government for property destroyed at Dixcove, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the further correspondence which had taken place with Messrs. Swanzy in regard to the matter, from which we would perceive that that firm had been instructed, in accordance with the recommendations of our Report, that their claim could not be further supported by Her Majesty's Government, applied for and were supplied with copies of the declarations of the Netherlands officials, in contravention of the evidence produced on their side. Messrs. Swanzy had now written impugning the value of the Dutch evidence, and complained of the decision taken by Her Majesty's Government with regard to their claim, which they announced their determination to persist in.

And that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which might occur to us on the last letter from Messrs. Swanzy, and with our opinion as to the course to be taken.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

4. A copy of the Treaty between the Netherlands and Acheen, ratified by the former on the 9th May, 1857.
5. A copy of the Convention between Great Britain and the Netherlands of the 2nd November, 1871.

That, in addition to these papers, he was to transmit to us a draft of an answer which your Lordship proposed to return to the Colonial Office, suggesting the nature of a reply to be made to the Sultan's appeal; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request our opinion as to whether the suggestions contained in the draft were reasonable, and specially as to whether it could be justly said that Great Britain is free from the obligations which she contracted towards Acheen by the Treaty of 1819.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the terms suggested in the draft are reasonable, and Great Britain can justly be said to be freed from the obligations which she contracted towards Acheen by the Treaty of 1819.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 23.)

My Lord, Temple, July 22, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, in the month of April last, a collision took place in Bordeaux Harbour between the Netherlands vessel "Termonde" and the British steamer "Gogo," in which the former suffered certain injuries. The "Gogo," which is said to belong to Greenock, to be the property of Messrs. Scott and Co. of that town, and to have been chartered for the voyage during which the collision took place by Messrs. Moss and Co., of Liverpool, left Bordeaux shortly afterwards, and was condemned in default in costs and damages by the Tribunal at Bordeaux to which the captain of the "Termonde" appealed. As, however, she was then, and has been since, out of the jurisdiction of the Tribunal, the Netherlands Minister had made an application in which he requested that Her Majesty's Government would give their assistance to farther the ends of justice, and to secure reparation to the captain of the "Termonde."

And that your Lordship would be glad to learn our opinion as to the course that should be pursued under the circumstances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Count Bylandt may, in our opinion, properly be informed that, by the law of England, Her Majesty's Government cannot take any measures for enforcing the Judgment of the Court at Bordeaux or the payment of the losses incurred by the collision between the Netherlands vessel "Termonde" and the English steamer "Gogo," and that redress can be obtained only through the ordinary Tribunals.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 10.)

My Lord, Temple, September 10, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence relative to certain alleged fraudulent proceedings in the case of the British vessel "Florence;" that he was also to transmit to us a copy of the Treaty between Great Britain and the Netherlands of the 6th March, 1856, to which Mr. Vice-Consul Cohen referred, together with a copy of the Merchant Shipping Act; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion: first, as to the proceedings of Mr. Acting Vice-Consul Mackintosh and Mr. Vice-Consul Cohen; and, secondly, as to the conduct of the Dutch authorities of which Mr. Cohen complained; and whether a representation should be made to the Netherlands Government on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the proceedings of Mr. Acting Vice-Consul Mackintosh and Mr. Vice-Consul Cohen were irregular and beyond the scope of their authority.

There is not before us sufficient evidence to show what was the conduct of the masters of the two British vessels, except the facts, so far as they are disclosed, offered in excuse for the over-zealous conduct of Mr. Mackintosh and Mr. Cohen.

No representation can, in our opinion, properly be made to the Netherlands Government on the subject.

[This opinion was cancelled, and the case on which it was given withdrawn, in consequence of the impossibility of an agreement about it.]

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 23.)

My Lord, Temple, September 23, 1873.

That this Proclamation has given rise to the accompanying correspondence between the Foreign Office and the Colonial Office, which he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, with the view of enabling us the more clearly to understand the questions which had been submitted for your Lordship's consideration in the letter from the Colonial Office of the 11th instant, to which, and to the correspondence referred to in it, he was more particularly requested to call our attention, although your Lordship would, at the same time, be glad to have an opinion as to whether the view taken of Sir H. Ord's proceedings generally, as expressed in the letter to the Colonial Office of the 9th instant, is a just one.

That we would observe, from the Colonial Office letter of the 11th instant, that the point raised by the correspondence from the Governor of the Straits Settlements is whether provisions could be considered as included in naval and military stores, and as thus coming under the prohibitory order of the 31st March last, if exported by private individuals from the British Settlements for the use of the Dutch troops either to Deli or any other place within the limits prescribed by that order, and on that particular point also your Lordship would be glad to receive our opinion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the view taken of Sir H. Ord's proceedings generally, as expressed in the letter to the Colonial Office of the 9th instant, is just.

The words of the prohibitory order are "arms, ammunition, gunpowder, military or naval stores." We are of opinion these words must imply all articles which are required for keeping in efficiency a military or naval force, and that "provisions" consequently come under the order.

But in submitting our opinion on these two points to your Lordship, we have to express our great doubts whether the practice of issuing similar prohibitory orders should not be placed under some restriction.

In the instance of the present war between the Sultan of Acheen and the Dutch, the Governor of the Straits Settlements has issued an order which we believe could not have been properly issued by the Queen or the Imperial Government.

Possibly the prohibition may be rather in the nature of a warning than a positive restriction, of which latter the infraction is attended with penalties, and in this case the practice at home and in the Straits Settlements would be consistent.

If, however, the prohibition be absolute, the practice of the Straits Settlements should, in our opinion, be altered and brought into conformity with the practice of Her Majesty's Government at home.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 27.)

My Lord, Temple, September 27, 1873.

1873

a person named John Uren, who, according to Count Bylandt's statement, was born in England in 1845, but had with his parents resided in Holland since 1849.

The question raised has reference to military service, and the Netherlands Government request to be informed whether at a certain date Uren still retained his British nationality.

That in reply to your Lordship's application for further information on the subject, the Netherlands Chargé d'Affaires stated in his note of the 12th instant—

1. That Uren's parents are of English origin.
2. That British subjects are exempt from service in the Dutch militia.

That there does not appear to be any indication of either the parents or son having been naturalized in Holland; and therefore the only point to be decided would seem to be whether or not, under the conditions specified in Count Bylandt's note, Uren can still claim to be considered a British subject.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That John Uren, born in England of British parents, is still a British subject, notwithstanding his residence in Holland.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take the inclosed despatch from Mr. Vice-Consul Cohen, of Surinam, into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in remonstrating against the ruling of the local authorities in Surinam, who refused to admit the validity of marriages of British subjects solemnized by the British Vice-Consul in that Colony.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in remonstrating against the ruling of the local authorities in Surinam, who refuse to admit in that Colony the validity of marriages of British subjects solemnized by the British Vice-Consul, and not in accordance with the lex loci.

Temple, October 17, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us copy of a telegram received from Her Majesty's Consul at Batavia, stating that English steamers were being temporarily transferred under the Dutch flag, in order that they might be used as transports in the war with Acheen, and requesting instructions as to how he should act. Mr. Hammond further said he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature of the instructions which should be given to the Consul, and which should be sent without delay by telegraph.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the chartering of a British steamer, or the temporary transfer of a British steamer to the Dutch Government for the purpose of being used as a transport in the Acheen expedition, is a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and the use of the Dutch flag will be no protection or defence against proceedings under that Statute.

The Consul may therefore properly be instructed to take proceedings under the Foreign Enlistment Act in the cases to which he refers.

Temple, October 20, 1873.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th October instant, stating that, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the 10th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Board of Trade respecting the case of the "Florence" and "Kohinoor;" and in accordance with the suggestions therein contained, he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with a further opinion, as to the manner in and the extent to which the acting and permanent Vice-Consuls at Surinam exceeded their power.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that the previous papers connected with the case were inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have to report—

That, in our opinion, the acting and permanent Vice-Consuls at Surinam exceeded their power in exercising, or attempting to exercise, a criminal jurisdiction over the masters of the "Florence" and "Kohinoor," and in applying for the assistance of one of Her Majesty's ships to support them.

In reference to the inquiry in the Board of Trade letter, we think that Consular officers, in the face of such circumstances as those at Surinam, should apply immediately for the direct action of the law of the place, and not, in the absence of any Convention to that effect, ask the assistance of the foreign Executive to enforce their orders or sentences.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the particular provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, under which Her Majesty's Consul at Batavia should be instructed to take proceedings, the form of those proceedings, and the Court in which they should be taken.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the provisions of the 8th section, sub-section 4, of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, 33 & 34 Vict., cap. 90, are the provisions under which Her Majesty's Consul at Batavia should be instructed to take proceedings.

A double penalty is imposed by the same Statute: (1) a personal penalty of fine and imprisonment, and the other the forfeiture of the ship to Her Majesty (section 8).

In respect to the personal penalty, proceedings against the offender should be by indictment in the Court which, having criminal jurisdiction, is nearest to the place where the offence is committed (section 20).

The forfeiture of the ship can only be procured through the Court of Admiralty (section 20).

No. 160.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 19.)

My Lord, Temple, November 18, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 3rd November instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acknowledge the receipt of our letter of the 24th ultimo, expressing our opinion as to the nature of the instructions which should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Batavia as to the course which he should pursue respecting the employment of British vessels as transports for the use of the Dutch forces in their operations against Acheen, and that he was to observe that as the question raised is important, and the course now pursued may be quoted as a precedent in the future, your Lordship was anxious that the instructions should be clear and precise, and therefore wished our further opinion upon certain points which seem at present obscure.

That the Consul reported that British steamers were being chartered by the Dutch Government, with temporary transfer of the Dutch flag, in order that they might be used as transports, and requested instructions as to the course which he should take. That we advised your Lordship in our letter of the 17th ultimo that the chartering or temporary transfer of British vessels in the manner and for the object mentioned by the Consul would be a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and you recommended that he should be instructed to take proceedings under that Act. That in our subsequent letter of the 24th ultimo we pointed out that the proceedings should be taken by him under section 8 and sub-section 4 of the Act; that we showed that the offenders incurred the double penalty, first, of personal fine and imprisonment, secondly, of forfeiture of their ships to Her Majesty, and we added that, in respect to the personal penalty, proceedings should be by indictment in the Court which, having criminal jurisdiction, should be nearest to the place where the offence was committed, whereas the forfeiture of the ship could only be procured through the Court of Admiralty.

That in the endeavour to frame instructions in accordance with our recommendation, the following difficulties were encountered, upon the mode of obviating which our opinion was requested:—

That the first paragraph of section 8 of the Foreign Enlistment Act appears to show that the section itself, and consequently the sub-sections, refer only to acts committed within Her Majesty's dominions; that in what terms, then, should the Consul be instructed to apply it to transactions taking place in Dutch ports?

And how could sub-section 4 be applied except to the case of owners who despatched a vessel from England with the intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe, that it would be employed in the military or naval service of Holland, and who in that case would be open to prosecution in England?

That in case of those points being cleared up, and of the Consul being instructed to take proceedings under the Act, how could he follow the offending ship, whose destination would possibly not be an English port?

That the nearest British Courts to the place at which the offence would be committed would in this case be Singapore; in what mode, then, should the Consul take proceedings in the ordinary Courts and Courts of Admiralty at that place? Would those Courts have jurisdiction under the Act to deal with an offence committed in Dutch waters? Or, supposing that the offending vessel should not enter Singapore, should the Consul endeavour to follow her and institute proceedings against her in any other British port at which she might touch, possessing the requisite Courts?

That your Lordship feels that it would be unfair to throw upon the Consul the responsibility of interpreting, under a general instruction, points involving no ordinary difficulties, and that you would therefore be glad if we would enable you to answer by anticipation questions which he might raise upon doubts in his mind as to the proper solution of the points above mooted.

Lord Enfield was pleased to inclose our former Reports, a copy of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and the telegram from the Consul upon which the question was originally raised.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That no power is by the Act given to Consuls by virtue of which they can take proceedings in any Court against either persons or ships offending.

All, therefore, which the Consul at Batavia or elsewhere can be instructed to do is to communicate or represent to the authorities empowered to act against persons and ships offending information upon which they may take legal proceedings against either or both the offenders (section 24).

In the case of the ships offending, the representation should be made to the Secretary of State, or chief executive authority, under section 26, or to the officers authorized to seize offending ships (section 21).

And all proceedings against the ship require the sanction of the Secretary of State or executive authority, and must be had in the Court of Admiralty (section 19) as that Court is described in the interpretation clause, section 30.

The persons offending, whether principals or accessories (section 12), should be proceeded against if possible for the purpose of convenience in the nearest Court having jurisdiction over the offence. The Act, however, says any Court having jurisdiction over the offence (section 20), and sections 16, 17, and 18 provide for the legal procedure, and give power to remove offenders for trial, where such removal may be conducive to the ends of justice.

With respect to the offences, we would state that the Reports which we have made to your Lordship in this matter were drawn on the supposition that the ships in question had been chartered or engaged within Her Majesty's dominions, and were at Batavia for the purpose of carrying out such charter party or engagements.

In that case the offence and consequent punishment would come within section 8 of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

And sub-section 4 might be applied to the case of owners who dispatched a vessel from any part of Her Majesty's dominions, and not from England alone, with the intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that she would be employed in the naval or military service of Holland, and the owners might be brought to trial either in the place in which the offence was wholly or partly committed, or in any place within Her Majesty's dominions in which the offender might be.

There is, however, a class of offenders which are subject to punishment though committed wholly without Her Majesty's dominions.

For instance, the accepting or agreeing to accept an engagement in the naval service of a foreign Power; and we are of opinion that the engagement made in Batavia to serve on board a British ship there chartered as a transport by the Dutch Government would be an offence against this section of the Act.

The powers of the Consul being thus limited to a representation of the facts, we are of opinion that he can only be instructed to report to the nearest and most convenient executive or local authorities the facts which lead him to believe that there has been an offence committed under the Foreign Enlistment Act, and he should give the fullest details of the circumstances which he can.

Supposing an offence to have been committed, we are of opinion that the offender, whether ship, in the Admiralty Court, or person, in the Court having jurisdiction, should be proceeded against at the first place she or they may reach in Her Majesty's dominions after the offence is known to have been committed.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying despatch, and its inclosures, from the Acting British Consul-General at Bogotá, upon the subject of a complaint brought against the Colombian Government by two British subjects, Messrs. Dudley and Davoren, sleeping partners in the firm of Thorschmidt and Co., a commercial association established at Bogotá in 1864, under the management of Mr. Hugo Thorschmidt, a German, and wound up in 1869.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the inclosed papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Mr. O'Leary relative to the case of Messrs. Dudley and Davoren.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. O'Leary has most excusably been misled by Messrs. Dudley and Davoren, and so far as the proceedings relating to the property are concerned, missed his way.

Mr. O'Leary may now be instructed to put himself in communication with the Representative of the German Government in Colombia, submit all the documents and transactions of the Company, Thorschmidt and Co., to that gentleman, and concur with him in joint action against the Colombian Government in order to defeat the evasions of the latter Government, who, taking advantage of the technical difficulties arising out of the legal incidents of the partnership and the pecuniary interests of Mr. Thorschmidt and Messrs. Dudley and Davoren, are playing off the one against the other.

Your Lordship will best judge whether any application should be made to the Representative of the German Empire in this country, but if there be no objection to that course being adopted, and instructions to Mr. O'Leary and the German Representative in Colombia to instantly press the case upon the Colombian Government would be sent out at the same time, or farther evasion would become impossible.

Mr. Thorschmidt would probably not refuse, or might be compelled to join in the application.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd August last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 2nd July last, relative to the complaint of Messrs. Dudley and Davoren against the Government of Colombia, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from the Acting British Consul-General at Bogotá,* from which it appeared that Mr. Davoren had been given possession of the estate which he claimed.

That Mr. O'Leary's previous despatches upon the subject were inclosed therewith, together with a correspondence with Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin, which had taken place since the date of our above-mentioned Report.* Mr. Hammond further stated that he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should now be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as a mere matter of abstract right, Messrs. Dudley and Davoren are entitled to damages.

But we are of opinion that your Lordship, accepting the reasons given by Mr. O'Leary, may in this case proceed no further, and with advantage to British interests generally, and without serious injury to Messrs. Dudley and Davoren, instruct Mr. O'Leary to express to the Colombian Government the satisfaction with which Her Majesty's Government has heard that justice has at length been extended to those British subjects, and the hope that for the future the local authorities will not be allowed to pervert or interfere with the due administration of justice.

In obedience to your Lordships commands we have the honour to report—

That in the absence of proof or even suggestion that the judicial proceedings either in the Court below or in the Court of Appeal were unfairly conducted, or the decision contrary to the evidence adduced, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government will not be justified in pressing for indemnification to the sufferers by the loss of the specie.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the state of affairs at Fiji, and the conduct of the Fijian de facto Government in reference to British interests as described by Mr. Consul March, have reached a point at which, for the protection of British interests, your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Consul to claim the assistance of a man-of-war, and to obtain redress by the threat, and, if necessary, by the use of force.

That he was to inclose a letter from the Board of Trade, stating the views of that Department on the subject; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the proceedings of the Fijian authorities in that matter, and as to the steps, if any, which it might be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the conduct of the authorities at Fiji in respect to the seizure of the "Volunteer" and the treatment of Mr. Blair was opposed to the rules which are received by, and govern, civilized nations.

Her Majesty's Government has admitted the existence of a de facto Government in Fiji, and the actual presence of Mr. March as Her Majesty's Consul in Fiji is an acknowledgment of that de facto Government.

We are of opinion, subject to your Lordship's consideration, that the time has now come in which strong measures must be resorted to at Fiji, and that full redress should be demanded of the Fijian authorities for the seizure of the "Volunteer" and the treatment of Mr. Blair, and that demand supported at the time, and on the spot, by a force sufficient to compel the satisfaction and redress if refused.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying copy of instructions which the Lords of the Admiralty propose to issue to the commanding officers of Her Majesty's ships employed in the suppression of the Slave Trade among the islands in the South Pacific Ocean; and to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion whether those instructions were right and proper, and such as might be approved by your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the instructions (leaving out the pencilled suggestion in No. 11) are, in our opinion, such that your Lordship may approve of them.

No. 168.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received March 22.)

My Lord, Temple, March 20, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 14th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the two accompanying letters from the Admiralty, referring for consideration some embarrassing questions which it was suggested might occur to naval officers engaged in the suppression of the kidnapping trade; and he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion whether it would be advisable to make any modifications, and, if so, what changes should be introduced in the proposed instructions for the guidance of naval officers employed in the suppression of kidnapping, with the view to meet the difficulties pointed out in the inclosed letters.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the instructions are framed with reference to "British subjects" and "British vessels," and upon the principle that neither "British subjects" nor "British vessels" lose their nationality or their responsibility to Britsh law by assuming to be Fijian subjects, or carrying the Fijian flag.

That, in our opinion, the Act passed by the Fiji Legislative Assembly of the 14th December, 1871, will not relieve British subjects from any liability which they may be under by British law.

And consequently—

1. That any officer commanding one of Her Majesty's ships who meets a vessel on the high seas under the Fiji flag carrying native labourers without a licence, or with a Fiji license only—

(a.) Will, if, on his boarding her, the owners and crew appear to be foreigners or Fijies, immediately quit her. (See Instruction No. 26.)

(b.) Where the owners appear to be foreigners or Fijis, but some of the crew appear to be British subjects, and the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting such British subject or subjects to have committed any offence enumerated in the 9th or 10th sections of the Kidnapping Act, or any other felony described in Instruction 82, he may, with the consent of the person commanding the vessel, but not by force, arrest such British subject or subjects.

(c.) Where the owners and crew appear to be British subjects, the ship and crew may be detained.

2. By Instruction 9, territorial waters are said to be the waters of any duly recognized State. And by Instruction 8, the powers to be exercised are over British vessels only.

Therefore—

(a.) In the first two cases, where the vessel in Fiji waters is under Fiji colours, and the owners are foreigners or Fijis, the naval officer will not interfere.

(b.) Where the vessel in Fiji waters is under British colours, or is reasonably suspected of being a British vessel (see Instruction 4), the naval officer will apply for permission of the local authorities to detain, and will detain her.

We are of opinion, in answering this second branch or head of questions from the Admiralty, that Fiji is a duly recognized State within the meaning of that expression in the Instructions.

3. The naval officer is bound to protect British subjects resident at Fiji when requested to do so by Her Majesty's Consul, or if the case requires his immediate intervention he must do so on his own responsibility. And he must be careful not to offer his protection to any British subject who has committed wrongs in Fiji, unless the conduct of the authorities or people in Fiji with respect to the treatment of the British subject be so excessive or violent that the intervention of force be absolutely necessary for the sake and in the interests of humanity and ordinary justice.

In the state of things now existing in and in the neighbourhood of Fiji, it seems to us obvious that very much must be left to the discretion of the naval officers who are employed, and that no set of instructions can be drawn which will meet every case.

We have answered the questions put by the Admiralty to Mr. Hammond. The points raised in these questions, no doubt, will call for the exercise of great discretion and forbearance on some occasions, and for as much discretion and prompt and vigorous action on other occasions from naval officers; but we are not able to make any suggestion to your Lordship showing that it would be advisable to introduce any changes or make any modification in the Instructions.

Temple, April 22, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th April instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports, as noted in the margin,* upon questions relating to the liability of British subjects claiming Fijian nationality to British jurisdiction, both within and beyond the limits of the Fijian State, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter, and its inclosures, from the Colonial Office,† and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and report to your Lordship whether there is anything stated in the letter addressed to your Lordship by the Fijian Attorney-General which is inclosed in the Colonial Office letter to alter the opinions already expressed by us on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing stated in the letter of the Fijian Attorney-General which induces us to alter the opinion which we have already expressed upon the law connected with and bearing upon the state of things in Fiji.

No. 170.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received May 6.)

Temple, May 6, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that, in our Report of the 10th March, we stated that "Her Majesty's Government has admitted the existance of a de facto Government in Fiji, and the actual presence of Mr. March as Her Majesty's Consul in Fiji is an acknowledgment of that de facto Government."

Viscount Enfield also stated that your Lordship had caused a memorandum to be prepared showing the practice observed by this country and by the United States in cases of the withdrawal of diplomatic relations, and other instances in which Consuls have continued to reside at their posts, without any recognition of the persons there claiming authority as a Government being thereby accorded; and that he was to request that we would take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any further observations which we might have to offer upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the position of Mr. Consul March at Fiji is quite anomalous. In the memorandum prepared in the Foreign Office, and inclosed in Lord Enfield's letter, it is stated that Mr. March has received no exequatur from the Government of Fiji.

We are not inclined to think that this is of much importance in considering the effect of the relations between Mr. March and that Government.

Our opinion, to which we adhere, that the actual presence of Mr. March as Her Majesty's Consul at Fiji was an acknowledgment of that de facto Government, was formed on the ground that Mr. March had for a considerable time carried on official intercourse with members of the de facto Fijian Government, and that his authority so to act had not been repudiated by Her Majesty's Government, but, on the contrary, Mr. March had been supported by Her Majesty's Government.

We entirely agree with the observations in the memorandum generally; but, as your Lordship will have seen, we are of opinion that none of the cases cited by Mr. Hertslet are really in point, and whatever may have been the nature and terms of Mr. Consul March's original appointment at Fiji, his official acts subsequently have gone far to invest him with a political as well as a commercial character.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received June 30.)

Temple, June 27, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosures, from the Admiralty, relative to the steps taken by Captain Chapman, of Her Majesty's ship "Dido," towards preventing a collision between certain planters and the de facto Government of Fiji; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on Captain Chapman's proceedings.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the circumstances in which Captain Chapman, of Her Majesty's ship "Dido" found himself, and his object in preventing bloodshed, make it difficult to blame the conduct of that officer. But we are of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly approve of Captain Chapman's conduct, and that the Lords of the Admiralty should be informed that, in your Lordship's opinion, Her Majesty's officers should be instructed not to interfere except for the protection of British interests.

We submit to your Lordship's consideration, in support of the view which we take of the conduct of Captain Chapman, and the consequences to which similar conduct on the part of a British officer might lead in the present state of affairs in Spain or in Cuba, and indeed in any country where there was an armed insurrection against a de facto Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Layard, who has been recently appointed Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands; and that he was to request us to favour your Lordship with any suggestions which we might have to offer in regard to the instructions which it might be proper to give to Mr. Layard upon the points raised in his letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to conduct himself in his office of Consul in the Fiji Islands as he would do in a country of which Her Majesty's Government had recognized the de facto Government.

That his duties will be to protect all British interests and British subjects, requesting where the need may occur the assistance of any of Her Majesty's ships for the protection of such persons and interests.

That he should keep himself entirely aloof from all political disputes and matters of government, and in no way interfere with the persons constituting the Government, whether those persons be British subjects or not.

And that so far as concerns vessels sailing under the British flag, or which ought by law to sail under the British flag, he should act exactly as he would do if he were a British Consul in any other foreign port.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 25th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in approving the Treaty* which had been recently entered into between Captain Simpson, of Her Majesty's ship "Blanche," and certain Chiefs of the Rubiana Islands, for the execution of another native Chief who had destroyed the English schooner "Marian Rennie" and murdered her crew.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No. 174.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 19.)

Temple, September 19, 1873.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th September instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying draft of an instruction which your Lordship proposed to address to Mr. Layard, Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we consider that these instructions may properly be given to Mr. Layard.

Mr. Hammond further stated that a letter from the Colonial Office, containing Lord Kimberley's approval of the draft instructions, subject to alteration as therein specified, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the draft instructions cannot properly be given to Mr. Layard, since, if he carried them out, Her Majesty's Government would find it difficult to justify some acts which Mr. Layard might do in exact compliance with the instructions. But we submit to your Lordship's consideration that the draft instructions, with the alterations which we take the liberty of suggesting, might properly be given to Mr. Layard.

The paragraphs in pp. 4, 5, and 6, beginning "Should it come to," and ending "these natives to their homes," may be read as follows:—

"Should it come to your knowledge that British subjects are engaged in this traffic, you will make known the fact to the nearest British naval authority, and furnish them with all the information which you may be able to obtain, in order that they may watch for and apprehend on the high seas, or outside Fijian and other territorial waters and jurisdiction, the guilty parties, and send them to the nearest British Colony for trial.

"You will request the Fijian authorities, using your best endeavours that the request may be effective, to make over to you or to the commander of the nearest British ship, any British subjects whom you have good and sufficient grounds for believing to have rendered themselves amenable to the provisions of the recent Kidnapping Act.

"In making this request you will, if necessary, communicate to the Fijian authorities the information upon which you ground the request; and you will be careful to avoid the use of irritating or threatening language, and abstain altogether from the use of forcible means to arrest any British subject within Fijian territory.

In every case in which it may come to your knowledge that kidnapped natives have been brought within Fijian jurisdiction by British subjects, you will in the same manner, and by using the same means as above pointed out for obtaining the surrender of British subjects, request the Fijian authorities to deliver such natives over to you, in order that they may be restored to their homes.

"And if required by the Fijian authorities, you will give those authorities an acknowledgment in writing of the surrender to you of such natives, and some guarantee that they shall be restored to their homes."

In paragraph on p. 7 beginning "You will clearly understand," the words "whether he may have assumed Fijian nationality or not" may be omitted, and the word "acknowledged" in the same paragraph in p. 8.

We concur in the propriety of making the alterations suggested by Lord Kimberley at the end of the draft instructions.

No. 175.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received August 16.)

Temple, August 16, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, and a translation of a letter from the Paraguayan Minister at this Court,* relative to certain documents found among the papers of a Frenchman, M. Berchon des Essarts, who died at Asuncion, in Paraguay, on the 26th June, 1872, and that we would see that those documents were claimed by Mrs. Eliza Lynch, an Irish lady, who, after marrying a French subject, became the mistress of the late President Lopez. That the Brazilian and Paraguayan Governments, however, objected to the documents being handed over to Mrs. Lynch, on the ground that they are of a political nature.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to say that he was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to the documents in dispute, and was further pleased to say that Mrs. Lynch had already been engaged in legal proceedings with the Government of Paraguay and with a Dr. Stewart respecting the property left by the late President Lopez.

We were also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Hammond, dated the 9th of August instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 8th August instant, relative to certain papers found among the property of the late M. Berchon des Essarts, which were said to belong to Mrs. Lynch, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a further despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a note which he had received from the Brazilian Chargé d'Affaires, and in which the latter requested that the papers in question might not be handed over to Mrs. Lynch until he had received instructions from his Government on the subject; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, together with those already forwarded to us, and would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That it seems clear that the documents in question have been handed over by the French Government in ignorance of the fact of the marriage of Mrs. Lynch to a Frenchman, and under the mistaken belief that she is a British subject. We think the proper course is to inform the Duc de Broglie of the true state of the case, and to return the documents to him.

Temple, February 18, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he transmitted to us a letter from Messrs. Finch, Jennings, and Finch, the solicitors employed by the executors of the late Mr. Alison, Her Majesty's Minister in Persia, requesting that the notice which accompanied their letter might be inserted in the "Iran" newspaper at Tehran by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires. The object of that notice was to ascertain if there were any creditors claiming payment from the executors.

That your Lordship had, however, some doubt as to the propriety of acceding to that request, for whilst living Mr. Alison was privileged in Persia as Her Majesty's Minister against molestation from creditors, and the appearance of such a notice in the Persian papers might imply an admission to the contrary.

That whilst seeking our opinion on that point your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we considered that Persian creditors might take action in England against the executors of Mr. Alison when dead, which they could not take against him in Persia when alive.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as to the insertion of the advertisement in the Persian papers we concur in the doubt expressed by your Lordship, which appears to us to be well founded. As to the question whether we consider that Persian creditors can take action in England against the executors of Mr. Alison which they could not take against Mr. Alison himself in Persia, we have to reply that we think they can.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers respecting the estate of the late Mr. H. V. Walton, deceased, in Persia, and the claim put forward by his executors for substantial redress on account of an alleged violation of the estate, which was under the protection of the British Legation; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Legation could take any, and, if so, what steps in the matter.

That there is no Order in Council conferring jurisdiction in Persia; and whatever jurisdiction is exercised derives solely from the favoured-nation clause in the Treaty with Persia, which enabled us to claim that right as conceded to Russia by their Treaty of February $\frac{10}{22}$, 1828.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Legation cannot take any steps in the matter of Mr. H. V. Walton's estate.

The estate was never under the control of or intrusted in any way to Her Majesty's Legation, but passed into the hands of the telegraph officials with the knowledge and consent, and by the direction of a brother of the deceased, at Kurrachee.

1873

With the exception of 961*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*, the proceeds of the sale, and the value of articles unsold, are in the hands of the Committee of Adjustment so called, and Mr. Walton's executors must, if they think fit, proceed against the members of the Committee.

As to the 961*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*, the claim is against a department of the Government entirely distinct from the Foreign Office, and the executors should apply to that Department.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 16th October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a telegram from Her Majesty's Minister at Tehran, reporting that the ex-Grand Vizier had appealed to him for British protection, being in fear of his life.

That Mr. Thomson had been instructed by telegraph to decline to accord the protection thus requested unless he received further instructions from the Foreign Office; but your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the bearing of Article XII of the Treaty of the 4th March, 1857, between Great Britain and Persia, in this case. That for facility of reference, Lord Tenterden was further pleased to say that he was to inclose a copy of the Treaty above quoted, together with a memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office, and he was to refer us to a Report furnished by the Queen's Advocate on the 21st April, 1858, on the question of the protection of Persian subjects. We were also favoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated 17th October, 1873, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying (further) paper on the subject of the protection of Persian subjects in Persia, and requesting that it might be considered with the papers already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the British Government cannot protect Persian subjects unless they are actually in the employment of the British Mission, or of the Consular officers named in Article XII* of the Treaty of the 4th March, 1857.

My Lord,

That it appeared from Mr. Jerningham's despatch that he had reserved the claim put forward by How to compensation, but that, in consequence of his representations, the Peruvian Government had issued a Decree exempting smiths, carpenters, and caulkers from naval matriculation.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take Mr. Jerningham's despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any remarks we might have to make thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the inconvenience and possibly hardship caused to Mr. How by his being detained on board the ship, where he refused to work, and was subjected to no punishment for his refusal, are not such as would reasonably justify Her Majesty's Government in insisting upon any compensation being made by the Peruvian Government to Mr. How, and the more so, because the Peruvian Government appears to have at once taken adequate measures to prevent the recurrence of a case similar to that of which Mr. How complains.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin* relative to the creation by the Peruvian Government of a monopoly in the sale of nitrate of soda, and of a claim advanced against that Government by an English firm on account of losses alleged to have been sustained by them through the working of the monopoly in question, and he was to request that we would take the accompanying correspondence into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Lima on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the only matter of law arising in this question is the right of the Peruvian Government to regulate the manufacture and export of produce within and from Peruvian territory, and we are of opinion that the Peruvian Government have the right to make such regulations, and that manufacturers settling for the purpose of trade and manufacture in Peru must be subject to the laws of Peru, whether they be natives or foreigners. We are of opinion, therefore, that the English firm have no claim to compensation.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the India Office, inclosing a printed memorandum, the first part of which, omitting a passage marked at page 10, it was proposed to communicate to the Portuguese Government through the Minister at this Court, with regard to the privileges hitherto enjoyed by the Portuguese factory at Surat.

That the previous correspondence respecting the matter was likewise inclosed; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to state to us that before your Lordship addressed a communication on the subject to the Portuguese Government your Lordship would be glad to receive, at our early convenience, any suggestions which we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that a communication may be properly made to the Portuguese Government to the effect suggested in the letter from the India Office. We consider that the previous privileges could always have been withdrawn at the pleasure of the Government which granted them, and of the successor of that Government being the present Government of India, and that sufficient reasons exist in the gross and wanton abuse of the existing privileges for withdrawing them.

Temple, February 1, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th instant stating that, with reference to his letter of the 15th instant he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a translation of a note from the Portuguese Minister at this Court in continuation of that addressed by him (the Minister) to Her Majesty's Government on the 23rd October last respecting the question of the commercial privileges hitherto enjoyed by the Portuguese at Surat; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the same into consideration (with previous papers), and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we had the honour yesterday to report to your Lordship our opinion on the question of the commercial privileges of the Portuguese factory at Surat.

The same reasons which induced us to be of opinion that the privileges on the import trade enjoyed by the Portuguese at Surat were revocable and should now be forfeited apply, though possibly in a modified degree, to the privileges on the export trade. And we are of opinion that these latter privileges should also be put an end to.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a note, which your Lordship had received from the Portuguese Minister at this Court, respecting a Portuguese sailor named Antonio Martino, who is detained in Bristol prison as a necessary witness in the case of a man about to be tried for murder.

That that note was referred to the Home Office, and the inclosed Report upon the case had been returned by Mr. Secretary Bruce.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was now to request us to take the papers into consideration, and inform your Lordship whether any further steps could properly be taken for the liberation of Martino, and what answer should be returned to the Portuguese Minister.

1873

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship cannot take any steps for the liberation of Martino, and that the application of the Portuguese Minister must be answered to that effect.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 16.)

My Lord, Temple, September 16, 1873.

That we would observe that the grievance of the merchants consisted of two distinct causes of complaint: first, the obligation of making oath in confirmation of goods imported; and, secondly, that the Customs officers had the option of taking such goods at the invoice value, with only an additional sum of 5 per cent. instead of the additional sum of 10 per cent. authorized by the XIIth Article of the Treaty of 1842 between Great Britain and Portugal.

And that he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in regard to the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the Article XII of the Treaty of 1842 is free from all doubt upon the two points referred to in Mr. Hammond's letter, and the obligation of an oath instead of or in addition to a declaration cannot be imposed upon the British importer, nor can the Custom-house officers be at liberty to take the goods at 5 per cent. instead of 10 per cent. in the event of their being of opinion that the declared value is insufficient.

The observations made by Mr. Doria in his letter of the 15th August, 1873, respecting the state of commercial relations between Portugal and Great Britain, seem to us of very great importance.

And we submit to the consideration of your Lordship that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon may properly be instructed that in bringing the matter to the consideration of the Portuguese Government he should say that so long as the Treaty of 1842 between the two countries subsists Her Majesty's Government cannot allow any of its provisions to be affected, either by the laws of Portugal or by Treaties between Portugal and other countries, to which Treaties Great Britain is no party.

But that Her Majesty's Government will not be unwilling to entertain, if the Portuguese Government should so desire, the question of a new Treaty.

My Lord, Temple, December 19, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a translation of a note from the Portuguese Minister at that Court, together with a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, relative to the liability of British subjects to taxation within the dominions of Portugal.

That Mr. Lister also inclosed a memorandum on the subject, which had been prepared at that Office, and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration in connection with the Law Officers' Reports of the 14th May, 1863, the 18th July, 1864, and the 13th January, 1868, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Portuguese Minister, and the instructions which should be furnished to Sir Charles Murray in regard to that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Portuguese Minister may, in our opinion, properly be answered that Her Majesty's Government does not agree with the interpretation which the Portuguese Government puts upon the Treaty of 1842.

Her Majesty's Government admits that it was the intention of the High Contracting Parties to equalize the taxation of foreigners with the natives in all cases not excepted.

But the "Mancio de decima industrial" was a tax from which, up to the time of the Treaty, British subjects resident in Portugal had been specially exempted.

This exemption was surrendered by the Treaty. British subjects thenceforth became subject to the tax, but a provision, as might have been expected, was introduced, fixing the "maximum of the tax at 20 per cent. on the rent of their houses, shops, and warehouses, which should serve as an invariable rule to the Tribunal of the Treasury whenever it shall have to decide on any appeal made by British subjects in the form disposed by the Ist Article of the Treaty."

In this respect, then, the equality was by the very precise words employed by the High Contracting words not to be observed, and the mode of imposition and maximum rate of the particular tax determined.

This tax has been replaced, it appears, by an "industrial tax," and it is therefore argued that the guarantees stipulated by section 2 of Article I of the Treaty, and the annexed note, have ceased and become obsolete.

We are not acquainted with the nature or manner of imposition, nor do we know how far the substitution of this tax for the former "mancio" or "decima industrial" is a contrivance by which the Treaty exemption was to be got rid of.

Assuming, however, that the imposition of the new tax was proper, we are of opinion that the change was entirely within the power of the Portuguese Government, and that British subjects, being equally taxed with Portuguese subjects under the new law, have no ground of complaint which Her Majesty's Government can support. And in this aspect of the case we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may answer the Portuguese Minister, and instruct Sir Charles Murray that if this tax has been properly substituted for the former tax, and is equally levied, Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further.

My Lord, Temple, January 8, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that with reference to our letter of the 17th ultimo, in which we stated that we were of opinion that Her Majesty's Government might bring before the German Government the circumstances of the claim of Messrs. Hirsch and Josephé, he was directed by your Lordship to remind us that the claimants, though naturalized as British subjects, were, as had been ascertained, natives of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and consequently by birth German subjects; and he was to inquire whether, in case it should be ascertained that they had not lost their German nationality, we would be still of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would be justified in supporting their claim.

1873

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if Messrs. Hirsch and Co. still retain their German nationality, we are of opinion that they cannot avail themselves of British naturalization, and thereby claim your Lordship's interference in their behalf with the Government of Germany.

Temple, February 1, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the translation of a note from the German Ambassador at this Court, inclosing drafts in English and German of a Convention which his Excellency's Government was desirous to conclude with that of Her Majesty, having for its object the mutual recognition of joint stock companies.

Lord Tenterden also inclosed a further draft which had been prepared by your Lordship's directions, and which your Lordship thought might be advantageously proposed to the German Ambassador to be substituted for that submitted by his Excellency, as more in accordance with the form usually observed in such documents, it being founded upon the declaration (copy inclosed) exchanged between the British and Italian Governments on the 26th November, 1867.

That we would observe that the German Ambassador proposed the insertion of a paragraph not included in the Declaration made with the Italian Government, but was willing that the reservation contained in it should be recorded in a separate protocol or exchange of notes, if preferred.

And that he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon; and particularly with our opinion upon the reservation proposed by the German Ambassador, and the terms and manner in which, if in our judgment it could properly be adopted, that reservation should be recorded.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the draft Declaration, as framed by Her Majesty's Government, is preferable to that submitted by the German Ambassador; but we see no objection to the additional paragraph proposed by Count Bernstorff if it is inserted in the terms and in the place indicated on the third page of the draft Declaration of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 24th ultimo regarding the complaint made by the Rev. Mr. Harrison of the ill-treatment which he and his friend Mr. George received at the hands of the Aix-la-Chapelle police, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, inclosing Mr. George's statement of the occurrence.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to transmit, with the former papers, a copy of the instructions that were sent to the Ambassador in accordance with our Report, and to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the case, and as to the course that Her Majesty's Ambassador ought to pursue.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the conduct of the police at Aix, as described by Mr. George, and of his description we see no reason to doubt the main accuracy, was in the first instance so violent, and so without excuse subsequently, that in our opinion Her Majesty's Minister at Berlin may properly be instructed to bring the two statements of Mr. Harrison and Mr. George to the attention of the German Government, with the object of securing the examination of those gentlemen at the official inquiry on the conduct of the police, and such apology or compensation, if any, as the case may require, and the punishment of the police if the result should show that the two British subjects were ill-used.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the British Chaplain at Bonn, stating the circumstances under which he (the Chaplain) asked for a certificate from the British Embassy at Berlin of the legality of a marriage between an English lady and an English officer in the German service, both parties being resident in Germany.

That the grounds upon which the certificate had been refused by the British Embassy were stated in the letter; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the request could or could not be complied with.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1873

That, in our opinion, the request of Mr. Phelps cannot be complied with.

The validity of the marriage in Germany of an English woman with a subject of Germany, which the intended husband is by the law of Germany, must depend upon the law there in force, and Her Majesty's Ambassador should not be called upon to give a certificate of an opinion upon the law of the country in which he may be, for the use of individuals.

My Lord, Temple, July 3, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 18th

Earl Granville to Lord Odo Russell.

(No. 158.)

My Lord, Foreign Office, April 22, 1873.

I HAVE received your Excellency's despatch No. 118 of the 4th ultimo, asking, with reference to the case of Mr. Adalbert Kruge, "under what circumstances the certificate of a foreigner naturalized in a British Colony, and particularly in the Colony of Victoria, becomes void."

I have to state to your Excellency in reply, that under the instructions given to the Governors of Colonies (which you will find at p. 14 of the Appendix to the Report of the Naturalization Commission) a passport issued by a Governor of a Colony to a naturalized British subject would undoubtedly become void after the holder had resided abroad for more than twelve months, but his certificate would be equally good on his return to the Colony, however long the bearer may have been absent.

In this respect the colonial certificates of naturalization differ from the English certificates under the Act of 1844, the latter becoming absolutely cancelled after six months' residence abroad without leave.

I have to add that the general rule to be observed in all cases of this nature, is that British naturalization does not entitle the person naturalized to any protection, rights or privileges as a British subject within the country of his original nationality unless he has ceased to be a subject of that country according to the laws thereof, and in any application which he may make to the British Embassy, it rests with him to prove that this is the case, and also to show that if naturalized under the Act of 1844 his certificate has not lapsed.

I am, &c.
(Signed) GRANVILLE.

1873

April and 1st ultimo, relative to the complaints of Messrs. George and Harrison against the police of Aix-la-Chapelle, he was directed by your Lordship to forward to us further correspondence with Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, from which we would perceive that, in answer to the representations which were made on our advice, the Prussian Government had refused to reopen the official investigation into the conduct of the police, and stated that it was open to Messrs. George and Harrison to bring the matter under the examination of the Prussian Courts by means of a civil action against the officials concerned.

And that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether any further diplomatic action could properly be taken in the matter, or whether the parties should be left to take the legal remedy which seemed open to them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, no further diplomatic action can with propriety be taken in the matter, unless your Lordship considers the incident of sufficient importance to proceed to extreme lengths in the event of the German Government persisting in the refusal to reopen the matter.

Mr. George and Mr. Harrison, being left to take the legal remedy which seems open to them, should be informed of the answer in terms of the German Government, that they may be able to form some opinion of the result which they are likely to attain by any proceedings on their own behalf.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received August 5.)

Temple, August 4, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that the German Government had at various times applied to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for the repatriation of pauper or lunatic British subjects found in Germany; these applications had been refused, except in cases in which special reasons had been shown for assenting, on the ground that the British Government had no power to expatriate indigent or lunatic foreigners found in this country, and that consequently it was not in a position to enter into any arrangement for mutual repatriation.

The German Ambassador had recently inquired confidentially, communicating at the same time the memorandum inclosed with the papers, whether Her Majesty's Government would be disposed to conclude a Convention providing for the treatment of distressed subjects of one country in the territory of the other, based upon a Convention between Germany and Denmark, of which a translation was annexed. The Ambassador distinctly states that the starting-point of the proposed Convention would have to be an admission of the right of either party to expel the subjects of the other.

And that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could or should enter into negotiations for the conclusion of a Convention of this description, provided that there were no objections to it on the ground of expense or of policy.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government cannot, in our opinion, conclude or give effect to a Convention of the description referred to in the present state of the law.

Your Lordship will best judge whether it is expedient to enter into negotiations at present for the conclusion of such a Convention, and to obtain later the consent of Parliament, or whether an Act should be obtained in the first instance authorizing the Government to make such Conventions from time to time with foreign Governments.

We see no objections on the ground of expense or policy to the suggested Con-

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Admiralty, inclosing a telegram from the Junior Naval Officer at Gibraltar, from which it would appear that Her Majesty's ship "Swiftsure" and the German iron-clad "Frederick Carl" had seized two of the revolted Spanish ships, and were taking them to Carthagena with the intention of detaining them till further orders.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed copies of the previous letters to the Admiralty respecting the course to be pursued in regard to revolted ships.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to ask our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the instructions which should be given for the guidance of Her Majesty's naval forces at Carthagena or elsewhere in similar circumstances to those set forth in Commodore Phillimore's telegram.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 6th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour you with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the note from the German Ambassador, of which a translation was inclosed, requesting that the authorities of Heligoland may be instructed to administer an oath, under the decision of a German Tribunal, to a Dr. Zimmermann, who appeared to be co-defendant in a suit pending before the Tribunal.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship may inform the German Ambassador that the parties who desire to have the testimony of the witness taken at Heligoland should proceed before the local Court there, by themselves or their agent, to make an application to have the witness examined, and not through the agency of the Foreign Office. The proceedings are regulated by the 19 & 20 Vict., cap. 113, and your Lordship may point out that, in order to support the application, the certificate of the German Ambassador at this Court should be produced to the Court at Heligoland, and that that certificate should clearly state that a suit touching a civil or commercial matter is pending in a German Court having jurisdiction over it, and that such Court is desirous of obtaining the testimony sought (see 19 & 20 Vict., cap. 113, sec. 3).

We wish to add that under the Statute we have above referred to there is no power in the Court of Heligoland to enforce the attendance of the witness unless that Court be a Supreme Court.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received January 2, 1874.)

My Lord,
Temple, December 31, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would advise your Lordship as to the course which you should pursue respecting the application contained in the letter from a Mr. Griffiths.

Mr. Lister stated that it appeared that Mr. Griffiths and a man named Duggan bound their two sons by indenture to a performer in a circus named Alfred Gaillard, upon such terms that for seven years they were to receive nothing but clothing and what is called reasonable education, after which term for five years more they were to receive a small salary at a fixed rate of increase; the boys were bound to travel with their master to any part of the world. The original indentures were inclosed for our perusal.

Mr. Lister further stated that it appeared from the inclosed letter to Duggan from the British Chaplain at Aix-la-Chapelle that Gaillard has been recently performing with the boys at that place, where his ill-treatment of the boy Duggan had led to the interference of the police. A letter, also inclosed, addressed to Mr. Griffiths has informed the latter that his son is subjected to gross ill-usage. The interference of Her Majesty's Government is requested to procure the restoration of the boys to their parents, but as the latter had bound their sons by indentures, which, however unjustifiable they may be in their character, seem to have been formally executed, your Lordship, before giving any instructions in the matter, would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the steps which can properly be taken for the protection or restoration of the boys.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, this is scarcely a case in which your Lordship should officially interfere, but we see no reason why your Lordship should not advise Her Majesty's Consular Agent acting for any matters arising at Aix-la-Chapelle that he may take charge of the boy Duggan and send him home to this country. The consent of the father in writing to receive him should be obtained and sent to the Consul.

As to the boy Griffiths, we think that your Lordship can do no more than suggest to Her Majesty's Consular Agent that he should see the boy, and if it be found that he is subjected to serious ill-usage, the interference of the German police authorities should be sought. The directions of the local authorities as to how far the boy is to be removed from Gaillard's custody must be followed, but if by them given over to the Consul or Chaplain, we see no reason why he should not be also returned to his father.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received January 29.)

My Lord, Temple, January 27, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh forwarding an application from the British Vice-Consul at Moscow, asking for information as to the validity of marriages celebrated in the British chapel at Moscow by the Chaplain of the Russia Company.

That he (Lord Enfield) was to inclose the correspondence relating to the Riga marriages, which formed the subject of our Report of the 20th November, and to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the instructions which should be sent to Mr. Roberts on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, a marriage celebrated in the British chapel at Moscow between British subjects by the Chaplain of the Russia Company, being valid by lex loci, is a good marriage in law.

We are also of opinion that a marriage performed by the said Chaplain in the interior of Russia at a private house will be valid or not according to lex loci. In England such a marriage would be good if had under a special licence, and the law of Russia, which seems to consider marriages valid where they are performed with the religious rites and ceremonies of the faith of the parties, may consider the place indifferent if those rites are had. But we have not the information upon this point which might enable us satisfactorily to advise your Lordship how to instruct Mr. Roberts in answer to his second question.

Temple, October 9, 1873.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letter from Mr. Navarra, who is a native of Malta and is now employed as chief medical officer to the Persian troops in Azerbijan, giving an account of an attack and robbery committed upon him by Turkish brigands in Russian territory on the road between Tabreez and Tiflis, and to request that we would take that letter, together with the inclosed despatch from Sir H. Elliot on the case, into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to Mr. Navarra's right to demand compensation for his wrongs either from the Government of Turkey or that of Russia.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the robbery having happened on Russian territory, Mr. Navarra has no right at all to claim compensation from the Government of Turkey.

Mr. Navarra, who alleges himself to be a British subject, was as a medical officer in the military service of Persia at the time of the robbery, and we doubt whether he has a right in that state of things to demand the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in obtaining him compensation for his losses.

But the facts may, in our opinion, properly be brought before the Russian Government, and that Government be asked to consider favourably the losses which Mr. Navarra has suffered in Russian territory.

In all cases of doubt on the validity of a marriage the safest course is to have the marriage had strictly in accordance with the lex loci, in addition to any other rite or ceremony peculiar to the custom of the persons to be married. And this course is especially to be followed where the man and woman are not both British subjects.

Your Lordship might, therefore, in our opinion, instruct Mr. Roberts, in answer to his third question, that in cases of any doubt the marriage should, either before or after the marriage by an English Chaplain, be also had as if the parties were Russians.

Temple, August 1, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter, and its inclosures, from Mr. Donadato, a British subject, respecting a claim which he is desirous of bringing against the Russian Government; and to request that we would have the goodness to take these papers into consideration, and inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, it would be advisable for Her Majesty's Government to give Mr. Donadato their support.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the information which Mr. Donadato has forwarded to Her Majesty's Government is not sufficient to make it advisable, in our opinion, that Her Majesty's Government should give him support.

It seems that so far back as 1868 Mr. Donadato was in communication with the British Embassy at St. Petersburgh, and that the right was reserved to him of addressing a formal complaint to the Senate against the proceedings of the "Chambre Criminelle" of Kiew.

Mr. Donadato does not say whether he exercised that right, or with what result. His claim of 265,000*l.* seems to us extravagant, and is unsupported by evidence.

Mr. Donadato might, however, be properly told that if he can give further and satisfactory proof of the alleged injury which he has sustained, and of his failure to obtain redress from the Russian Government, and produce vouchers or other evidence of the amount of his losses, Her Majesty's Government will again consider his application.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence regarding a machine which is alleged to have been obtained from Messrs. Powis, James, Western, and Co., and shipped to Odessa under false pretences; and he (Lord Enfield) was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be given to Mr. Flavell's letter of the 17th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Flavell may properly be answered that on the receipt of the letter from Powis, James, Western, and Co. (a copy of which should be furnished to Messrs. Flavell), Her Majesty's Consul-General at Odessa was instructed to take such steps as the circumstances of the case might warrant.

That, if Messrs. Flavell desire, the Consul-General at Odessa shall be communicated with farther on the subject, but that at present your Lordship has not been informed of the reasons which induced the Consul-General to apply to the Customs authorities at Odessa.

My Lord, Temple, November 13, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying papers relating to the case of Mr. Marsden, a British subject, who was imprisoned by the Russian Government on a charge of having killed a Russian woman; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, as Mr. Marsden died in prison before his trial, your Lordship would be justified in instructing Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh to bring Mr. Marsden's case again before the Russian Government, with a view of obtaining some compensation for his widow and children.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we do not find, in the papers which have been sent to us, any grounds for suspecting that the death of Mr. Marsden was caused by his imprisonment, and we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified, by the fact that Mr. Marsden died in prison, in instructing Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh to bring the case again before the Russian Government.

But Lord A. Loftus may, we think, properly be instructed to make full inquiries into the case; that in the event of any misconduct being proved, or found capable of proof, against the Russian officials, in arresting Mr. Marsden in the first instance, or in keeping him under arrest, or in relation to his treatment whilst under arrest, the circumstances may be communicated by Lord A. Loftus to your Lordship, and the case, if necessary or desirable, be then brought to the attention of the Russian Government.

My Lord, Temple, February 15, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid respecting the claim of Mr. Archibald, a British subject at Amurrio, to be exempted from paying a tax levied upon him as proprietor of a house for the maintenance of public worship.

That he (Lord Enfield) was also to inclose a previous despatch from Mr. Layard, inclosing a copy and translation of the Law under which the tax in question was supposed to have been levied, and that he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Mr. Layard in that case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we see no reason why Mr. Archibald should be exempted from paying a tax levied upon him in respect of his house. We are therefore of opinion that Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to take no steps in the matter.

Majesty's Minister at Madrid, and to Her Majesty's Consul at Puerto Rico, to secure prompt justice to the unfortunate prisoners.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to bring the facts before the Spanish Government, and to urge in the strongest way the wrong which has, by the negligence of the Spanish authorities, been done to the prisoners, and demand their immediate release, and claim compensation for their long detention.

Her Majesty's Minister may also be instructed to ask for the punishment of the Spanish officials through whose negligence the injury has been suffered.

Her Majesty's Consul at Puerto Rico may be instructed to press upon the authorities there the necessity of immediately releasing the prisoners; at the same time he should be directed, whilst insisting upon the releases, to take no steps, and make no admissions which might interfere with the claim for compensation and demand for the punishment of the Spanish officials which Her Majesty's Minister may be instructed to make at Madrid upon the Spanish Government.

We presume Her Majesty's Consul at Puerto Rico has no doubt about the nationality of the prisoners.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches, with their inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, relative to the circumstances under which the British vessel "Saxon Maid" was detained at Portugalete while an investigation was conducted by the local authorities respecting the death of a seaman who had been accidentally killed on board that vessel.

That we would observe that there were two distinct issues raised in the inclosed papers:—

1. As to the claim for the detention of the "Saxon Maid" while the authorities at Portugalete inquired into the death of the seaman.

2. As to the rights under Treaty of Her Majesty's Consular officers in Spain, specifically in regard to similar cases of that description, and generally as to the title of Her Majesty's Consular officers under existing Treaties to be allowed all the rights of the Consuls of the most favoured nation which might, since the Treaties with England were entered into, have been accorded to other Powers.

That a memorandum, with its annexes, had been prepared at the Foreign Office on the subject (inclosed); and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with a separate Report upon each of the points above referred to.

In obedience to your Lordships commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, no claim can be made with effect for the detention of the "Saxon Maid."

The detention was placed on the ship during an inquiry into the cause of the death of a seaman on board that vessel, and whilst the vessel was in Spanish waters. The post-mortem examination may have been necessary, and the examination of the crew certainly was necessary, and without the crew the ship could not proceed.

The XXIIIrd Article of the French Consular Convention, paragraph 2, forbidding the visit and search of a functionary of justice on board a ship without the invited presence of the Consul or Vice-Consul, cannot, in our opinion, be referred to as applicable to British ships and Consuls by virtue of any provision in the Treaties between Great Britain and Spain.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Consuls, under existing Treaties with Spain, have not the rights of the Consuls of the most favoured nation, which rights have been accorded to other Powers since the Treaties with England were entered into, for the XXVIIIth Article of the Treaty of 1814 limits the power and authority of the Consul in the execution of his charge by saying that power and authority shall be the same as any other Consul hath formerly had in the dominions of the King of Spain, the terms being not prospective but retrospective.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying translation of a letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court, calling attention to an advertisement in the "Westminster Gazette," inviting subscriptions in aid of the Carlist insurrection in Spain; and he was to request us to take Señor Moret's letter into immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps that should be taken thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly point out to Señor Moret that the advertisement which he has brought under your notice is a request for gifts only of money for the support of the cause of Don Carlos, and that although any contract for this purpose would be illegal and unenforceable in the English Courts, yet there is nothing to make a mere gift of money by the subjects of this country illegal, or the persons giving it in any way punishable. We cannot admit the correctness of Señor Moret's position, that there is anything in the conduct of these persons which can in any way constitute a breach of international neutrality on the part of this country. The contrary we believe to be a well-recognized position of international law. Under these circumstances we cannot advise your Lordship to take any steps whatever in the matter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that, upon receipt of our Report of the 23rd July last, your Lordship addressed the instructions of which the drafts were therewith inclosed, to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid and Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, with reference to the proceedings of the Customs authorities at the port of Iloilo towards Messrs. Loney in respect of the vessel the "Priam," and the conduct of the British Vice-Consul at that port on the occasion in question; and Viscount Enfield stated that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, inclosing a copy of a note which he addressed to the Spanish Government respecting this case, to which no reply had yet been received.

Viscount Enfield also stated that he inclosed a despatch from the Acting British Consul at Manila, accompanying a copy of one from the British Vice-Consul at Iloilo, together with a Report thereupon by Mr. Consul Ricketts, who was then absent from his post on leave; and that he was to request that we would take the same into consideration, together with the previous papers in this case, and favour your Lordship with such further observations as we might have to offer thereupon, with especial reference to the explanations offered by the Vice-Consul at Iloilo in defence of his proceedings in regard to the case of the "Priam," and his attitude generally towards Messrs. Loney.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the explanation offered by the Vice-Consul at Iloilo in defence of his proceedings in regard to the case of the "Priam" is not satisfactory. He appears to have allowed every annoyance from the Customs and the utmost rigour of the law to be put in full force against that vessel without remonstrance on his own part, and without communication with Mr. Consul Ricketts. His conduct in reference to the "Priam" and his attitude towards Messrs. Loney are, in our opinion, to be attributed to the disputes between those gentlemen and himself, and were inconsistent with the fair and right discharge of his duty as Vice-Consul.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 30, 1873.

My Lord,

We are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 1st ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying translation of a further letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court on the subject of the Carlist subscriptions in this country; and to request that we would take it into consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we see any reason to alter the opinion expressed by us in our former Report.

Mr. Hammond also stated that a previous correspondence on this subject was inclosed for convenience of reference; and in a postscript to his letter that a memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office relative to subscriptions raised in England in support of civil wars abroad was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the letter now submitted to us from Señor Moret to your Lordship which leads us to desire in any manner to alter the opinion which we had the honour to express to your Lordship on the 1st March, 1873. Nor do we think that our opinion is in substantial conflict with any opinion given in writing or orally by our predecessors so far as the materials supplied by your Lordship enable us to judge. We do not for the moment enter into the question as to the law of conspiracy, but as to individuals giving money for the support of an individual or a cause in a foreign country, we think the law was stated with entire accuracy by Sir Henry Keating at pp. 8 and 9 of Mr. Green's memorandum. Lord Gifford and Lord Lyndhurst in 1823, though they were "inclined to say upon general principles" that subscriptions to one of two belligerents would be unlawful, carefully guard themselves, as reported in the "Times," by saying that there was no trace in our legal history of such a thing having been either prosecuted in fact, or even laid down to be unlawful in a legal text-book. Lord Westbury, in 1860, does indeed say in debate that "directly or indirectly to supply money in aid of the revolted subjects of any nation or power with whom we are in alliance is an offence at common law." But he goes on to point out that common law is founded on precedent and authority, and he states himself that he can find neither precedent in fact nor authority in writing in support of his proposition. For ourselves, we are unable to assent to it. Furnishing munitions of war to a belligerent is clearly no breach of English law; to furnish them at a cheap rate, or to give them, would, we think, be no breach of it; and we are unable to see how furnishing the means of purchasing them can stand on any different footing. The question of loans is too clear for argument, and the terms on which a loan is made, or the turning of a loan into a gift, can in principle make no difference. Lord Chief Justice Bovill, we observe, though using strong language does not go further in laying down the law than that such conduct as he describes "ought to be" held liable to punishment.

The dictum of Lord Wynford was in a civil case in which a contract arising out of such a loan was attempted to be enforced, and for any such purpose such a contract was quite truly and justly said to be unlawful.

We may also point out to your Lordship that the case brought before you by Señor Moret is not parallel in its circumstances to any which has been heretofore discussed. There is as yet no recognized Government in Spain, and the Carlist insurrection is a revolt so to call it existing at the time when these subscriptions were invited and paid, if they have been paid. This, however, is a point which it is entirely for your Lordship to consider whether to put before Señor Moret or not.

On the question of conspiracy (as to which point only Lord Cairns committed himself in 1860), we did not and do not mean to say that it would be impossible to frame an indictment against a number of persons for conspiring by such and such means to embroil the country in war. But now upon this point we are unaware of any precedent for such an indictment, and success in any such proceedings would be almost hopeless. This seems to be the conclusion at which Lord Gifford and Lord presumest arrived in 1823, and the Foreign Secretary of that day (Mr. Canning we Green, t) appears from the terms of his despatch to Sir C. Stnart, as quoted by Mr. Green, to have gone even further.

We have troubled your Lordship thus at length upon this subject because we supposed from the papers sent to us that your Lordship invited our remarks, and it is no doubt important that Her Majesty's Government should clearly understand the exact limits by which such advice as we are able to give them is bounded.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, asking what instructions he should give to Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz as to the liability of British subjects to serve as jurors in Spanish Courts of Law, and as to the right of British subjects to exemption from the payment of forced loans or contributions.

Mr. Hammond also stated that, with regard to the first point, he inclosed a previous despatch from Mr. Layard, reporting that a provisional law, establishing trial by jury, was to be put in force on the 15th January last.

That with regard to the second point, he was to inclose a memorandum drawn up at the Foreign Office relative to forced loans levied on British subjects in Spain.

Mr. Hammond also stated that he was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be addressed to Mr. Layard upon the two points raised therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the description of taxes coming under the names of "forced loans" is so vague that we are unable to say whether Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to remonstrate against their being levied on British subjects resident in Spain or not.

The subject matter, the object of and the mode of levying, as well as the authority for levying each tax, must be considered before any satisfactory opinion can be formed on the question whether British subjects may or may not claim exemption from such tax.

We are therefore of opinion that Mr. Layard cannot be instructed on the question of liability of British subjects and the payment of forced loans, further than that he should bring to your Lordship's notice each case of a tax from which he may have reason to think a British subject resident in Spain may claim exemption.

We do not know what the proposed law in Spain with respect to juries in criminal cases may be.

Clearly where the property, liberty, or life of a British subject are in question, great advantage might follow from the presence of Englishmen amongst the jury. And we do not think that there is any principle against the practice of summoning foreigners resident in a country as jurors; indeed, it was the practice to do so in England from very early times, and has only been recently discontinued.

Mr. Layard, upon this second point, may properly be instructed to forward the provisions of the proposed Criminal Code to your Lordship, that the provisions and objections, if they exist, may be carefully examined, and, if necessary, the objections brought to the notice of the Government of Spain.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th December last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, together with its inclosures, reporting that the Spanish Government had consented to remit a portion of the fine inflicted upon the "Erl King," on account of slight informalities in the manifest of that vessel when forced to put into Corunna through distress, but continued to justify the principle upon which that fine was levied.

That he (Lord Enfield) was to inclose a letter from the Board of Trade, together with previous papers on the subject; and stated that he was to request us to take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the farther instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Layard in regard to that case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Layard may be properly instructed to remonstrate in the strongest manner consistent with diplomatic usages against the conduct of the Spanish authorities in imposing the fine on the "Erl King" at all, and in now retaining the part of the fine which has gone into the hands of its officials instead of repaying the whole sum.

Mr. Layard should also be instructed to point out to the Spanish Government, in the way stated in his despatch No. 57, Commercial, dated 2nd April last, that the principle upon which the Spanish Government has acted is utterly inconsistent with the relations existing between the two countries and with the practice of civilized nations.

And he should insist upon the whole amount of the fines being repaid.

In the event of the Spanish Government refusing to give redress, your Lordship will judge whether any and what farther measures may be taken to enforce a compliance with a just demand, and a security for the protection of British and general maritime commerce in future.

Temple, May 26, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid respecting the arrest of Mr. Abel, a British subject and correspondent of the "New York Herald." That Mr. Abel, as would be seen by the correspondence, had been liberated, but demanded an apology from the Spanish Government. Mr. Hammond also stated that he was therefore to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Layard respecting the apology demanded by Mr. Abel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Layard cannot properly be instructed to ask the Spanish Government officially for an apology for the arrest and treatment of Mr. Abel by the Spanish General at Victoria.

It appear sthat Mr. Abel had been with the Carlists for some time, and had marched with them for twenty-four hours. That this band of Carlists was composed of 4,000 well-armed men, who should, as Mr. Abel says, have made a stand against the Government troops. That Mr. Abel was found by the soldiers in the streets, being accidentally shut out from his house by the closing of the door, and, being taken prisoner, was marched to Victoria, and there, after a time, during which he was on parole, thrown into prison.

Mr. Abel must, we consider, take the consequences of the situation and circumstances in which he was found; and the Spanish Government cannot be pressed to apologize for the conduct of one of its officers who has treated, however harshly, a gentleman found so closely connected with 4,000 armed insurgents.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch from the Governor of the Bermudas, asking for instructions as to the course he should pursue in the event of those islands being used as a base of operations by the Cuban insurgents; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take this despatch into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the Governor should, under the local Act of 1862, prohibit the export of any arms and ammunition that might be landed in the islands under suspicious circumstances.

And further, your Lordship especially wished to have our opinion as to the effect of such a prohibition on the arguments which were used by Her Majesty's Government in answer to the complaints made by the German Government in regard to the export of arms from this country to France during the Franco-German war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this despatch into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Governor of Bermuda may and should, under the local Act of 1862, prohibit the export of any arms and ammunition that may be landed in the island.

This prohibition, however, should be absolute, excepting, of course, arms and ammunition the property of Her Majesty, and for the use of Her Majesty's naval and military forces, and the consideration of the circumstances being suspicious or not should not have any weight.

The effect of such prohibition would not, we consider, affect in any measure or degree the arguments which were used by Her Majesty's Government in answer to the complaints made by the German Government in regard to the export of arms from this country during the Franco-German war, since there is a distinction between the two cases.

In the case of export of arms from this country, the arms were the manufacture of the country, sold in the ordinary course of trade to any customer, whatever his nationality, and whether neutral or belligerent. That trade could not be prohibited without making the neutral producer or manufacturer a direct sufferer by a war between two nations, with each of whom he was on terms of amity, and might therefore carry on his commercial relation and business as in time of general peace.

But in the case of Bermuda the arms and ammunition, produced elsewhere, are not brought there in the course of ordinary traffic, but for the purpose of being exported, and thus the island becomes a depôt of military stores sent there for the use of one of the belligerents and for no other purpose.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosures, which your Lordship had received from the Colonial Office, respecting a Proclamation proposed to be issued by the Governor of Gibraltar, forbidding, during the present disturbed state of Spain, the transhipment of arms and munitions of war destined for Spain within the Bay of Gibraltar; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the bearing, if any, which such a prohibition might have upon the questions raised by the German Government during the late war, which were fully discussed in the two notes to Count Bernstorff of which printed copies were inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Governor of Gibraltar may, by Proclamation, forbid the transhipment of arms and ammunition of war destined for Spain.

The difference between this case and that which formed the subject of discussion between Her Majesty's and the Prussian Government during the Franco-German war, and to which Mr. Hammond in his letter refers, lies in the fact that Gibraltar is a fortress into which, as appears from the despatch of Sir F. Williams to Lord Kimberley, paragraph 3, arms and ammunition of war are not permitted to be stored or transhipped without the special sanction of the Governor.

The suggested prohibition, therefore, comes entirely within the authority and power of the Governor.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th May last year, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further correspondence relative to the claims on the Spanish Government arising out of the seizure of the British schooner "Lark" by the Spanish authorities in Cuba.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to the claims in question.

The previous correspondence was inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is no justification to be found in the correspondence on the part of the Spanish Government for the imprisonment of the persons on board the "Lark," and their detention after they were allowed to leave the prison.

On the circumstances of the case these British subjects, if imprisoned at all, should have been at once liberated on the bail offered by the British Consul.

It appears that, after their release at a later time on the bail of the Consul, they were detained, and a paper procured from them under threats of a further imprisonment.

Great stress is laid upon this paper, which, as the Spanish Government allege, admits that the persons who signed it had no ground of complaint.

In our opinion, the obtaining of this paper under pressure by the Spanish officials is a proof of the need felt by them for a justification of their conduct in keeping the men in confinement, and no weight should be given to this document in considering the merits of the case.

The manner and length of the imprisonment and of the detention, and the foundation of the claim for compensation, and, since the Spanish Government is in these respects responsible for the acts of its servants, the only remaining question, is the amount of compensation to be claimed.

We had the honour of reporting to your Lordship that the original claim for 16,000*l.* was preposterous. We think that the reduced claim for 3,150*l.*, as calculated in the despatch from the Governor of Jamaica inclosed in Mr. Meade's letter of the 22nd instant, is not unfair, and may properly be pressed upon the Spanish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to signify to the Spanish Government that inasmuch as the property of Messrs. McKillop and Co. and other British subjects is, and for some time has been, detained by the Spanish legal authorities in Havana contrary to and in defiance of the laws of Spain by which the said goods remained the absolute property (subject to commissions on their sale) of the British merchants who had consigned them, and inasmuch as the said goods are of a perishable nature, and liable to serious damage through such illegal detention, Her Majesty's Government will hold the Spanish Government responsible for any loss which may happen in

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose a copy of the telegram. No copy had yet been received of that Decree, but as it is very probable that the vessels so denounced as pirates may be met with at sea by British ships of war, or may enter the waters of Gibraltar, your Lordship would be glad to receive our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether any (and what) instructions could properly be issued to Her Majesty's officers for the guidance of their conduct in such contingencies.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 19th instant, stating that the inclosed telegrams from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz and Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid reported the result of the trial in the Spanish Courts of the "Murillo" on a charge of having run down and sunk the British vessel "Northfleet" off Dungeness on the night of the 23rd January last, causing the death of several hundred persons.

That the sentence of the Spanish Tribunal had not yet been communicated officially to Her Majesty's Government, but it would appear from the fact that the English witnesses will not be further required by the Spanish authorities; that no further investigation of the case is intended, and that this sentence is final as far as the Spanish Tribunals are concerned.

That Her Majesty's Government was not disposed to allow that sentence to pass unchallenged, but, before making any communication to the Spanish Government on the subject, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the case, and, with this view, the whole correspondence which has passed in the matter is transmitted therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proceedings before the court-martial were defective in not requiring the evidence of some of the persons on board the "Northfleet."

We have no information as to the description of the "Northfleet," whether it corresponds or not with the description of vessel which the "Murillo," it is admitted, did run into, namely, a wooden full-rigged ship with painted port holes and a white figure-head.

If this description corresponds with that of the "Northfleet," the identity of the "Northfleet" with the ship which ran into is almost conclusively proved by the further evidence of the cries in English which were heard from that vessel, and showed her to be an English emigrant vessel.

Against this there was nothing before the court-martial save the idea that the blow itself was slight, and that no or very light trace of a collision appeared in the frame of the "Murillo."

The experience of numerous collisions, however, shows that, when an iron steamship with her stem strikes the side of a wooden ship, the latter may be destroyed, whi the former receives scarcely any perceptible injury.

No question seems to have been addressed to any witness or any evidence produced to explain why the "Murillo" left Lisbon immediately, or as to the fresh paint upon her.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed copies of the previous letters to the Admiralty respecting the course to be pursued in regard to revolted ships.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to ask our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the instructions which should be given for the guidance of Her Majesty's naval forces at Carthagena or elsewhere in similar circumstances to those set forth in Commodore Phillimore's telegram.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris (No. 753), reporting a conversation with the Duc de Broglie on Spanish affairs, and, with reference to that passage in it from which it appeared that the French Government considered that foreign Powers had the right of treating the rebel Spanish ships as pirates, if they chose to do so, under the general law of nations, but not as a duty imposed upon them by the Spanish Government, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience how far we agreed with the opinion of the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we do not agree with the opinion of the French Government.

The Spanish rebel ships are sailing under circumstances entirely different from those under which piratical vessels in the legal and well-known sense of the term "piratical" are found at sea. The Spanish rebel ships have not committed and are not cruizing with the intent to commit any act which a foreign nation can properly call or treat as a piratical act, and needing, therefore, capture and punishment in the one case or seizure and detention in the other case.

These Spanish ships are manned by crews whose only alleged crime or offence is that they are in revolt against the Government at Madrid, and, in our opinion, they cannot properly be visited or detained or seized unless the Government which orders or approves of such visit, detention, or seizure is prepared to support the Government at Madrid against all persons and parties who may be in insurrection against that Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, inclosing a despatch from Commander Cole Hamilton, of Her Majesty's ship "Zephyr," asking for instructions as to how he is to act in the event of the Carlists blocking the entrance to the port of Bilbao with torpedoes.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposed to cause to be returned to the Admiralty, and he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon with as little delay as possible.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there may be a difficulty in ascertaining which of the two contending parties should give due notice of the laying the torpedoes and in fixing upon which of them the responsibility of making good any loss incurred by Her Majesty's subjects in consequence of injury from the torpedoes would fall, so that a proper compensation might be claimed and exacted.

We would therefore respectfully suggest the omission of the last paragraph in the draft letter, and the substitution of the following words:

"The naval officers may, however, properly be instructed to exercise all the vigilance in their power to ascertain when, and the places where, torpedoes are laid, and to warn all British and other vessels of the dangers caused by the torpedoes."

With this exception we are of opinion that the draft letter may properly be sent to the Lords of the Admiralty.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Madrid respecting the publication by the Municipality of Malaga of a Tariff of export duties, in contravention of Spanish law, and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is not the duty of the English Chargé d'Affaires to interfere as to any breach of the Constitutional Law of Spain by any Spanish Municipality except so far as British interests or existing Treaties between Great Britain and Spain may be affected thereby. The present condition of Spain is no doubt anarchical, yet while there exists a Central Government claiming authority over the whole country, that Government is bound by Treaties, and to that Government only recourse must be had for the purpose of enforcing them, and to obtain redress for the breach of them. Mr. Macdonnell can, under the peculiar circumstances of the country, do no more than persistently call the attention of the Central Government to the illegal exactions threatened or enforced by the Municipality of Malaga, and distinctly inform the Central Government that Great Britain holds it responsible for the consequences of such illegality. Mr. Macdonnell has, in our opiniou, rightly advised the payment of these exactions under protest by British subjects. Beyond this nothing can be done by them until, if ever, the independence of various portions of Spain is recognized by this country, and separate diplomatic relations are entered into with those portions.

My Lord,

Temple, August 28, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to the correspondence which was some time ago submitted to us respecting the "Deerhound," which was suspected of being about to leave this country with arms for the coast of Spain, which correspondence he sent therewith for reference, and that he (Mr. Hammond) was directed to transmit to us a letter from Colonel Kirkpatrick, calling himself "Military Representative of Don Carlos VII in London," and a telegram from Colonel Stuart, the owner of the "Deerhound," complaining of the seizure of that vessel in French waters by a war steamer carrying English colours, but appeared to have belonged to the Spanish Government, and that he (Mr. Hammond) need scarcely say that Her Majesty's Government had not recognized any such person as Don Carlos VII as King of Spain, or any person as his representative in this country; neither have they recognized officially the de facto Government of Spain, though maintaining unofficial communications with it.

That the Foreign Office had no farther particulars respecting the proceedings or capture of the "Deerhound," but with reference to what was now before them and referred to us, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to inform your Lordship of our opinion as to how he should deal with Colonel Kirkpatrick's letter and Colonel Stuart's telegram.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly merely acknowledge the receipt of Colonel Kirkpatrick's letter, and state that Her Majesty's Government does not recognize any such person as Don Carlos VII, whose military representative in London Colonel Kirkpatrick states himself to be.

In reference to the circumstances of the capture of the "Deerhound," mentioned in Colonel Kirkpatrick's letter and the telegram, and referred to in Mr. Hammond's letter, the information is too vague to enable us to give your Lordship any opinion. We would, however, observe that if the "Deerhound" was seized in French waters, the question is one which belongs to the French Government, whose territory has been violated by the act.

If the "Deerhound" was seized at sea or in Spanish waters, the seizure may be justified by the fact that the "Deerhound" was engaged in a traffic illicit under the law of Spain, on whose territory she was attempting to land forbidden goods.

And the fact that the Spanish steamer carried English colours is also capable of a perfectly good explanation.

We presume, however, that your Lordship does not at present wish to enter upon any discussion upon these subjects, as the true state of facts is not known, and any interference might lead to difficulty and inconvenience.

That we would see, however, from the accompanying letter and its inclosures from the Admiralty, that owing to the disturbed state of Spain it was impossible to continue the inquiry at present. Commodore Phillimore therefore suggested that the evidence of Hooper should be taken before the Spanish Consul-General in London; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether this suggestion should be adopted.

Temple, August 29, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 6th June last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers relative to the circumstances under which the British barque "Tantivy" was detained by the Custom-house authorities at Matanzas on account of the charterer of the vessel having absconded without paying the export duties upon a portion of a cargo of sugar; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the authorities at Matanzas were right in not allowing the cargo to be taken away by the ship till or unless the export duty was paid. The matter, however, having been referred to the Intendente by the British Consul, it may be worth while to wait until the Report of Mr. Crawfurd on the result of that reference be received.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our consideration, in connection with the papers inclosed in his (Mr. Hammond's) letter of the 18th instant, a telegram from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, relative to the case of the "Deerhound."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our consideration, together with the papers inclosed in his letters of the 18th and 22nd instant, the accompanying further papers, as marked, relative to the seizure of the British steamer "Deerhound" by the Spanish man-of-war "Buenaventura."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the "Deerhound" was certainly engaged in an enterprise which the Spanish Government is justified in treating as illegal. The real facts connected with her seizure are not at present known with the certainty which would enable Her Majesty's Government to take any decided course; and we respectfully suggest, upon Mr. Macdonell's letter of the 20th August, that he may be instructed to use extreme caution in any communication which he may make verbally or by letter to the Spanish Government, in order that Her Majesty's Government may not be compromised.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th May, which refers to the right of British subjects in Spain to exemption from the payment of forced loans or contributions, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, inclosing one from Her Majesty's Consul at Barcelona, relative to an extraordinary war tax which was about to be levied at that place (No. 111, August 26, 1873).

That the papers sent to us on the 7th May were inclosed herewith, together with the instructions addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid on receipt of our Report of the 12th May, and a memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office in 1868 relative to the rights and privileges of British subjects in Spain, and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Macdonell respecting the liability of British subjects to the war tax about to be levied at Barcelona.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the tax is said to be imposed upon all property, industry, and commerce under a law passed by the Cortes at Madrid.

The case, therefore, does not, in our opinion, fall within the description of cases referred to in the despatch of Lord Palmerston in 1832, but to be a general tax imposed by the Legislature of the country.

And we are of opinion that British subjects in possession of property, exercising an industry, or carrying on commerce in Spain, cannot claim an exemption from a tax which is imposed on their property, industry, and commerce in common with Spaniards in a similar position or occupation.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 28th ultimo and the 1st and 2nd instant, upon the case of the "Deerhound," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Bayonne reporting the result of an inquiry which, by your Lordship's direction, he had made into the affair at San Sebastian; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take Consul Graham's despatch into consideration, together with the former papers (inclosed), and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should now be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government cannot take at present any course in the matter of the seizure of the "Deerhound" other than to instruct the gentleman in charge of the British Legation at Madrid to represent to the Spanish Government that Her Majesty's Government considers the case to be one of great importance, in which the Spanish Government, whilst protecting and vindicating the integrity of its own territory, will see that the persons and liberty of British subjects as well as their property must be properly cared for in accordance with the rules of right, justice, and the friendly relations of both countries.

In submitting this Report to your Lordship we are obliged to point out that the statements made to Consul Graham by Colonel Stuart and the captain of the "Deerhound" to the effect that the arms were put on board at sea, and that the ship was captured in French waters, are not consistent, the one with the information received whilst the "Deerhound" was at Plymouth, the other with the French account, and we therefore are not prepared to admit the story that arms had not been landed in opposition to the Spanish statement that arms had been put on shore; and we venture to request that every statement which may come from the "Deerhound" should be received with the utmost caution.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 8th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Madrid, inclosing the Reports of Spanish officials relative to the capture of the "Deerhound;" and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the despatch into consideration, together with papers already before us, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to the steps that should be taken.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot at present take any steps other than those suggested in our last Report. And the fact that the "Deerhound" had been close to the Spanish shore, in communication by signal with the shore, and had sent one of her boats with four of the ship's crew on shore, makes it most advisable that great caution should be used in raising any question as to the seizure of that vessel on the high seas at the end of what may perhaps turn out to have been a chase. We speak thus doubtfully because the Spanish Reports are not entirely consistent, some parts of them speaking as if there had been a pursuit and capture, which the expression as to the "banking up of the fires" appears to contradict.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. McAndrew and Co., requesting that steps might be taken to obtain for them reimbursement of the loss which they have sustained through the seizure by the insurgents at Cadiz of a cargo of coal shipped to that port on board the "General Ros de Olano;" and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take Messrs. McAndrew and Co's. letter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps that should be taken thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. McAndrew, in sending coals on board a Spanish ship to a port circumstanced as the port of Cadiz was in July 1873, took upon themselves a risk which Her Majesty's Government cannot properly undertake to protect, and we are of opinion that no steps can be taken to reimburse Messrs. McAndrew for the loss which they say they have suffered.

Temple, September 27, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that a question was raised as to the rights of Spain to sovereignty over the islands in the Archipelago of Sulu, by a notice published at Singapore by the Spanish Consul, calling attention to a notification issued by the Spanish Government in 1860 prohibiting foreign vessels from resorting to Sulu except in case of distress.

That the inclosed memorandum contained a brief history of the relations of England and Spain with Sulu, and might suffice for the purpose of the present reference, though the papers to which it referred could be sent to us if we desired.

That it seemed, however, that the trade with Sulu was held to be of vital importance to the British Colony of Labuan, and hence had been raised the question of the right of Spain to interdict foreign resort to that island.

That Mr. Hammond sent a correspondence with the Colonial Office on that point, and with it the papers referred to in the letter from that Department of the 19th May, and that he also sent two further letters from the same Department, one inclosing a translation of a letter from the Sultan of Sulu to the Queen, the other a representation from Chinese merchants of Singapore complaining of interruption of that trade with Sulu.

That he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report our opinion whether there was any sufficient ground for disputing the sovereignty of Spain over Sulu, or for objecting to the notification prohibiting the resort of vessels to those islands.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the information before us does not enable us to form a clear opinion upon the rights of Spain to the territories in question, or to say whether there are in fact sufficient grounds or not for disputing the sovereignty of Spain over Sulu.

1873

But we are of opinion that the notification prohibiting the resort of vessels to the Sulu territories and dependencies may properly be objected to, and the Spanish Government be called on to confine the effect of that notification to vessels engaged in illegal traffic.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received October 3.)

My Lord, Temple, October 1, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 6th February last he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the British subjects imprisoned at Humacao in Puerto Rico in August 1871.

That from the despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, No. 99 of the 18th August, we would see that the Spanish Government had at length pardoned the prisoners in question, but denied that they had any claim to compensation, and that Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, to whom Mr. Macdonell's despatch had been communicated, considered the answer of the Spanish Government very unsatisfactory.

That in those circumstances he was to request that we would take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether a further communication should be made to the Spanish Government upon that subject.

That the previous correspondence was likewise inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, a further communication should be made to the Spanish Government upon the case of the British subjects imprisoned at Humacao, of whom one was found innocent, and the others have now been pardoned.

It appears that all these persons were imprisoned without trial for more than sixteen months.

At the end of that time, and after the repeated applications of the British Consul, they were brought to trial. One, the woman Williams, was found innocent. In her case, we submit to your Lordship that compensation should be insisted upon for the long imprisonment which she has suffered, and that the Spanish Government should not be allowed to avoid making this compensation by leaving her to a private suit against either a witness for perjury or a Spanish official for misconduct, as suggested in the opinion of the Auditor de Juerra, inclosed in Mr. Consul Cowper's despatch No. 20 of the 23rd May, 1873.

Her right to compensation is, in our opinion, founded upon the fact of her long imprisonment without trial, a delay for which no justification is offered, and for which the Spanish Government is responsible.

In the correspondence transmitted to us, there is a letter from your Lordship of the 21st April, 1873, to Mr. Layard, in which Mr. Layard is instructed to express to Señor Castelar the earnest hope of Her Majesty's Government that in view of the long imprisonment which the men had already undergone, orders might be sent without delay to Puerto for the remission of the sentence inflicting a further imprisonment and a fine.

The Spanish Government had complied with this request, and it appears to us that there is great difficulty in now forcibly urging the Spanish Government to compensate the men.

In our opinion the most which Her Majesty's Government can do in their case is, whilst pressing in the strongest possible manner for compensation to the woman, to ask for the favourable consideration of the case of the men now liberated.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received October 29.)

My Lord, Temple, October 28, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st instant, stating that with reference to his letter of that day's date he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to you a copy of the letter from the Admiralty referred to in that already sent to us.

That we would perceive from Captain Phillimore's telegram that the Spanish fleet were taking in coals at Gibraltar, presumably from the ordinary commercial sources, and that the object of his second telegram was to ask instructions as to supplying the Spanish Admiral with Welsh coal from Her Majesty's stores.

That if coal were supplied in either manner to the Spanish Government ships, it was possible that the insurgents might also request to be furnished with them upon similar terms, and that the decision come to upon that point might involve very difficult and delicate questions.

That Lord Tenterden was, therefore, to request that we would give our most careful consideration to the points raised by the papers before us, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the rules which should be laid down with respect to the supply of coals to either, both, or neither of the contending Spanish fleets, and also as to the grounds upon which those rules should be maintained.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The principle which, in our opinion, should be the foundation of any rule with respect to the supply of coals to the contending Spanish fleets, is that Her Majesty's Government has no concern with the political state of Spain, and the conflicts between opposite parties in that country.

This condition of things, and the consequences following from it, will continue as regards the fleet under the Madrid Government until that Government shall cease to treat the insurgents as insurgents or "pirates," as it has, we believe, hitherto called them, and recognizes them as belligerents, or until, if ever, Her Majesty's Government think fit to recognize the insurgents as belligerents.

Then Her Majesty's Government will be bound to strictly observe the duties of neutrals in war, and neither supply nor allow the supply of coals for the purposes of carrying on war to either party.

In the meanwhile we are of opinion that coals may be supplied to the ships belonging to the Madrid Government as a Government de facto, and may properly be refused to the ships of the insurgents, as they carry no national flag, and are officered by persons who hold no Commission under either a de facto or a de jure Government.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 8th November instant, stating that in the month of August last Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao reported to your Lordship that he had received several applications from British subjects, residing at that port, for permission to fly the British flag with a view to protection of their property; and in answer to his inquiry as to the reply which he should give to those applications, he was informed that he could not authorize, and that Her Majesty's Government could not sanction, private persons flying the British colours.

Lord Enfield further stated that the correspondence was therewith transmitted,* and that he also inclosed a further despatch from Mr. Young, reporting the circumstances under which he had prohibited British subjects from flying British colours, together with a letter from Mr. Woods complaining of this prohibition.

That Mr. Young appeared to have gone beyond his instructions in the matter, and Lord Enfield added that he was to request that we would take it into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government have any right to issue such a prohibition.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government have no right to issue a prohibition against private persons flying the British colours.

But Her Majesty's Government may properly, and, in our opinion, should instruct Her Majesty's Consul to make it known to British subjects that the fact of their flying British colours will not in any manner add to the right of such subjects to the protection of Her Majesty's Government.

That we would see from Mr. Layard's No. 479 of the 25th ultimo that the export duty had been reduced to 1 per cent. and the date of its coming into operation postponed until the 1st January next; but as these modifications did not affect the principle involved, he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the accompanying papers into consideration, together with those transmitted to us in his previous letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the reduction of the tax in percentage would not affect the right of imposing the tax.

We have read the correspondence between Mr. Layard and Mr. O'Shea, and the despatch of Mr. Layard stating the action taken by the French and other Governments, and we are still of opinion that British subjects resident in Spain cannot claim exemption from the taxes imposed.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 17th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 24th May last he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid respecting the refusal of the Spanish Government to remit the remainder of the fine levied upon the "Erl King."

That the former papers in this case were likewise inclosed; and that he was to request that we would take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Minister on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this is not a case for actually enforcing restitution of the fines. The Spanish Government has acted upon a harsh and inequitable construction of a law in itself harsh and inequitable. Their conduct seems to us to be fairly open to the comments which Mr. Layard makes upon it.

It is for your Lordship to consider as matter of policy the propriety of issuing the notice which Mr. Layard recommends; but we may observe that there seems no reason for withholding the publication of it on any ground of consideration for the Spanish Government, which in this case appears to be entitled to none.

Temple, November 21, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying translation of two letters from the Spanish Representative in this country (November 17, 1873), urging that measures might be taken to prevent the shipment at Newport of certain arms suspected to be intended for the use of the Carlists, and that two letters from the Board of Customs relating to the arms in question were likewise inclosed, and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Señor Rubio.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to call our particular attention to the statement that the arms were about to be declared to be shipped to a false destination, for which the vessel carrying them would be alleged to be bound, and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether that affords any ground for stopping the vessel or arms under the Customs or any other Act.

We were further favoured with a letter from Lord Tenterden of the 20th November instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the previous day he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a translation of a further letter from the Spanish Representative in London, inquiring whether in the event of his being able to produce certain evidence as to the destination of the arms, and to the understanding that the Spanish Government would be responsible for all costs that might thereby be incurred, Her Majesty's Government would detain the arms and submit the matter to a court of law.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to request that we would take Señor Rubio's letter into our earliest consideration, together with the papers already before us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned thereto, and that he also inclosed a letter from Mr. Downing, the gentleman to whom the arms in question had been consigned at Newport for shipment, asking for advice in the matter, and that your Lordship requested that we would favour you with our opinion at the same time as to the answer to be returned to Mr. Downing.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is no power either at common law or by statute by virtue of which the vessel or arms about to be exported therein can be detained, and we consider that Her Majesty's Government cannot take any steps, such as are suggested by Señor Rubio, although the Spanish Government may be ready to indemnify Her Majesty's Government, and we think that Señor Rubio may be properly answered to that effect.

We are, however, anxious to point out to your Lordship the actual state of the law in respect to the exportation of goods, whether arms or not. The only machinery by which goods can be detained is in the case of non-compliance with certain customs regulations in relation to declaring the nature of the goods about to be exported. The enactments in relation to those declarations are to be found in 16 & 17 Vict., cap. 107, 18 & 19 Vict., cap. 96, and 34 and 35 Vict., cap. 103. But these regulations in no way refer to the description of goods about to be exported, and apply equally to all goods, whether contraband of war or not.

Your Lordship might refer to the Customs authorities the question in Señor Rubio's letter, and request them to take the same steps they would in any other case to ensure the provisions of the Customs Acts we have referred to being carried out.

Mr. Downing may, in our opinion, be informed that your Lordship is not in a position to give him any advice, and that he must act on his own responsibility.

Lord Tenterden further stated that we would observe that a similar proposition has been made with regard to payment for some wheat belonging to Italian subjects which has been seized in the same manner.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to the proposition in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government cannot, in our opinion, accept from the insurgents at Carthagena goods, the property of the Spanish nation, as security for the repayment of the value of British property seized, consumed, or destroyed by the insurgents.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st ultimo, stating that with reference to his letter of the 20th ultimo relative to certain arms at Newport which were suspected of being intended for the use of the Carlists, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration, a memorandum which had been received from the Spanish Secretary, calling attention to a case in which he asserted that the British Government interfered to prevent shipment of arms supposed to be intended for the use of insurgents in Portugal. That it was to be presumed that the case referred to in that memorandum was that of the expedition to Terceira in 1828-9, the correspondence relating to which would be found in the "State Papers" (vol. xvi, pp. 433—469).

That a summary of the case was contained in "Phillimore's International Law" (pp. 229—237).

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

There can be no doubt that prior to 1826 Orders in Council to prohibit the exportation of arms and munitions of war to particular foreign States were sometimes issued under 29 Geo. III and 33 Geo. II, cap. 2.

It appears that when the Duke of Wellington was at the head of affairs he endeavoured to give effect to such an order, in the case of Portugal ("Despatches," vol. v, p. 178), though the exact course pursued is not very clearly stated. Since that period the settled policy of the British Government has been not to interfere with the exportation of munitions of war.

When the Foreign Enlistment Bill was under discussion in 1870, the House of Commons deliberately declined to introduce any provision as to the exportation of arms. The British Government throughout the whole course of the American Civil War and the war between France and Germany adhered to the same view.

And we have no hesitation in advising that this policy should be maintained.

Temple, December 2, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that in accordance with the opinion expressed in our report of the 15th September last relative to an extraordinary war tax which was about to be levied at Barcelona, your Lordship informed Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid that British subjects could not claim exemption from paying that tax.

That it appeared, however, from the accompanying telegram from Mr. Layard, that British subjects at Barcelona had now been called upon to pay the tax, but that French, Italian, and Portuguese subjects were exempted, and that Mr. Layard asked whether exemption could be claimed for British subjects under the "most-favoured-nation clause," or on other grounds.

That with regard to claiming exemption on "other grounds," our above-mentioned report would appear to be conclusive; but that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion, with the least possible delay, as to the right of Her Majesty's Government to claim for British subjects under the "most-favoured-nation" clause an exemption similar to that which appeared to have been conceded to French, Italian, and Portuguese subjects.

That we would observe from the inclosed memorandum drawn up in that Office on October 15th, 1868, that Great Britain was expressly granted the privileges of the most-favoured nation by various clauses of Treaties concluded in the 17th and 18th centuries, which clauses were confirmed by the Definite Treaty of the 3rd September, 1783, and further by an additional Article to the Treaty of 1814.

That copies of the Treaties referred to would be found in Appendix A to the memorandum.

That the papers relating to that matter which had been previously referred to us were sent therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government has the right to claim for British subjects under the Treaty of September 1783, Article II, and the Treaties renewed by the said Article, and the additional Articles of the 28th August, 1814, an exemption similar to that which has been conceded to French, Italian, and Portuguese subjects.

The Article VII in the Treaty of the 5th October, 1750, is the latest Treaty between Great Britain and Spain, which, as we believe, contains expressly a most-favoured-nation clause; but this Treaty is confirmed by the other Treaties to which we have referred, and as such is still binding.

We desire on this subject to call your Lordship's attention to page 27 of Mr. Herslet's Memorandum, since we consider the omission of Spain from the list laid before the House of Lords in 1843, and from the return laid before the House of Commons in March 1860, was made by some inadvertence, and the statement might with advantage be corrected.

My Lord, Temple, December 8, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, requesting instructions as to the right of the Spanish Government to requisition for purposes of war horses bonâ fide the property of British subjects; and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Layard.

That Lord Tenterden was at the same time to call our attention to the fact that the Decree inclosed in Mr. Layard's despatch, exempting from requisition horses belonging to foreign Ambassadors, Ministers, and Chargé d'Affaires, made no mention of horses belonging to Secretaries of Legation or other members of Missions, and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we considered that any notice should be taken of that omission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Layard may properly be instructed that Her Majesty's Government considers that the Spanish Government is entitled to requisition for the purposes of war horses which are the property of British subjects in Spain.

In reference to the second question in Lord Tenterden's letter, we are of opinion that Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to inform the Spanish Government that Her Majesty's Government claim that the privilege of extra-territoriality extended to all persons attached to Her Majesty's representative at Madrid. And if needed, Mr. Layard may state to the Spanish Government that the Spanish Secretary of Legation in London has had, on the application of the Spanish representative in London, a similar privilege allowed him in this country, in a case where he claimed, and was allowed his privilege in a court of law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Layard may properly be instructed by your Lordship to state to Señor Carvajal that inasmuch as the British subjects on board the "Virginius" had committed no offence deserving death by either municipal or international law, Her Majesty's Government will demand compensation for the families of those executed.

Temple, December 17, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office relative to the proceedings of the authorities at Jamaica with regard to the steamer "Virginius," which vessel it appeared was in Kingston Harbour from the 9th of July till the 23rd of October last, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Sir Peter Grant's proceedings should be approved.

That a letter from the Admiralty, inclosing Commodore de Horsey's Reports upon the subject, and a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Port-au-Prince relative to the proceedings of the "Virginius" at that port, were likewise inclosed, together with two despatches which had been received from Mr. Acting Consul-General Crawford.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this case is one of such grave importance, that we do not desire to give our opinion upon it until an opportunity shall have been given to the Governor of Jamaica to place before Her Majesty's Government any further explanation he may have to offer as to the reasons which caused him not to detain the "Virginius."

It seems to us that the principal question is, whether the Governor of Jamaica had on the information before him "reasonable and probable cause for believing" (33 & 34 Vict., cap. 90, secs. 23, 24, and sec. 8, sub-sec. 4) that the "Virginius" was about to be dispatched with the intention of being employed in the naval or military service of the Cuban insurgents.

There is also a second question, whether the facts submitted to the Governor did not bring the persons about to embark on board the "Virginius" within the operation of the 11th section of the above-mentioned Act.

We think it right to call your Lordship's attention to the following documents, to which we would suggest the attention of the Governor of Jamaica should be particularly directed:—

Letter from Commodore de Horsey to Sir J. P. Grant, July 9, 1873.
Inspector Foley to Inspector-General, July 10, 1873.
Inspector Foley to Inspector of Police, July 12, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 1st December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch (No. 91) from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, inclosing a copy of a simultaneous note which he has addressed to the Spanish Government in conjunction with his foreign colleagues on the subject of the system pursued in Spanish ports of inflicting fines upon shipping for errors in vessels' manifests, which question has, as we are aware, received the serious attention of Her Majesty's Government for some time past.

He also inclosed a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister, wherein he calls attention to an Article in the Anglo-Spanish Treaty of 1667 ("Hertslet's Treaties," vol. ii, p. 140), as affording an additional ground for remonstrance with the Spanish Government in this matter; and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, together with the inclosed letter from the Board of Trade, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these matters into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly approve of the note addressed by Mr. Layard to the Spanish Government.

Your Lordship may, we think, instruct Mr. Layard that in any future remonstrance with the Spanish Government the Treaty of 1667 should not be referred to by him without directions from your Lordship applicable to the particular case.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received December 26.)

Temple, December 24, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 2nd and 8th instant, respecting the rights of British subjects in Spain to be exempted from the payment of forced loans and special war taxes, and from requisitions for horses, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two farther despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid upon the subject of the rights in question.

And that he was to request us to take these despatches into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to make thereon.

Lord Tenterden was further pleased to state in the postcript appended to his said letter that, with reference to the remark in our Report of the 2nd instant as to the omission of Spain from the list laid before the House of Lords in 1843, and from the Returns laid before the House of Commons in March 1860, that he was to inclose a memorandum by the Librarian of the Foreign Office explaining the omission in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no reason to alter the opinions we have formerly expressed, that apart from Treaty stipulations ordinary British subjects cannot claim exemption from the effect of such reasonable measures as the Spanish Government may think fit to take for the public safety, and which are applied indifferently to all persons resident in Spain.

1873

In regard of forced loans, the Spanish Government have themselves, in the Decree of the 21st November, 1873, inclosed by Mr. Layard, placed their own construction on the existing Treaties as extending to foreigners exemption from such loans.

Whether this Decree covers more than the matter of money contribution may be doubted, but Mr. Layard, in his despatch of the 1st December, 1873, has very properly called the attention of the Spanish Minister of State to the precedents of 1837 and 1838 referred to in the inclosed correspondence.

It seems probable that the Spanish Government will not desire to recede from the view taken of their obligations by antecedent Governments; at all events, we think Her Majesty's Government may approve the despatch of Mr. Layard of the 1st December to the Spanish Minister of State, and await his reply to that despatch.

We are clearly of opinion that in any event British subjects are entitled to all the exemptions granted to other foreigners. How far it may be desirable to insist on the exemption from other requisitions which are applied to all alike is a question which it seems to us may be conveniently reserved until it shall appear that the Spanish Government are disposed to resist the last representation of Mr. Layard.

We beg leave te call attention to the fact that no translation is sent of the Spanish Decree, a circumstance which, when much may turn upon the meaning of particular words and phrases, is inconvenient.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th December instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 21st ultimo, relative to certain arms at Newport supposed to be intended for the use of the Carlists, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter, and its inclosure, from the Board of Customs, from which it appears that the arms in question, together with a quantity more which had arrived from Bayonne by the French steamer "Malfilatre," were about to be removed to Cardiff, and that it was further stated that the arms had been purchased by a Mr. Hugh L. F. Palmer, who alleged that he was negotiating for their sale to the Greek Government.

Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to request that we would take this letter into our consideration, together with the former papers which were sent therewith, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any and what steps should be taken in regard to the arms in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received December 29.)

Temple, December 27, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th instant, on the subject of the compensation to be claimed from the Spanish Government for the relatives of the British members of the crew of the "Virginius" executed at Santiago de Cuba, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying telegram which has been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, stating that the United States' Government has decided that that vessel had no right to the American flag or papers; and he was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether that decision makes any difference in the demands of Her Majesty's Government, and what should be required of the United States' Government as regards the survivors of the crew who have been delivered up to them and who are probably still detained, pending the result of the inquiry which it would appear is being instituted into the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the contents of Sir E. Thornton's despatch should materially affect both the tone and extent of the demands to be made on the Spanish Government.

Assuming the United States' Government to have made the admission mentioned by Sir E. Thornton, we think your Lordship must regard the "Virginius" as being a vessel at the time of her seizure "not justly entitled to the flag of any nation."

It also appears to us that your Lordship will probably come to the conclusion that the "Virginius" when captured was engaged in an adventure directly hostile to the maintenance of the Spanish Government in Cuba.

We are therefore of opinion that your Lordship can in no way remonstrate on account of the capture or detention of the British subjects on board the "Virginius."

The question, however, remains whether the Spanish authorities were justified in inflicting the extreme punishment of death on those who were engaged in an unlawful filibustering expedition in favour of the Cuban rebels.

We need not point out to your Lordship that the degree of punishment to be inflicted for offences against or committed within a State must necessarily be determined by those who govern it, and it is only where the punishment is most clearly excessive in relation to the offence, or where the laws of humanity have been outraged, that the Government of a foreign State is entitled to interfere for the protection of its subjects.

Advising your Lordship on the meagre information before us, it seems to us that, even assuming the crew of the "Virginius" to have been in a similar position to that of pirates, with an object directly hostile to Spain, the punishment of death may be urged by your Lordship to have been excessive, and that you may so represent to the Spanish Government.

But we venture to suggest that every opportunity should be afforded to that Government to explain the nature of the offence with which the executed British subjects were charged, the mode of trial to which they were subjected, and the reason for inflicting the extreme punishment of death.

It probably will occur to your Lordship that, at the time of the trial of the accused persons, the Cuban authorities were not likely to have been aware that the "Virginius" was sailing without the protection of the American flag; and that the trial must have proceeded without the knowledge of the important fact that the vessel had "no right to the American flag or papers."

We think your Lordship may direct Sir E. Thornton to inquire from the United States' Government whether the British subjects are now detained with the object of being charged with any offence against the laws of the United States. If they be so, or if their detention is deemed necessary for inquiry, we see no reason why your Lordship should demand their immediate release. On the contrary, it seems to us, in the present state of our information on the subject, that any further action in respect of the surviving British subjects amongst the crew of the "Virginus" had better be suspended for the moment.

Temple, December 31, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 23rd instant, and to previous correspondence on the subject of the capture of the "Virginius," and the execution of British subjects at Santiago de Cuba, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers bearing on that case;* and that he was to request that we would take into our consideration with the papers now before us,† and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That these papers in no way alter the opinion which we have expressed in our last Report of the 27th instant. The course taken by the British naval officers appears to have been vigorous and judicious, and their remonstrances well founded upon the view of the facts as they at the time presented themselves.

The correspondence occurred after the execution of the first batch of prisoners, and of course came too late to be of any avail, though it probably had the effect of saving the lives of the survivors. The most serious part of the correspondence appears to us to be the reference in the letter of the Governor of Santiago de Cuba of the 19th November (paragraph 9) to the conduct of the Governor of Jamaica as being the real cause of the catastrophe.

No. 262.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received January 1, 1874.)

Temple, December 31, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, which has been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, respecting the question of the liability of British Consular Agents, who happen to be Spanish subjects, to be called upon to serve in the militia; and he was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

And that he was likewise to inclose a memorandum, which has been drawn up in the Foreign Office, on the position of Consular Agents with reference to existing Treaties.‡

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the general principle is correctly stated by Hallech, cap. 10, sec. 10:—

"When a citizen of a State is appointed to a foreign Consulate in the State, it is optional with his Government to refuse to permit him to hold the office, or to attach conditions to his holding it. But suppose he be recognized as such Consul without any conditions, reason and analogy would lead us to the conclusion that if no conditions are imposed in the exequatur, the citizen who is Consul of a foreign State is entitled as much as an alien Consul to the privileges and exemptions which necessarily pertain to that office; and it is believed that this conclusion is sustained by authority of the text writers." See also Calvo, vol. i, p. 610; Phillimore, vol. xi; De Marten's Guide Diplomatique.

The question then is, whether the "Consular Agents" spoken of in Mr. Layard's despatch are persons acting under an exequatur from the Spanish Government; next, whether any conditions were imposed at the time when they were recognized in such capacity, which might be either under special arrangement or by the general Spanish law.

M. Calvo, p. 601, refers to Spanish Consular Regulations, February 1, 1765, and Ordinances, May 8, 1827; July 17, 1847; November 17, 1852. These should be consulted, as also other Regulations referred to by De Martens.

Without further information we can only give an opinion generally, that if the Consular character of Spanish subjects has been unconditionally recognized by the Spanish Government, Her Majesty's Government would be entitled to claim immunity for them from service in the militia, an employment which would be clearly incompatible with the due discharge of their ordinary Consular functions. This, however, is not the personal privilege of the individual, but of the Governments he represents for the advantage of the public service, and if Her Majesty's Government should think it more prudent to waive the privilege, they are at liberty to do so.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the accompanying letter (December 17) which had been received from Colonel Stuart, containing further particulars respecting the capture of his vessel the "Deerhound."

That in addition to his claim for compensation on account of imprisonment, which claim could not, in our opinion, be supported by Her Majesty's Government, Colonel Stuart considers that he is entitled to additional compensation for damages alleged to have been done to the "Deerhound" while in possession of the Spanish authorities, and also for the value of arms and ammunition which he stated were detained by those authorities when the vessel was delivered over to him.

Lord Tenterden further said that he was to state that your Lordship presumed that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in submitting those additional claims to the Spanish Government, as you scarcely supposed that Colonel Stuart's further letter made any difference in the case. Your Lordship would, however, be glad to be favoured with our opinion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Colonel Stuart's further letter in no way causes us to alter our opinion of the 16th December, 1873, to which we adhere.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received March 10.)

Temple, March , 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mrs. Pihl, requesting to be informed whether she and her children were to be regarded as British subjects.

That it appeared from the letter and papers inclosed that Mrs. Pihl is by birth a British subject, and was married in 1847 at Surbiton to Mr. Pihl, a Russian subject, now deceased; on proceeding after her marriage to St. Petersburgh she was furnished with a certificate from Her Majesty's Consul there, dated October 18, 1847, declaring her to be a British subject; since then she has resided in England and elsewhere, and is now at Stockholm.

That your Lordship presumed, from the statements in Mrs. Pihl's letter, that some of her children might have been born in England. Those would be British subjects by birth, and about them there could be no question. The points, therefore, on which he would be glad to be favoured with our opinion were, whether by the marriage contracted with Mr. Pihl, a Russian subject, Mrs. Pihl ceased to be a British subject, undert he Act 33 Vict., cap. 14, of which a copy was inclosed, or any previous law; (2) if so, whether she could obtain a certificate of readmission to British nationality under that Act.

3. Whether if she obtained such a certificate any of her children would become thereby naturalized as British subjects under the 10th section (5).

It would be observed that they were respectively born in 1848, 1850, 1851, 1854, 1856, and 1859.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That Mrs. Pihl by her marriage became, and during the marriage must, in our opinion, be deemed to have been a subject of the State, that is Russia, of which her husband was a subject (see 33 Vict., cap. 14, section 10), which is a restatement of the previous law on the subject.

2. By 33 Vict., cap. 14, sec. 10, sub-section 2, Mrs. Pihl, who by her marriage became, as a subject of Russia, a statutory alien, may now on her widowhood obtain a certificate of readmission in the manner provided by sections 7 & 8 of 33 Vict., cap. 14, but subject within the limits of the Russian Empire to the conditions imposed by section 8 of the same Act.

3. The 10th section (5) is so framed that, in our opinion, the words "such father or mother" in that sub-section mean the "father or mother who has obtained a certificate of naturalization in the United Kingdom."

Mrs. Pihl has not up to the present time obtained this certificate. The three eldest children, who are 21 and upwards, therefore do not come either of them within the description of a child who during infancy has become resident with a mother who has obtained a certificate of naturalization in the United Kingdom; and these three children cannot under the Act be deemed to be naturalized British subjects.

But if Mrs. Pihl obtains the certificate, any of the other children who during infancy may reside with her in the United Kingdom will, under the Act, be deemed to be British subjects.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th June, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Tyne and Wear Iron Steam-Ship Insurance Association, with its inclosures, claiming compensation from the Swedish Government for damage caused to the steam-ship "Stagshaw" by the Swedish frigate "Vanadis" in Alexandria Harbour; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government cannot at present interfere in the matter of this collision in the harbour of Alexandria.

The Tyne and Wear Iron Steam-Ship Company may properly be informed that when Her Majesty's Government receives from them the refusal of the Swedish Government in an official form to pay the damages consequent upon the collision, or to submit the case to a trial, or to a reference, Her Majesty's Government will consider whether the case requires their interference.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, referring to the question of mixed marriages of British subjects in Switzerland, in cases where the parties interested were desirous of being married according to the lex loci, and without the marriage ceremony being performed at the Legation.

It appeared that the Swiss Cantons refused to sanction the ceremony unless they received from Her Majesty's Minister a certificate declaring that such marriages would be valid in England, and that the wife would henceforth become English according to British law; and Mr. Bonar had accordingly drawn up a form of certificate such as he considered would meet the requirements of the Swiss Government; but he was desirous of being informed whether it is correct in every particular and might be adopted by Her Majesty's Legation.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon this subject, but that your Lordship would suggest whether it would would not be advisable to omit the concluding paragraph of the proposed certificate, and to limit the statement in the last paragraph but one to marriages performed at Her Majesty's Legations since previous evidence was a formality required both for a marriage performed at a British Consulate, although it was dispensed with in the case of a marriage at a Legation.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That, having carefully read the letter of Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, and considered the object of the proposed form of preliminary certificate; in reference to the marriages according to the lex loci, the certificate is, in our opinion, proper, but we suggest the omission of the paragraph beginning "Mais de ce que" and ending "en d'autres pays."

1873

But in reference to that part of the certificate which is in the English language we consider that it may mislead, and that the whole of such part had better be left out; and that Her Majesty's Minister should inform each applicant of the formalities required, and not point out those which are not needed.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, referring to applications by naturalized British subjects to be married at Her Majesty's Mission in that capital, and asking whether, in respect of marriage at Her Majesty's Legation, the naturalized British subject was under any disability, and if so to what degree, or whether, as regards the marriage law and the instructions to Her Majesty's Missions abroad contained in the Circular despatch from the Foreign Office of the 10th February last, the naturalized British subject stood upon perfect equality with the natural-born.

And that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the matter, which is one of much importance, into our early consideration, and favour your Lordship upon the points directly adverted to by Mr. Bonar, upon which might be founded the answer to be returned to his present inquiry, but also with any observations which we might have to offer and which might be of use to your Lordship in framing a Circular instruction both to Her Majesty's Diplomatic and Consular representatives abroad upon this question, should it be considered advisable to do so, as they were liable at any moment to be called upon by naturalized British subjects to perform the marriage ceremony.

And that a copy of the Circular above referred to, as well as of the Naturalization Act, 1870, and of a memorandum drawn up at the Foreign Office on the subject of marriages of British subjects at Missions and Consulates abroad, were inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the naturalized British subject is, as respects every country other than that of which he was a natural-born subject, or a subject before his naturalization, and in which he may be living, entitled to all the rights of a natural-born British subject, and may therefore claim to be married under the Consular Marriage Act at Berne or elsewhere.

But if Berne, or the place in which he desires to be married, be the country of his birth, or the country of which he was a subject previously to his obtaining his certificate of naturalization, and he has not ceased to be a subject of that State in pursuance of its laws or by Treaty, and the laws of that country do not admit the validity of such Consular marriage, we apprehend such marriage will be open to very great doubt everywhere, except in Her Majesty's dominions, and will be invalid in the country in which it was had.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches, as marked in the margin,* from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, respecting a claim put forward by the Cantonal Government of Geneva to succession duty on the personal estate of Mr. Forbes, formerly Her Majesty's Minister at Dresden, who died at Geneva on the 5th of last month, an embargo having been laid upon the property, which was on the point of being removed to this country, until the duty is paid.

And that we should see by Mr. Bonar's despatches that he has not thought himself warranted in making any remonstrance against the claim for duty, the validity of which seems to turn upon the question of domicile in Mr. Forbes' case, and whilst awaiting instructions on this subject, has confined himself to obtaining a suspension of all judicial proceedings against the estate until the heir could be communicated with, and should be called, either to appear in person in Court, or should name some one to represent him, and that this course has been assented to.

Reference was also made to Mr. Bonar's despatch No. 72, to the declaration signed at Berne in the course of last year, relative to the succession duty on the property of British subjects dying in the Canton of Vaud, a copy of which was inclosed, and that we should perceive that negotiations which had been commenced with a view to a corresponding arrangement with the other Cantons have as yet remained without result, so that the question of succession duty in the Canton of Geneva must be determined by the laws hitherto in force, and accordingly he was to transmit to us such of Mr. Bonar's despatches as are referred to by him as containing information on this subject.†

He was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Bonar in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the right to the succession duty claimed must clearly depend upon the law of the Canton of Geneva.

The authorities there seem to have acted with proper consideration in affording an opportunity to Mr. Forbes' representatives to appear, and we think your Lordship may instruct Mr. Bonar that if those representatives do not appear to contest the claim he ought not to interfere further in the matter, except to see that the property seized is not unnecessarily injured.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that in the year 1869 a mixed Commission was established by a Decree of the Bey of Tunis for liquidating the debts of the regency to the subjects of foreign Powers.* That the Decree would be found at page 134 of an accompanying volume of the "Archives Diplomatiques,"† and that the negotiations which led up to that Decree were set forth in the printed collection sent therewith.

And we would see by the manuscript correspondence which he inclosed that a discussion had arisen at Tunis as to the limits assigned by that Decree to the rights of the Bey in regard to farming out certain portions of the Tunisian domain; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to consider and report to your Lordship our opinion whether such restrictions are imposed by this Decree on the Bey as are maintained by the Commission sitting at Tunis to have been contemplated by it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the spirit and words of the Decree impose upon the Bey the restrictions which are maintained by the Commission sitting at Tunis to have been contemplated by it.

The intention of the Decree appears to have been that the Bey should surrender into the hands of the Commission the whole revenues of the Kingdom for the purposes of administration, and this object could hardly be obtained if the Bey had still the power of farming out without the control of the Commission any part of those revenues.

The terms upon which a part of the revenues are to be farmed seems a necessary part of the work of the Commission, and it might be inconvenient, and certainly would be invidious, to give occasion to a difference in the terms between the Bey and the Commissioners.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the continuance of British protection to Si Hamuda Ben Ayat in Tunis depends, first, upon the right of Her Majesty's Government; and, secondly, upon the policy of Her Majesty's Government in the circumstances.

As to the right, we think that the Tunisian Government having admitted the British protection for a long series of years, Her Majesty's Government has a right to insist upon a continuance of that protection, and especially when the right is disputed not by the Tunisian Government, but by a foreign Consul.

If the French Government should bring the matter before your Lordship, it seems to us, with our present information on the subject, that the right may properly be insisted upon as to the past, whatever arrangements for the future may be made between the two Governments.

In reference to the policy of continuing this protection, it appears to us that the surrender of that protection would be a most serious injury to the interests and

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter, together with its inclosures, from Messrs. Laycock and Co., respecting their claim on the Turkish Government for coals delivered by them as far back as the year 1868, for which they had hitherto been unable to obtain payment, and soliciting the intervention of Her Majesty's Government on their behalf, and that he was to request us to take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what steps, if any, could be properly taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we gather from the letter of Messrs. Laycock and Co. to your Lordship that credit was given to the Turkish Government, and that that Government is in fact and in law the debtor of Messrs. Laycock and Co. for coals supplied by their agent.

But, in our opinion, some further proof of this fact should be supplied, or the real state of things ascertained on the spot.

And we should advise your Lordship, as the convenient course, to instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Constantinople to inquire if the claim of Messrs. Laycock is founded on facts, and if the claim be so founded, to press the claim upon the Ottoman Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 18th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers relating to a case pending in the Consular Court at Constantinople, in which the Italian vessel "Arturo" was claimed as a derelict by the crews of two English steamers who found the "Arturo" abandoned in the Black Sea; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Her Majesty's Ambassador and to the Judge of Her Majesty's Consular Court at Constantinople for their guidance in the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in England the question whether the ship was derelict or not would be but an element in calculating the amount of salvage.

But the telegram from Sir H. Elliot states that the point whether derelict or not determines the jurisdiction, and the Italian Consul admits that if the ship were derelict the jurisdiction lies with the British.

We are of opinion that in this state of things your Lordship might properly instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador and the Judges of Her Majesty's Consular Court at Constantinople to confer with the Italian Minister and Consul at Constantinople, and endeavour to have this preliminary question of jurisdiction, depending upon simple facts, determined by the two Consuls on the evidence to the facts of derelict agreeing; and, in the event of their differing, to refer the decision to some third person upon whom they may beforehand agree.

The vessel in the meanwhile should remain under sequestration, or be let go on security.

Elliot's views, and as to any instructions which it would be proper to give his Excellency for his guidance in any case of a similar nature which might hereafter arise.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the views of Sir H. Elliot are in the main correct.

We consider that no ship against which a claim for salvage has been made on behalf of British subjects at Constantinople should be allowed to leave those waters till full security for the amount of salvage claimed has been given to the satisfaction of, and with the consent of, the British authorities.

But as the detention of any vessel leads to great expense and loss, and as the security represents the ship, and no injury therefore can be done to the salvors by her release when security has been given, we are of opinion that Sir H. Elliot should be instructed to consent to the release of all ships similarly circumstanced with the "Arturo" as soon as security has been given, and that British subjects should be informed that they will not be justified in attempts to retain possession of vessels which they may have salved after such security has been given.

That your Lordship fully concurred with Sir H. Elliot as to the desirability of that exemption, but before proceeding farther he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the inclosed papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, under the terms of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act (copy inclosed) the Secretary of State had the power and would be borne out in issuing directions, either directly or through the instrumentality of an Order in Council, exempting the members of Her Majesty's Embassy at Constantinople from being summoned as defendants before the Consular Courts in Turkey, including the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople.

That, in our opinion, the Secretary of State has not the power under the terms of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, either directly or through the instrumentality of an Order in Council, to exempt the members of Her Majesty's Embassy from being summoned as defendants before the Consular Courts in Turkey, including the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople.

My Lord, Temple, March 22, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter dated the 19th March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Sir Francis Goldsmid,* complaining that a law had been passed by the Roumanian Chambers prohibiting the grant of licences to sell spirituous liquors to any persons who are not electors, and as the Jews under existing laws have no political rights, they were consequently debarred from carrying on their trade.

That Sir Francis Goldsmid appealed to the XLVIth Article of the Convention with Turkey of 19th August, 1858.

Lord Enfield was further pleased to say that he therefore inclosed us a copy of that Convention, and requested that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government, in concert with other Powers who are parties to the said Convention, can properly make any representations to the Roumanian Government on the subject.

Lord Enfield added in a postscript that he likewise transmitted to us three despatches from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Bucharest on the subject.†

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the measure, according to Mr. Consul Green's despatches, is passed with the view of excluding persons who may be Jews from the exercise of a gainful trade, and in this light is a harsh measure, against which Her Majesty's Government may in concert with other Powers make a representation to the Roumanian Government.

But we are of opinion that there is nothing in the measure, itself contrary to the XLVIth or any other Article of the Convention with Turkey of the 19th August, 1858.

And that the measure, though pressing with great severity as suggested against Jews, is a regulation affecting all other persons who may not be electors, and that possibly very good reasons may be given for not granting licences to persons who are not electors.

And further to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it would be competent to your Lordship to instruct Her Majesty's Consular officers on the north coast of Africa to issue notices providing that no negroes should be embarked on board British vessels, whatever might be the condition of such negroes, without a pass from the Consular officer at the port of embarkation; and in the event of our advising that it would be within the competency of the Secretary of State that he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to favour your Lordship with the draft of such a notice as might be properly issued.

Temple, June 6, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for consideration, copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Deputy Judge of the Supreme Consular Court of the Levant, relative to the case of a British subject accused of having committed a crime in a foreign country taking refuge within the jurisdiction of the Consular Court at Constantinople.

2. That in the case mentioned by Mr. Cookson, under no circumstances would the Consular Court have had the power to surrender him, there being at present no extradition Treaty between Great Britain and Austria. But your Lordship would be obliged if we would favour you with our opinion as to what course should have been pursued by the Judge of the Consular Court, had a similar application been made by the Consul of a country with which Great Britain has an extradition Treaty.

3. That the case mentioned by Mr. Cookson was that of a British subject who, having committed the offence of embezzlement in Austria, was found a fugitive from justice in Turkey, where Great Britain has extra-territorial jurisdiction.

That that case gave rise to the following questions:—

1. Has a foreign Consul, or other person acting under the authority of a foreign Government, in a country where Great Britain has extra-territorial jurisdiction, the right of making a requisition to the Judge of a Consular Court for the surrender of a fugitive criminal who is within or who is suspected of being within that jurisdiction?

That the Extradition Act of 1870 states (section 7) that "a requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal of any foreign State, who is in, or suspected of being in, the United Kingdom, shall be made to a Secretary of State by some person recognized by the Secretary of State as a Diplomatic Representative of that foreign State," &c.; and in section 17, which provides for the case of fugitive criminals in British possessions, it was stated that: "The requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal who is in, or suspected of being in, a British possession, may be made to the Governor of that British possession by any person recognized by that Governor, as a Consul-General, Consul, or Vice-Consul, or (if the fugitive criminal has escaped from a Colony or dependency of a foreign State on behalf of which the requisition is made) as the Governor of such Colony or dependency."

That it appeared from the two sections of the Extradition Act above referred to that provision was made for the extradition of fugitive criminals found either in British territory or in British possessions, but there did not appear to be any special provision for the extradition of fugitive criminals found within British extra-territorial jurisdiction; and therefore your Lordship would be glad to be informed how such cases should be dealt with.

2. The second question related to the surrender of native subjects.

That with the view of meeting the requirements of the laws of foreign countries a clause had been inserted in all the Extradition Treaties which Great Britain has concluded by virtue of the Act of 1870, stipulating for the reciprocal non-surrender of native subjects to be tried by the Tribunals of the country where the crime for which surrender was demanded, had been committed.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether, supposing that a Consular Court in a country where Great Britain has extra-territorial jurisdiction had the power to order extradition, it had the same power of refusing to surrender a British subject, fugitive from justice, who was found within the jurisdiction of the Consular Court, as a magistrate would have had the fugitive taken refuge in British territory.

That there was one more point in which your Lordship was desirous of having our opinion, viz.:—

What was the course which had been, or would be, pursued by the Criminal Courts in British territory with regard to the cases of native subjects whom they refused to surrender to be tried by a foreign Tribunal?

For murder and conspiracy to murder your Lordship apprehended that there would be no difficulty in trying the offender on the evidence produced by the foreign Government; but your Lordship would be glad to be informed how the cases of native subjects, charged with crime of less gravity, are or would be dealt with by British

1873

Tribunals, and whether the course pursued in such cases by British Tribunals could also be adopted by the British Consular Courts in countries where Great Britain had extra-territorial jurisdiction.

And that a copy of the Order in Council relative to the jurisdiction of Her Majesty in the dominions of the Sublime Ottoman Porte was inclosed for our information, as well as copies of the Extradition Treaties with Germany, Belgium, and Italy, which contained the clause above mentioned relative to the non-surrender of native subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Judge of the Consular Court could not, on the application of the Consul of a country with which Great Britain had an Extradition Treaty, give up a fugitive criminal who was a British subject.

Nor has a foreign Consul, or other person acting under the authority of a foreign Government in a country where Great Britain has extra-territorial jurisdiction the right (that is in the sense of a right which must be complied with, or may be enforced) of making a requisition to the Judge of a Consular Court for the surrender of a fugitive criminal who is within, or who is suspected of being within, that jurisdiction.

The reason is that the Extradition Act applies to Her Majesty's dominions and possessions only; another reason is that if the criminal be a British subject the Treaties are against such a surrender; if the criminal be not a British subject the Consular Judge or Court has no jurisdiction.

3. In reference to your Lordship's third question, we are of opinion that, except for treason, and except also for murder and manslaughter, and being accessory thereto, as to which the 24 & 25 Vict., cap. 100, gives jurisdiction, and except in the case of offences committed by a master seaman or apprentice employed, or within three months previous to the offence employed, in a British ship under 17 & 18 Vict., cap. 104, sec. 267, no native subject can be tried in England for any offence committed on land if in the territories of another Power.

At common law such cases as those suggested in your Lordship's question could not be dealt with by British Tribunals.

The Consular Court jurisdiction is limited to offences committed by British subjects within their jurisdiction, that is, in the foreign dominions within which they exercise extra-territorial jurisdiction or on board British ships.

Their jurisdiction, therefore, is even more limited than that of Tribunals properly called British Tribunals.

Temple, June 23, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 14th June instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 18th March relative to the case of the "Arturo," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which your Lordship addressed to Sir Henry Elliot,* founded on our Report, and containing instructions for his guidance in any future cases of a similar nature.

Lord Enfield also transmitted to us Sir Henry Elliot's reply,† in which he asks for further instructions, together with Sir Philip Francis' Report upon the subject,‡ and stated that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on Sir Philip Francis' views as set forth in the Report.

Lord Enfield further said the previous papers were also inclosed for reference if necessary.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the salvors have a right to bring or place the property which they have salved within the jurisdiction of their own Courts.

This right is founded upon the principle that the salvors have a lien upon the things salved, which they may hold in their keeping till they are rewarded, or till security, upon which they can rely, is given for their receiving their rewards.

We do not see any distinction between cases of salvage, where the owners through the master and crew remain in possession of the ship and cargo, and cases of derelict.

And in all cases, we are of opinion that the salvors, British or foreign, may come to their own Court, both to obtain the security, and also to assess the amount of rewards in the exercise of its jurisdiction.

The security consequently should, in all contested cases, be given to the Court which will decide upon the merits of the cases.

We agree with the views of Sir Philip Francis, and consider that the rule "Actus Sequitur forum rei" does not apply to cases of salvage where the maritime lien gives the jurisdiction.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th June, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting the difference between the Turkish Government and the Danube and Black Sea Railway Company, and the request of the latter for the good offices of Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople in support of their agent; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what instructions should be sent to Sir H. Elliot in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from the previous papers which have been transmitted to us that Sir H. Elliot is well acquainted with the difficulties which have long existed between the Porte and the Company.

We are of opinion that Sir H. Elliot may properly now be instructed again to press the Sublime Porte to bring this matter without farther delay to a just and satisfactory conclusion, and to exert his influence to induce the Porte to submit those differences to arbitration or to a Mixed Commission.

Temple, July 8, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, relative to the refusal of the Ottoman Government to pay to the holders of Syrian Indemnity Consolidé bonds the interest due for the time during which the bonds were allowed to remain overdue; and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador in regard to the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That assuming that the debt secured by the bonds is one as to which diplomatic representation may properly be made, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople may properly be instructed to press for the payment of the interest on the bonds while overdue.

But we doubt whether the interest should be taken at 12 per cent.

It appears from the letter of the 23rd August, 1872, from Messrs. Black and Co. to Mr. Consul Eldridge (Inclosure 2), that the stipulated interest was 6 per cent., and we are of opinion that such rate of 6 per cent., with perhaps compound interest, is the utmost that the Ottoman Government can be called upon to pay.

We have no information respecting the nature of these bonds or the obligations under which the Ottoman Government may be to satisfy the debt which for the purpose of this Report we assume to be a debt due from or guaranteed by the Ottoman Government, and not a purely local debt, for which security may have been taken from or upon the customs or taxes of some particular town or district.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, together with a memorandum drawn up by Sir P. Francis, Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge in that city, as to certain new regulations of the Porte concerning the transmission of property; and your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with any observation which we might have to offer on the subject to which the papers related.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if the new law had been communicated to Sir Henry Elliot officially, or the interests of any British subject were compromised, we should be of opinion that Sir Henry Elliot might rightly be instructed to remonstrate against a law the operation of which would have affected the transmission of property held beneficially by British subjects, if under a fiction at least under a fiction recognized and sanctioned by Ottoman law.

But as the opinions of Mr. Cookson, Sir P. Francis, and Sir H. Elliot concur that no mischief to any British interest will probably follow as a consequence of the new law, we are of opinion that the course recommended by Sir H. Elliot should be followed.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying draft of a revised Order in Council, which had been prepared by Mr. Riley in consultation with Sir Philip Francis, the Judge in the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople, for regulating Consular jurisdiction in the Ottoman dominions.

That the draft in question was a reconstruction of the Order in Council of 1864, with such additions and amendments as time and experience would seem to render necessary.

That he (Lord Tenterden) was to inclose two memoranda drawn up by Mr. Riley, together with the papers therein referred to, and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the draft in question is right and proper, and might be approved by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Riley, with its inclosures,* containing further remarks on the draft Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Ottoman dominions, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, in connection with those which were forwarded to us on the 4th August, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have gone through and considered the Forms in the Schedules.

In Form No. 6 the word "on" should be read instead of the word "for," underlined.

In Form No 9 the note marked 1 seems to us to require the statement of a fact which is not material, and the note might, in our opinion, properly be omitted.

And in Form No. 10 the words "stating the relationship, if any, to the testator," might also, and for the same reason, be omitted.

In Form No. 21, after the word "creditors" the words "or any person interested in the administration or distribution of the property of the deceased" should, in our opinion, be inserted.

Subject to these alterations, we are of opinion that the Schedules may properly be made part of the Order in Council.

My Lord, Temple, October 3, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 8th July last he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the other papers relating to the matter, a further letter from Mr. Smylie Robson, stating the grounds on which he considered that interest at the rate of 12 per cent. ought to be paid by the Porte on Syrian Consolidés for the time during which the bonds were allowed to remain overdue; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would again take this matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as the bonds were issued at the rate of 6 per cent., Mr. Robson's reasons for pressing for a higher rate of interest seem to us inapplicable.

But, in our opinion, the Ottoman Government may properly be urged to pay the bondholders compound interest on the overdue interest.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received September 15.)

My Lord, Temple, September 15, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence which has taken place between the India Office and the Foreign Office as to the claims set up by certain members of the foreign Consular Body at Bombay for exemption from payment of municipal and other taxes.

That these claims were disallowed with the exception of that of the Turkish Consul, who based his claim for exemption from customs duties on the VIIIth Article of the Treaty between Great Britain and Turkey of the 5th January, 1809.

That a copy of this Treaty was inclosed, from which it would be seen that the Article in question stipulated that "similar privileges and immunities to those granted to English Consuls resident in the Ottoman dominions shall be duly afforded to the 'Shahbenders' (Consuls) of the Sublime Porte," who may be appointed at Malta and in the dominions of His Britannic Majesty.

That although it seemed difficult to suppose that the Article in question could have been meant by the negotiator to bear the construction sought to be put upon it, it was thought better to recommend that any tax imposed upon the Turkish Consul by the Government of Bombay should, if objected to, not be enforced.

That the Turkish Consul-General had now further claimed exemption from municipal rates and taxes under the same Article, alleging that British Consuls in Turkey are exempt from all taxes, whether Government or municipal.

That the Indian Government gave, in their despatch on the subject, their reasons for taking exception to this claim, and as the matter was one of very wide bearing, affecting the position of all the Turkish Consuls in the British dominions, and involving, moreover, the possibility of claims for reciprocity of treatment on the part of Consuls of other Powers who have Treaty rights to "most favoured" treatment, your Lordship would be glad to have our opinion on the extent of the privileges and immunities which might properly be claimed by Turkish Consuls under the Article of the Treaty in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to

Report—

That the words "privileges and immunities" in Article VIII of the Treaty of the 5th January, 1809, are, in our opinion, open to no other construction than that contended for by the Turkish Consul at Bombay, who is entitled to an immunity reciprocal with, or the same as a British Consul receives in the Ottoman dominions.

We are unable to agree with the argument that, because India was not in 1809 a part of Her Majesty's dominions, India now is not within the words of Article VIII.

However wide or disagreeable the consequences may be, we are of opinion that the claim of exemption put forward by the Turkish Consul must be allowed.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 19th instant, stating that with reference to our Reports of the 29th August and 1st September last relative to the new Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Ottoman dominions, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir P. Francis, with a revised scale of Bankruptcy fees which it was proposed to levy, and certain other proposed amendments in the Table of Fees, and he was to request that we would give our immediate attention to this matter, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether those alterations are right and proper, and may be approved by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

My Lord, Temple, December 2, 1873.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 25th November last, stating that with reference to the letter from the Foreign Office of the 27th September, and the reply of the 3rd October, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople respecting the claims made by British subjects for interest on overdue Syrian Consolidé bonds, and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Sir Henry Elliot.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the fact stated by Sir H. Elliot in his despatch of the 6th November, that the bonds derived their chief value from their being terminable, and that the interest was on that account calculated at 6 per cent., does not appear to have been brought prominently before the Law Officers and Dr. Deane on former occasions.

This circumstance affects the rights of the case very materially, and we agree with Sir P. Francis in the opinion expressed in his letter of the 31st October to Sir H. Elliot, that the bondholders were entitled to be paid at the rate of 12 per cent. for the time during which the bonds were overdue.

Sir H. Elliot may, we think, properly be instructed to that effect. Your Lordship would probably think it right to leave the time for making the claim to Sir H. Elliot's judgment.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 26th November ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 4th instant on the subject of marriages in Ottoman dominions of Maltese subjects of Her Majesty, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from the Judge of the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople, asking for specific instructions as to the course to be pursued by him in regard to the administration of the intestate estate of a Maltese named Antonie Aquilina. He was also to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir Philip Francis in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we regret to differ from the opinion which apparently is entertained by Sir P. Francis on the subject of the marriage of British Maltese subjects in the Ottoman dominions.

But we are of opinion that a Maltese may marry in the Ottoman dominions according to the law affecting marriages in Malta. The absence of any lex loci in the Ottoman dominions regulating the marriages of Roman Catholics causes foreign Roman Catholics who marry there to revert to the law to which they are naturally subject, viz., the law which prevails in the place of domicile, which in this case is Malta, and that all the consequences following the marriage of a Maltese British subject within the Ottoman Empire are the same as if the marriage had been celebrated in Malta.

We are of opinion that British Maltese subjects are not compelled to avail themselves of the Consular Marriage Act.

Mr. Hammond also stated that he was to request that Dr. Deane might be prepared to appear as counsel on both those days, and that Lord Monck was to be examined generally as to his entire previous ignorance of the St. Alban's raid, and as to the date at which he first heard of it, and also any other point which we might think material.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, direct that the claimants be informed that the answer of the United States' Government (particularly as to the original purchase being made on account of Mr. Wigg, and not on account of Messrs. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from Mr. Stewart, with its inclosure, respecting a claim of his nephews, which had been overlooked, as he alleged, through fraud, for compensation for cotton destroyed in February, 1865, by the United States' troops; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what steps could be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, a vague and general allegation of fraud committed by some persons, not named and said to be dead, is not a sufficient reason why Her Majesty's Government should in any way interfere in support of Mr. Stewart's supplemental claim before the Commissioners at Washington.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 26th August last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from Messrs. Ellman, Raper, and Ellman, inclosing a copy of the evidence upon which Mrs. Cassin based her claim against the United States' Government; and he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the applicants.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have not before us the Report of Mr. S. C. Greene, made, we presume, to the United States' Government, and referred to in the evidence of Mr. Young, and in Messrs. Ellman, Raper and Ellman's letter of the 24th ultimo to your Lordship, and upon which Report Messrs. Ellman supposes a decision of the Spanish Claims Commission was arrived at.

But upon the evidence now sent, and upon which Mrs. Cassin places her claim, we are of opinion that your Lordship may give instructions that this claim be brought to the favourable notice of the United States' Government, and that Messrs. Ellman may be informed to that effect.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Home Office, requesting that Her Majesty's Minister at Washington might be instructed to apply to the United States' Government for the extradition of a British subject named John Robinson on a charge of absconding with money belonging to his creditors; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and advise your Lordship whether this is a case in which extradition could properly be asked for.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That John Robinson, the British subject whose extradition your Lordship is asked to apply for to the United States' Government, has been guilty of a misdemeanour, but has not committed nor can he be charged with robbery or any of the other crimes named in Article X of the Treaty of the 9th August, 1842.

We are therefore of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to apply to the United States' Government for his extradition under the Treaty.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington in regard to a claim upon the United States' Government, put forward by Mr. A. Ravenscroft, for certain goods belonging to him, which, he alleged, were pillaged by the United States' troops in 1865; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Sir E. Thornton.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly instruct Sir E. Thornton to bring the claim of Mr. Ravenscroft to the notice of the United States' Government.

The United States' Government may possibly state sufficient reasons for declining to entertain the claim; but those reasons cannot be the same as the reasons given by the United States' Government for rejecting the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co., to which case Sir E. Thornton refers in his letter to your Lordship.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, relative to the manner in which the declarations of aliens should be taken in the United States so as to be valid in this country; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the despatch into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir E. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Sir E. Thornton may properly be instructed that whenever he shall be thereto required, and whenever he shall see necessary, he may administer to an alien any oath or take from an alien an affidavit or affirmation.

We are of opinion that the oath, affidavit, or affirmation should be administered or taken only upon matters arising in and to be determined within the United Kingdom.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th February ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 14th January last, relative to the claim of Messrs. Shand and Co. against the United States' Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Bateson and Co. (February 21), replying to the objections taken by Mr. Fish in regard to the claim, and requesting that a further representation might be made to the United States' Government in support of it.

Mr. Hammond added that he was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Messrs. Bateson.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the attention of Messrs. Bateson and Co. may be called to the fact that Messrs. Shand and Co. brought in the evidence of Mr. Cromwell, from whose statement it appears that the cotton in question was bought by him for Mr. Wigg.

If this statement was incorrect, Messrs. Shand had from the first the opportunity of putting the matter in the right way, and pointing out that Mr. Wigg was but an agent and not a principal.

This opportunity they neglected, and we are of opinion that Messrs. Bateson may be answered that Her Majesty's Government cannot make any further representation to the Government of the United States on the subject of the claim of Messrs. Shand.

Mr. Howard thereupon presented the memorial to the Commissioners, who at first gave permission for it to be filed, but had since withdrawn that permission and ordered the additional claim to be struck out.

That he (Lord Tenterden) was now instructed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Stewart protesting against the decision of the Commissioners; and he was to request that we would take it into our consideration, with the previous correspondence relating to Mr. Stewart's supplemental claim sent therewith, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Stewart.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding correspondence respecting the seizure of the schooner "Bessie," of New Brunswick, by the United States' Custom-house officials; and that he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion on the case.

1873

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in this case it would seem that the British vessel was seized in British waters, and that great violence was used towards her crew by the seizors.

At the same time it is evident, from the statement of the master of the British vessel, that he was endeavouring to escape from legal custody, and some considerable allowance must be made for the continuance of the pursuit beyond legal limits, and for some violence in regaining possession of a ship which was, in the circumstances, endeavouring to evade a possible lawful demand.

These being the facts, and the considerations applicable to those facts, and looking to the delay in making any complaint, and the absence of the result of any inquiry from the British Consul on the spot, we are of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly bring the case to the attention of the United States' Government at present.

Your Lordship, however, may think fit to and, in our opinion, may properly direct that inquiry into the conduct of the British master, and the truth of the facts stated by him, should be made of the British Consul, particularly as to the latter part of the transaction after the ship had been brought in.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there is nothing either in the conduct of the Governor of Washington Territory, or in the order of the President of the United States, which your Lordship can properly direct Sir E. Thornton to bring to the notice of the United States' Government as contrary to the rights of British subjects settled in the Island of San Juan.

The order, as Sir E. Thornton observes, in his letter to your Lordship of the 7th February, 1873, shows a desire that British subjects should not be disturbed in any rights which they may possess.

And the letter from Mr. Hamilton Fish to Sir E. Thornton of the 27th January, 1873, gives a satisfactory explanation of the action taken by the Governor of Washington Territory.

Sir E. Thornton may, however, be properly instructed to keep this subject before him, and to communicate, as he has hitherto done, with Mr. Hamilton Fish, if any occasion should call upon him so to do.

The former correspondence was inclosed for reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government cannot, in our opinion, suggest the claim of Dr. Rufus Bratton for compensation.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the despatch into our consideration and have the honour to report—

We are further of opinion that very great inconvenience may, in the settlement of the claims, be occasioned if money is raised on the copies of or on the assignments of the awards, and that Mr. Howard should be instructed to have Rule 17 cancelled as he suggests.

My Lord, Temple, April 3, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence noted in the margin relative to a claim preferred by the Great Western Steam-Ship Company against the State of New York for the return of head-money on passengers which was alleged to have been levied between the years 1838 and 1844, and a portion of which had already been recovered by the Company.

That a copy of the Claims Convention of the 8th February, 1853, referred to in Sir E. Thornton's despatch, was likewise inclosed; and he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the claim of the Great Western Steam-Ship Company was one which could properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the claim preferred by the Great Western Steam-Ship Company against the State of New York cannot properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

The claim is for head-money on passengers illegally levied from April 1838 to October 1844.

The levying of this head-money was declared in 1849 to be unconstitutional.

The head-money levied from October 1844 to July 1846, and which had been paid under protest, was subsequently repaid, but neither at the time of this repayment, nor apparently at any other time, was the retaining of the tax from April 1838 to October 1844 protested against, or made a ground of complaint by or on the part of the Company.

All that Mr. Miles says is that the reason why the whole amount had not been refunded to the Company was that the head-money comprised within the earlier period had not been paid under protest.

He does not say that the money was formally applied for.

What became of the memorial of 1855 inclosed in Mr. Archibald's despatch to Sir E. Thornton does not appear.

But it is strange that no memorial or application should, at or about that time, when the matter was recent and public, be shown to have been preferred by the Company.

This delay and laches on the part of the Company in seeking a remedy should, in our opinion, induce Her Majesty's Government not to support the claim against the United States' Government.

And we are also of opinion that the claim is barred by the Articles I, III, and V of the Convention of the 8th February, 1853, referred to by Sir E. Thornton.

Lord Tenterden was pleased further to state that he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be sent to Sir Thornton, and that the former papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Dr. Tumblety having thought fit not to offer any evidence in support of his first claim, notwithstanding the letter sent to him by the Foreign Office on the 9th January, 1873, informing him "that it would be better to defer any representation on the subject of the second arrest till the Claims Commission should have heard the evidence upon the first arrest, and determined the claim arising out of it," Sir E. The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received May 10.)

Temple, May 9, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th April ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 23rd September last, as to the treatment of the British vessel "Grace" by the local authorities at Darien, United States, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Edward Thornton, forwarding a copy of the reply which he had received from the United States' Government to the application which he was instructed to make for compensation for the persons injured. Mr. Hammond further stated that he was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion of the case, and added that the former papers were sent for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the reply of Mr. Fish inclosed in the despatch of Sir E. Thornton does not satisfactorily dispose of the question as to the treatment of Mr. Irvine.

Our Report of the 23rd September, 1872, was founded on the Judgment of the United States' Commissioner, a copy of which was inclosed in Sir E. Thornton's despatch of the 13th July, 1873.

That Report was contained in a newspaper, and was transmitted as authentic by Mr. Boutwell, the Secretary of the Treasury, to Mr. Fish, on the 3rd August, 1871. No notice appears to have been taken of this document by Mr. Fish till an application was made to him upon the subject of Mr. Irvine's grievances by Sir E. Thornton on the 10th July, 1872. In reply to Sir E. Thornton's despatch of that date, Mr. Hall, the Acting Secretary of State, for the first time incloses to him a copy of the newspaper report of the decision of the United States' Commissioner as being an authentic report of his Judgment, without any comment. It appears to be impossible for Mr. Fish to be allowed to dispute the authenticity of that Report, more especially as he does not suggest the existence of any other Report; and it seems to us to be difficult for him to refuse to be bound by the Report of his own Commissioner communicated to the British Minister as it was in the manner which we have described. Under these circumstances, we think that the Report of the United States' Commissioner may properly be brought again before the United States' Government as being conclusive of the merits of the question; and they may be asked to consider: Whether it becomes a great commercial country like the United States to refuse all consideration of compensation to the subjects of a friendly Power for injuries inflicted upon those subjects by a magistrate of the United States, who "has grievously erred in judgment to a degree which the United States' Commissioner can scarcely characterize as less than persecution of Captain Irvine, and through him indirectly of the owners of the ship and shippers of the cargo, whose interests in these proceedings were undoubtedly greatly damaged. The proceedings in the defendants' (Campbell's) Court against the ship and Captain Irvine in the several cases presented in the testimony are also, so far as they are disclosed by the records offered in evidence, irregular and informal to an extent which the United States' Commissioner in his experience has never seen exceeded."

He continues: "It is in my opinion particularly unfortunate that they should have been had in cases where subjects and the property of subjects of a friendly foreign Power were made defendants, as they cannot but have the effect of bringing the administration of justice with us into disrepute, and injuring those commercial relations which we should all, both Courts and citizens, seek to protect and foster."

Although in the Commissioner's Report he suggests the possibility of the magistrate being liable in damages to Mr. Irvine for his conduct towards him, we are by no means satisfied that any damages could be recovered, as the Court in which an action might be brought might decide, as the Commissioner appears to have done, that the error of the magistrate was only one of judgment.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and inclosures, from Mr. Mogridge, which had been forwarded to your Lordship by Messrs. Harrison, Beal, and Harrison, and which related to his claims against the United States' Government; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Mogridge.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly direct that Mr. Mogridge be informed that the decision of the Commissioners must be considered as conclusive by

Sir,

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th instant, in which you state that Lord Granville, after directing my attention to the XXIst Article of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, 1871, requests that I would prepare a confidential memorandum for use in any argument which may be raised upon the point mentioned in your letter before the Commission appointed by such Treaty.

I will at my earliest convenience place myself in communication with the Librarian at the Foreign Office for the purpose indicated in your letter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding a copy of an Act which had been passed by the Legislature of Newfoundland for carrying out the provisions of the Treaty of Washington in regard to fisheries; and he was to request us to take the documents into consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion whether it sufficiently complied with the terms of the Treaty of Washington, especially with reference to the proviso at the end of the first section of the Act.

That a copy of the Treaty of Washington was annexed, and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to inclose a despatch to Sir E. Thornton, forwarding a draft of Protocol fixing the 1st July as the date at which the provisions of Articles XVIII to XXV and Article XXX of the Treaty should come into operation, which he (Sir E. Thornton) had been authorized to sign if the United States' Government concurred in it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Protocol which recites the Acts of the Imperial Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, and of the Legislature of Prince Edward Island, should also recite the Act passed by the Legislature of Newfoundland, particularly with reference to Article XXXII of the Treaty of Washington, 1871.

In reference to the proviso at the end of the first section of the Act of Newfoundland, we are of opinion that the clause should be so framed as expressly to cover the close time for the herring fishery, and the observation by American fishermen of the rules and regulations imposed upon the fishermen of Newfoundland in that particular.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. H. Howard,* Agent to the Claims Commission at Washington, requesting to be informed whether Her Majesty's Government would recognize an assignment of a claim properly executed and placed on the file of the Commission, and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the matter into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Howard.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That such claims as those in question may be made the subject of a perfectly valid assignment, and that in case of a claim being admitted and money paid in respect thereof, Her Majesty's Government could not refuse to recognize a legally constituted assignee.

We see no objection to Mr. Howard being informed of this and being permitted to communicate his information to any claimant who may consult him. But we think Mr. Howard should do no more than acknowledge the receipt of any notice of an assignment and keep a list of such notices.

My Lord, Temple, June 2, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 3rd January as to the claim of George Wigg for compensation for the seizure of the British steamer "Virgin" by the United States' authorities at Mobile, at the end of the civil war, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. F. B. Smart, Official Liquidator of the European Trading Company, requesting that compensation might be recovered for the creditors and shareholders of the Company for the loss of that vessel; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Smart.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. F. B. Smart, the Official Liquidator of the European Trading Company, stands in no better position as to his claim under the Treaty of Washington, 1871, than the orignal claimant, Mr. G. Wigg, and that Mr. F. B. Smart may properly be answered that your Lordship must decline to support his claim with the Commissioners, or to communicate on his claim with the Government of the United States.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office in regard to the Act recently framed by the Legislature of Newfoundland for giving effect to the Fishery Article in the Treaty of Washington; and he was to request us to take the letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the Act in question did sufficiently comply with the terms of that Treaty, and as to the steps that should be taken for giving effect to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Act does sufficiently comply with the terms of the Treaty.

The suggestion made by Lord Kimberley that Mr. Fish be asked to sign a Protocol in respect of Newfoundland, similar to that which has been granted respecting Canada and Prince Edward Island, may be properly adopted.

But that Protocol should contain a clause following as nearly as possible the words of the proviso at the end of the Ist Article of the Newfoundland Act.

Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received June 10.)

My Lord, Temple, June , 1873.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed to refer me to the XXIInd Article of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, 1871, which provides for the appointment of a Mixed Commission "to determine having regard to the privileges accorded by the United States to the subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, in return for the privileges accorded to the citizens of the United States under Article XVIII of this Treaty."

That it is possible that, in the discussions which may take place between the Commissioners, the question may be raised as to the right of reservation for British subjects of exclusive fishery in the bays which are found in various part of the British American coast, and in dealing with this question the extent of the territorial rights of Great Britain within such bays may come under consideration.

That this point, which I should recognize under the description of the "Headland" question, had been frequently under discussion, and besides any information in regard to it which might be obtained from general sources with which I am acquainted, the archives of the Foreign Office it is believed could supply such information.

Mr. Hammond further stated that the Librarian of the Foreign Office had consequently been instructed to examine the archives for that purpose; but that Her Majesty's Government considered it desirable that without loss of time a Confidential memorandum should be prepared for use in any argument, supposing the point referred to should be raised before the Commission.

That your Lordship requested, therefore, that I would, at my earliest convenience, prepare such a memorandum, and besides the assistance which the Librarian of the Office might be able to render me by providing me with materials, your Lordship proposed that I should have the assistance of the gentleman who would shortly be appointed to attend the Mixed Commission under the XXIIIrd Article of the Treaty as Agent on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have prepared a memorandum for use in argument supposing the point referred to in Mr. Hammond's letter should be raised before the Commission.

I shall be glad to avail myself of your Lordship's proposal, that before finally completing the draft I should receive the assistance of the gentleman who may be appointed to attend the Mixed Commission under the XXIIIrd Article of the Treaty as Agent on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received June 30.)

My Lord,
Temple, June 30, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 22nd April, relative to Dr. Tumblety's claim against the United States' Government, he (Mr. Hammond) was requested by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Thornton, reporting on the case, and suggesting that he should be authorized to address a note to the United States' Government, stating that Dr. Tumblety had presented a claim on account of his arrest, and inquiring on what ground the arrest was ordered; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Sir E. Thornton on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would appear from the letters 1 and 6, June 1865, from Dr. Tumblety to Sir F. Bruce, Inclosures Nos. 4 and 5 in Sir E. Thornton's despatch No. 246, that Dr. Tumblety was not altogether ignorant of the causes of his arrest.

But we see no reason why Sir E. Thornton should not be instructed to write the note which he suggests, provided he is careful in wording that note not to commit Her Majesty's Government to the support of a doubtful claim.

Sir E. Thornton may also be instructed to communicate confidentially with Her Majesty's Consul at St. Louis, in order to ascertain as far as may be what the true facts connected with Dr. Tumblety's arrest were. We submit this suggestion to the consideration of your Lordship, more particularly because we have no information as to what, if anything, was done by Dr. Tumblety in the memorandum, Inclosure No. 8 in Sir E. Thornton's despatch No. 246.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 4.)

My Lord,
Temple, July 4, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Admiralty, calling attention to an Article in the United States' Naval Regulations of 1870, which relates to convoys, and which is thought by the Board to be contrary to international law, and also inquiring whether your Lordship was of opinion that any change is desirable in the Article on convoy in Her Majesty's Regulations for the navy.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the letter into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the decision given by Lord Stowell in the case of the "Maria," and affirmed on appeal, is of the highest value upon the right to visit ships under convoy.

Your Lordship is aware that that decision, and the principles upon which it was based, and the results to which it led, formed the subject of much discussion, and gave rise to a difference of opinion in which this country stood almost, if not quite, alone against all the other Maritime Powers of the time. (Wheaton's "Modern Law of Nations," Edn. 1845, p. 391; Hautefeuille, "Des Droits et des Devoirs des Nations Neutres," tit. xi, ch. 3.)

It may then well be doubted, in our opinion, whether the assertion in the present day of the principles laid down in the "Maria" would not be prejudical instead of advantageous to the interests of Great Britain, and the Admiralty might, we consider, be informed that your Lordship is of opinion that notwithstanding the decision in the "Maria," naval officers should be instructed not to insist on visiting ships under convoy.

We see no reason for altering the 11th Article on convoy in Her Majesty's Regulations for the navy. This Article seems to us quite clear and sufficient for the purpose.

In the event of any change being made as suggested with reference to the question of search of vessels under convoy, the rules laid down in Articles XXIV and XXIX of the Treaty of 1801 between Russia and Sweden (Martens Recueil, vii, pp. 329-331) seem to afford protection to the rights both of neutrals and belligerents, and any breach of the duty of a neutral in convoying enemy's ships or ships carrying contraband of war would be a just cause of complaint on the part of the belligerent, and no question can, since the Declaration respecting maritime law of the 30th March, 1856, now arise as to enemy's goods on board neutral ships between the Powers who signed that Declaration.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 23rd February, 1869, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Isaac Parr, forwarding depositions in support of his claim and of the claims of William and Frederick Parr and of Mrs. Elizabeth Luck against the United States; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the steps that should be taken in regard to them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the claims of Messrs. Parr and Mrs. Luck may, in our opinion, be brought to the favourable consideration of the United States' Government.

The claimants, British subjects, appear to have had their property seized by the Confederate troops, and afterwards, on the disappearance from their neighbourhood of these troops, to have recovered a part of their property, and been in the peaceful occupation and use of it, when they were in July 1875 deprived of the whole remaining portion of the property by the authority of the United States' officers.

It is for this latter act, however, and not for any loss occasioned by the acts of the Confederates, that any claim for compensation can be made.

There is no sufficient account of this loss, and the claim must therefore necessarily be general.

We assume that the long delay since 1869, which appears to have been the date of the last Report, can be accounted for, but no reason is assigned or excuse offered for that delay in the papers with which we have been furnished.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Herbert's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a copy of a letter from the Foreign Office, inclosing a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, with inclosures, upon the subject of the abduction of Samuel Joy, a citizen of the United States.

That your Lordship desired Mr. Herbert to request me to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion whether, if the circumstances of the case were such as were described by Mr. Fish, the case was one to call for the release of Samuel Joy, and his restoration to the territory of the United States.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That assuming the facts stated by Mr. Fish to be correctly stated, and that there is nothing to be added to them which would in any substantial degree qualify them, I am of opinion that the violation of territorial authority of the United States has undoubtedly occurred. On the same assumption, the United States are entitled to reparation for the violation of their sovereignty, and probably the simplest and shortest mode of making such reparation would be by setting Mr. Joy at liberty within the territory of the United States. But I am unable positively to advise this course to be pursued or recommended by your Lordship to the Governor-General of the Dominion to be pursued without more information than I possess as to the means at the command of the Executive of the Dominion for interfering in cases of arrest on civil process.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 11.)

My Lord, Temple, November 10, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence respecting the case of Samuel Joy; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Hamilton Fish was quite justified in making the remark contained in his letter of the 9th October, 1873, to Sir E. Thornton, and that Mr. Joy, having been illegally brought into the Province of New Brunswick, should not have been kept in prison there by detainers.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 18.)

My Lord, Temple, November 17, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th November instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 30th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch (No. 435) from Sir Edward Thornton, inclosing copies of correspondence with Mr. Fish on the subject of the appointment of a third Commisioner in accordance with the XXIIIrd Article of the Treaty of Washington, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion upon the answer returned by Mr. Fish to Sir Edward Thornton's note of the 24th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Fish is in error when, in his letter to Sir E. Thornton, he infers that the right of nomination of a third Commissioner has not passed beyond the control of the two Governments, and that he believes that both the spirit and the letter of the Treaty intended that the nomination should be exercised by them concurrently.

Such undoubtedly was the letter and the spirit of Article XXIII, so long as the three months were unexpired, but the words of the provision that in case the third Commissioner shall not have been named within the three mouths, then the third Commissioner shall be named by the Representative at London of the Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, are so clear, both in themselves and in connection with the immediately preceding words in the same Article, that Mr. Fish may on this part of his letter be properly answered that Her Majesty's Government cannot agree with his interpretation of the Treaty in this respect.

With regard to that part of Mr. Fish's letter which refers to the proposal to select some Dutch gentleman, we are of opinion that, relating to a matter which is now at an end, no notice need be taken of that in the answer to Mr. Fish.

We suggest, however, for your Lordship's consideration, and as a matter of policy, not of right, that it may be well to answer Mr. Fish that although Her Majesty's Government wholly differs from him in the construction to be put upon the Article XXIII of the Treaty, Her Majesty's Government is willing to agree upon a third Commissioner to be named by the two Governments, but in the event of such agreement not being carried out within a short time, say one month, that Her Majesty's Government will insist on the provisions of Article XXIII being carried into effect.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received December 26.)

My Lord, Temple, December 23, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Whitley and Maddock (October 13), requesting that the claim of Messrs. C. and H. Wilson against the United States' Government may be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

Lord Tenterden also stated that the accompanying papers would show the nature of this claim, which was excluded from the Claims Commission because the seizure of the cotton from which it arose took place after the 9th April, 1865; and he was to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether it would be proper to forward this claim for the consideration of the United States' Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we cannot advise your Lordship to forward or support this claim without your receiving further explanation from Messrs. Wilson.

It appears to us that the place where the goods were seized, viz., Mobile, renders it probable that they had been acquired in exchange for goods which had been run through the blockade. The time also which was allowed to elapse between the seizure and the claim being first preferred seems to be unaccounted for.

We think that your Lordship should not prefer this claim until Messrs. Wilson have shown to you how and for what consideration they became possessed of the goods, and until they have explained the cause of the delay in bringing their loss to the attention of Her Majesty's Government. Messrs. Wilson should also bring before your Lordship the reasons given by the United States' Government for rejecting the claim preferred by them.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received February 17.)

Temple, February 15, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th November last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us farther despatches from Her Majesty's Minister in Venezuela relative to the claim of Mr. Agostini to compensation from the Venezuelan Government on account of his arrest and imprisonment in July 1871.

That we would see from those despatches that the Venezuelan Government refused to admit the justice of that claim, maintaining, on the evidence of the police, that Mr. Agostini was justly punished for refusing to appear when legally summoned before a Venezuelan Tribunal, and also for making use of disrespectful language towards the authorities of the Republic. Mr. Agostini, as we were aware, denied that he ever received a summons to appear before a Tribunal, or that he made use of any disrespectful language towards the authorities.

That in these circumstances he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the inclosed despatches into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should now be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That referring to the Report which we had the honour of making to your Lordship on the 12th November, 1872, and the subsequent correspondence between Mr. Middleton and Señor Barrios, we cannot find that Señor Barrios explains, or attempts to explain, the insult offered to the British Government in endeavouring to enforce the order for delivery of a horse after Mr. Middleton's letter to Señor Guzman. Nor does Señor Barrios refer to the continued detention of Señor Agostini, notwithstanding Mr. Middleton's remonstrance.

We are therefore still of opinion that Mr. Middleton may be instructed to press on the Venezuelan Government the necessity of making an apology to the British Government.

And we still think Mr. Agostini is entitled to some compensation.

Temple, February 25, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Carácas, together with former correspondence, respecting the status of British subjects and the children of British subjects born in Venezuela; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the particular case of G. Rodriguez, and also upon the instructions which should be given to Mr. Middleton as to the issuing of passports to British subjects about to leave Venezuela, who, while in that country, were considered by its Government as citizens of the Republic.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the declaration of Rodriguez forwarded by Señor Barrios to Mr. Middleton shows, in our opinion, that Rodriguez is not in any sense a British subject, and is not entitled to a certificate of British nationality.

In the case of persons born in Venezuela, and who by the law of England would be British subjects out of Venezuela, we are of opinion that Mr. Middleton may be instructed to grant passports to such persons on their leaving Venezuela.

Any difficulty which the Venezuelan Government might raise in such cases may perhaps be got over by inserting in the passport a paragraph reciting how the bearer of the passport is entitled to British nationality.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas, inclosing two Decrees issued by the President of Venezuela on the 14th February, relating to the rights and duties of foreigners in that Republic.

That the correspondence in 1869, alluded to in that despatch, was also inclosed, together with a despatch from Mr. Middleton, transmitting the President's Message to Congress, in which allusion was made to the position of foreigners.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any action is called for on the part of Her Majesty's Government with regard to the Decrees of the 14th February last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Middleton should be instructed to inform the Venezuelan Government that Her Majesty's Government (now, as in 1869) reserves to itself the right, if occasion should require it, of objecting to any claim on the part of the Venezuelan Republic at any future time to have relieved itself by its own Decree from responsibility towards Great Britain in respect to wrongs or injuries done to British subjects, for which the Venezuelan Republic would be liable to make compensation, either under the general law of nations, or under Treaty engagements.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas relative to the conduct of Señor Jacinto Guttierez, President of the State of Guayana, in sentencing to fine or imprisonment a subject named J. B. Mathison for an alleged want of respect towards authority.

And that he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Mr. Middleton in reply.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Middleton may, in our opinion, properly be instructed not to proceed farther in support of Mr. Mathison, who brought upon himself the punishment which was inflicted upon him, and to inform Señor Barrios that his explanation of the matter, taken with the evidence, has been received by her Majesty's Government with satisfaction.

My Lord, Temple, June 24, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 15th February relative to the case of Mr. Agostini, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further correspondence with Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas, from which we would see that the Venezuelan Government still refused to make any apology to Her Majesty's Government, or to grant any compensation to Mr. Agostini.

The previous papers were inclosed; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps that should now be taken.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, a farther and last attempt should be made to obtain satisfaction and compensation from the Venezuelan Government, and we have the honour of submitting, for your Lordship's consideration, the draft of an instruction which might be sent to Mr. Middleton with the view of his once more bringing the case to the attention of the Venezuelan Government. Mr. Middleton may properly be instructed to convey to the Venezuelan Government the satisfaction with which Her Majesty's Government receives the assurances conveyed to Mr. Middleton in M. Blanco's note of the 15th May last, of the good-will, friendship, and cordiality entertained by the Government of Venezuela towards Her Majesty's Government, and Her Majesty's Government would deeply regret that any untoward event should interrupt the good understanding which has hitherto existed between the two Governments.

Her Majesty's Government, however, cannot overlook the occurrences which took place between the 1st and 6th July, 1871.

The order to supply a horse was served on Mr. Agostini, a British subject, contrary to the subsisting Treaty, on the 6th July, 1871. Mr. Middleton at once protested, and notwithstanding that protest, Mr. Agostini was arrested on the 4th July. Mr. Middleton therefore, and on the same day, remonstrated against this arrest, and claimed the release of Mr. Agostini, but the Venezuelan authorities, alleging a public holiday as the sole reason for the delay, did not release Mr. Agostini till the 6th.

Her Majesty's Government regrets that it cannot view this repeated disregard of Mr. Middleton's protest and remonstrance in any light other than that of an insult offered to that Government in the person of the British Representative.

Her Majesty's Government would with still greater regret find itself compelled, by the continued refusal of the Venezuelan Government to offer an apology for this insult, to resort to those measures which must be taken to obtain that apology, and Her Majesty's Government seriously hopes that the Venezuelan Government will reconsider their determination to which it appears to have come, and on further reflection see that it is not inconsistent with its own dignity to make some apology for an insult offered to a friendly Power.

The compensation to be made to Mr. Agostini is a matter of less gravity, but Her Majesty's Government cannot allow the arrest and continued imprisonment of a British subject by the Venezuelan authorities contrary to Treaty and to the protest of the British Representative to have been made, and not insist upon some compensation being made to that British subject.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 24th ultimo, relative to the case of Mr. Agostini, he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that before sending to Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas the instruction proposed by us, your Lordship would be glad to be informed what would, in our opinion, be the next step to be taken in the event of the Venezuelan Government refusing to make an apology to Her Majesty's Government, or to compensate Mr. Agostini.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if the Venezuelan Government should refuse to make an apology to Her Majesty's Government, the apology and compensation to Mr. Agostini should, in our opinion, be obtained by the employment of a naval force to blockade the ports of the country.

If, however, the Venezuelan Government should make the apology, but still decline to compensate Mr. Agostini, your Lordship might, in our opinion, not improperly decline to press the Venezuelan Government for the compensation.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas, respecting the claim of Mr. O'Callaghan against the Venezuelan Government, together with a memorandum which had been prepared in the Foreign Office, and the previous correspondence which might be required for reference; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be issued to Mr. Middleton upon the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Middleton may, in our opinion, properly be instructed to tell Mr. McCarthy, the agent for the claim of Messrs. O'Callaghan against the Venezuelan Government, that he may either receive the dividend which has been paid on account of the claim, or take any other course which may seem to him expedient, Her Majesty's Government

My Lord, Temple, August 31, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 3rd June last year, relative to the seizure by the Colonial authorities at Trinidad of the sloop "Violet," on the suspicion of being intended for the conveyance of warlike stores to Venezuela, he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a farther letter from the Colonial Office, and its inclosures, from which we would learn that the jury in the trial of the "Violet" before the Supreme Court had been unable to agree.

That in these circumstances the Governor of Trinidad proposed to abandon all further proceedings on the part of the Crown, discharging the bail for the vessel, and surrendering the arms to the Messrs. Zurcher and Co., if the claimants, on their part, would undertake to pay the costs which had been incurred.

That he was to request us to take the papers into consideration, together with previous correspondence (inclosed), and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the course suggested to Governor Longden should be approved.

And that your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we are of opinion that the evidence adduced at the trial was sufficient to make it desirable to call the attention of the Venezuelan Government to the conduct of their Consul-General at Trinidad, Dr. Montbrun.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would, in our opinion, be very difficult to obtain on a new trial a verdict against the "Violet;" and we therefore consider that the course suggested by Governor Longden in reference to that vessel, her cargo, and the costs, may properly be adopted.

We are not without some doubt as to the course to be taken in regard to Dr. Montbrun, but as the proceedings against the "Violet" will have been abandoned, we are of opinion that the most consistent and best mode of dealing with that gentleman's conduct may be to consider the evidence tending to implicate him as insufficient to establish his complicity, and that in this view of the case it is not desirable to call the attention of the Venezuelan Government to his conduct.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received November 8.)

My Lord, Temple, November 6, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which your Lordship had received from Mr. Bernardo Daly complaining of the course adopted by Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas in the distribution of the money set aside by the Venezuelan Government for the payment of certain British claims. That the former papers in the case were inclosed for reference; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take them into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Daly.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Daly seems to have been hardly treated in this matter, and though probably Mr. Middleton may have been right in not including Mr. Daly's claim amongst the payments lately made to British claimants, we are of opinion that Mr. Daly was entitled to copies of his papers, that he might be in a position to obtain from the Venezuelan Government the balance of the sum deposited with the house of Boulton and Co., which it appears that the Venezuelan Government took possession of, giving in exchange a security on the Treasury or Customs of Maracaibo, which has proved of no value.

We think, therefore, that the attention of Mr. Middleton should be called to his Report of the 7th September, 1871, and that he should be directed to furnish your Lordship with a further Report, especially on the position in which Mr. Daly stands towards the Venezuelan Government with reference to this balance, and what reasons there may be for not pressing that Government to pay such balance, with interest, to Mr. Daly, and what reason there may be for refusing the copies of papers to Mr. Daly, other than those which he gives in his letter to Mr. Daly, and which do not seem to us sufficient.

And we think that Mr. Daly may for the present properly be answered that his application will be considered, and Mr. Middleton communicated with thereon.

My Lord, Temple, November 12, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying papers relative to the circumstances under which the Venezuelan Government have questioned the competence of the Representatives of Great Britain and other Powers to address a remonstrance to that Government with regard to the prejudicial effect upon foreign trade of two Articles of the Venezuelan Financial Code; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any notice should be taken by Her Majesty's Government of the attitude of the Venezuelan Government in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government may, in our opinion, notify to the Venezuelan Government that if, in the execution of the two Articles of the Venezuelan Financial Code, the interests of any British subject are damaged, Her Majesty's Government will be obliged to inquire into the facts of the case, and possibly to require compensation from the Venezuelan Government, although the damage may be caused by the operation of a law passed by the Venezuelan States.

Your Lordship may think it advisable to instruct Mr. Middleton to communicate with his colleagues and induce them to make a similar representation to the Venezuelan Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in the first case put by Dr. Kirk, of a British Indian shipowner knowingly employing a slave as a sailor on board his ship and receiving the wages earned by such slave, the ship would, in our opinion, be liable to condemnation.

But the ship would not be liable to condemnation in the second case, for the owner was not cognizant, much less guilty, of the offence which the captain had committed.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 27.)

Temple, September 27, 1873.

My Lord,

THAT, in our opinion, the provisions of the Treaty should be confined to the export of slaves destined as such for transport, and cannot be extended to slaves following their masters and not intended to be sold, nor to slaves working as seamen, and not intended for sale, on board Arab vessels.

In the case of vessels brought before the Court for adjudication, the description of slave, and the object for which he came or was put on board, must be decided according to the circumstances; but the mere presence on board of a person said or representing himself to be a slave will not be a sufficient ground for condemnation of the ship, nor for any criminal proceeding against the master of the ship or the owner of the slave.

We are also of opinion that at present no additional Article to the Treaty is needed, and we cannot assume that all slave labour afloat is illegal under the Treaty, an assumption which Dr. Kirk appears to make in his letter dated 22nd July, 1873.

In the Coomba Coomba (Case No. 16, 1873) Inclosure No. 1 in letter of 22nd July, the owner should receive damages and costs, there being no pretence for the seizure of the ship.

The same judgment should be given in Case No. 17, Inclosure No. 2 in letter of the 22nd July.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 26th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Dr. Kirk, reporting the trial and conviction of an Indian British subject, named Hadji Omar; and his Lordship was to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we have considered the case submitted to us, and, whilst we refrain from expressing a decided opinion upon the point, we think it doubtful whether Hadji Omar was a British subject. We also are not in a position to determine how far the evidence justified the conviction, but, assuming that the man was a British subject and that he was guilty, we are of opinion that the punishment was most severe and disproportionate to the offence, and we recommend to your Lordship that the remainder of that sentence should be remitted and the man at once released.

We venture to suggest to your Lordship that it may be advisable to convey to Dr. Kirk the opinion that undue severity and unnecessary interference with the natives with whom he comes in contact will defeat the object of Her Majesty's Government, and render the suppression of the Slave Trade more difficult than if a more considerate course were taken by him in the exercise of his judicial functions.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received April 25.)

My Lord, Temple, April 24, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying private letter from Sir Bartle Frere, containing suggestions for coercing the Sultan of Zanzibar, with the view to compel him to adopt measures for the suppression of the export trade in slaves from his dominions, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, under the law of nations, the measures suggested by Sir Bartle Frere can properly be carried out for the enforcement of the existing Treaty engagements with Zanzibar for the suppression of the Slave Trade, except as an act of war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Sir Bartle Frere suggests:—

1. That the British Consul, supported by a naval force, shall take possession of the custom-houses and duties of the Sultan, accounting, however, for those duties with one exception, to the Sultan's Exchequer.

2. That until the Sultan shall give satisfactory assurance to Her Majesty's Government that he will effectually prohibit the public sale of slaves, and their transport by sea within his dominions, this possession shall be maintained, and Her Majesty's naval forces shall search all vessels liable to search on suspicion of having slaves on board.

The adoption of these measures would amount, in our opinion, to a possible suspension within his own dominions of the power of the Sultan, to the seizure of, and confiscation of a part of his revenues, and to an interruption of a trade which may be lawful and totally unconnected with the traffic in slaves of his subjects with foreign nations.

And these measures can, consistently with the law of nations, be carried out only as an act of war, justified, however, as an act of war by the Sultan's breach of the stipulations made with Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord, Temple, April 25, 1873.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 23rd instant, stating, that with reference to his letter of the 10th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to request that, in reporting our opinion in regard to the proposals of Sir B. Frere for placing coercion on the Sultan of Zanzibar, with a view to the abolition of the Slave Trade on the East Coast of Africa, we would at the same time favour your Lordship with our views as to whether the declaration signed by this country and France in 1862, guaranteeing the independence of the Sultan of Zanzibar, affected the right of Her Majesty's Government alone to exercise coercive interference as is recommended by Sir B. Frere.

1873

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have had the honour of reporting to your Lordship that the proposals of Sir B. Frere for placing coercion on the Sultan of Zanzibar would amount to an act of war.

In our opinion Her Majesty's right to enforce the Treaty stipulations by an act or declaration of war is not affected by the joint declaration of Great Britain and France guaranteeing the independence of the Sultan.

House of Commons, May 1, 1873.

My dear Lord Granville,

I HAVE received your envelope inclosing Sir Bartle Frere's last correspondence and the Lord Chancellor's Minute thereon. I have had the opportunity of showing them both to Jessel, and we both are clearly of opinion that the directions given Sir Bartle Frere are not authorized by the Treaty nor, as he appears to think, within the scope of its provisions.

We think also that the jurisdiction attempted to be conferred by the Order in Council on the Consul at Zanzibar is beyond any authority conferred on the Queen by the Act of Parliament, and this we understand the Chancellor also to think.

We have already advised and we repeat that the Sultan has, in our opinion, broken the Treaty, and therefore it is competent to the Government to take such steps against him as upon the whole they think best.

Yours, &c.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor.

Sir B. Frere's Measures at Zanzibar.

THE Act 11 and 12 Vict., cap. 128 (following the Treaty of the 2nd October, 1845), authorizes British ships of war to "visit and detain" in any "seas except within the limits exempted by the IIIrd Article" (of the Treaty), merchant-vessels "belonging to subjects of the Imaum of Muscat," suspected of being engaged in the Slave Trade, "excepting such only as are engaged in the transport of slaves from one point to another of his own dominions in Africa," within the defined limits between 1° 57′ south latitude and 9° 2′ south latitude, "including the islands of Zanzibar,' &c.

Section 2 of this Act gives jurisdiction, to try and condemn vessels detained under its authority, to "the High Court of Admiralty of England, and all Courts of Vice-Admiralty in any dominions of Her Majesty beyond the seas, including those Courts of Vice-Admiralty within the territories under the government of the East India Company."

By the Order in Council of the 4th November, 1867, section 29, Her Majesty's Consul at Zanzibar is authorized (if the Foreign Jurisdiction Act 6 and 7 Vict., cap. enabled Her Majesty in this case to give such authority) to "have all such jurisdiction as for the time being ordinarily belongs to Courts of Vice-Admiralty in Her Majesty's possessions abroad, for and within the dominions of the Sultan of Muscat, and for vessels and persons coming within those dominions, and in regard to vessels captured on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade within those dominions."

Sections 16 and 23, which authorize deportation to Bombay (inter alia) of any person accused "of engaging in, or being accessory to the purchase or sale of slaves, or of having slaves illegally in his possession" apply to British subjects only.

I am not at all clear that it was competent for Her Majesty, by the Order in Council of the 4th November, 1867, to confer upon the Consul at Zanzibar any part of the jurisdiction given by 11 and 12 Vict., cap. 128, to Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Courts within the British dominions. This jurisdiction being regulated by Statute, could only (I am disposed to think) be altered or extended by some other and subsequent Statute; and the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 94, is prior in date, and does not say, that Her Majesty may, by Order in Council or otherwise, confer upon Consular or other Courts, in foreign countries within which Her Majesty has the power and jurisdiction there referred to, the same powers, as if such foreign countries were (in the terms of 11 and 12 Vict., cap. 128), part of "Her Majesty's dominions beyond the seas." The strong inclination of my mind is, that section 29 of the Order in Council of the 4th November, 1867, is ultra vires, and illegal.

I am not satisfied that, in other respects, there is any infringement of the Treaty of 1845, or of 11 and 12 Vict., cap. 128, in Sir B. Frere's letter of the 28th March, 1873; provided Her Majesty's ships, in the execution of Sir B. Frere's orders, do not "visit or detain" any Muscat (or Zanzibar) ships within the limits defined by the Treaty, and deal only with ships and persons actually engaged in the transport of slaves to places not within those limits.

If there is any visit or detention within the defined limits, or any interference with the transport of slaves to places within those limits, I apprehend that it will be illegal under the Statute, as well as contrary to the Treaty.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received May 3.)

Temple, May 3, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 25th ultimo he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures (in print) from Sir Bartle Frere, reporting the measures which he has directed to be taken in view of the Sultan of Zanzibar's refusal to accede to the proposals made to His Highness on the part of Her Majesty's Government for the more complete suppression of the Slave Traffic from his dominions: and Viscount Enfield stated that he was to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion in regard to the steps taken by Her Majesty's Envoy as reported in that despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we assume the Sultan has not fulfilled the stipulations of the Treaty of 1845 with this country, and having had his attention officially called to the breaches of the Treaty on his part, the Sultan has persisted in refusing to act up to his obligations.

We also assume that Her Majesty's Government is prepared, and means to force upon the Sultan the strict observance of the Articles of that Treaty of 1845, and, if necessary, to resort to acts of war for that purpose.

We have already had the honour of reporting to your Lordship that, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would, in the circumstances, be justified in resorting to acts of war against the Sultan.

And as we understand Lord Enfield's letter of the 30th April, your Lordship now desires us to make such observations as may occur to us upon the measures proposed by Sir B. Frere to be taken as acts of war by Her Majesty's Government against the Sultan.

In considering the subject, two matters of importance and of difficulty at once suggest themselves.

One, that the independence of the Sultan is guaranteed by Great Britain and France.

The other, that Germany, France, and the United States, and probably other countries, though, to a less extent, carry on a considerable trade with the dominions of the Sultan.

1873

The measures, consequently, which may be adopted, should interfere as little as possible with the trade of other countries with the dominions of the Sultan, and offer no pretence for saying with truth or effect that the independence of the Sultan under the guarantee is violated.

It would seem from Sir B. Frere's letter to your Lordship of the 23rd April, that Sir B. Frere was acting in consequence of the refusal of the Sultan to sign the Treaty proposed to him; and in his letter to Commander Malcolm of the 28th March, Sir B. Frere uses the expression, "His Highness, &c., having declined to co-operate with Her Majesty's Government in any more effectual measures."

We are not acquainted with the contents of the Treaty proposed to the Sultan, or with the more effectual measures with which the Sultan declined to co-operate. But we suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that great care should be taken that neither the "proposed Treaty" nor the "more effectual measures" should infringe upon the guaranteed independence of the Sultan.

An act of war to enforce an existing Treaty would be quite consistent with such guarantee, but an act of war to enforce a new Treaty, or more rigorous measures than are provided under the existing Treaty is open to very different considerations.

In our opinion, the measures suggested by Sir B. Frere in the last two paragraphs of his note to the Sultan, and in his letter to Commander Malcolm do impose terms upon the Sultan not imposed by the Treaty of 1845.

In our opinion, therefore, although the steps taken by Her Majesty's Envoy are not free from objection, we would suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that it may be unwise to recall the instructions and note of Sir B. Frere, and Her Majesty's Government might without delay direct that the Sultan be informed that if he will not keep and enforce the keeping of the Treaty of 1845, Her Majesty's Government will be compelled as an act of war to take temporary possession of his ports and seaboard by an armed force.

We would also suggest that the intention of Her Majesty's Government, and their reasons for any action against the Sultan, should be notified to the French Government as a party to the guarantee, and, if thought fit, to other Powers also.

In making these observations in obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have purposely omitted to refer to Sir B. Frere's letter of instructions to Dr. Kirk.

In our opinion, the substitution of an examination by the British Consul for the system of passes hitherto in practice as directed by those instructions, is not consistent with the guaranteed independence of the Sultan, and may, unless the Consul is supported by an armed force, lead to acts of violence and insult against him in his person and office.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received May 22.)

Temple, May 22, 1873.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that a question had been raised by the Lords of the Admiralty as to whether, in the event of its being found necessary to institute a blockade of the Island of Zanzibar with the view to compel the Sultan to fulfil his Treaty obligations for the suppression of the Slave Trade, mail-steamers should be allowed to enter or depart; and whether steamers requiring coal to prosecute a voyage were to be permitted to enter the blockaded port for the purpose of obtaining coal.

That their Lordships further asked whether the Vice-Admiralty Court which is established at Zanzibar, under the provisions of the Order in Council of the 4th November, 1867 (copy annexed), could continue to be held there when we are at war with the Sultan; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request that we would take the two questions into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which it might be advisable to issue for the guidance of the Admiral Commanding Her Majesty's Naval Forces on the East India Station on the points raised by the Admiralty.

That he (Lord Enfield) further requested us to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the accompanying draft of a letter which your Lordship proposed to address to the Admiralty, in reply to certain questions put by that Department having reference to the Zanzibar blockade.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the blockade, to be legal, must be total and not partial; consequently, no mail-steamer should be allowed to enter or depart from a blockaded port, nor are steamers requiring coal to prosecute a voyage to be permitted to enter the blockaded port for the purpose of obtaining coal.

The Admiralty Court established at Zanzibar cannot lawfully continue to be held there whilst Great Britain is at war with the Sultan.

The draft letter answers questions 1 and 2 sufficiently. In reference, however, to answers 3, 4, and 5, we suggest to your Lordship that the words "but until" to "de facto one" at the end of the answer be omitted, and that no de facto blockade be established before the notification.

Question 6 we have already reported on above, and in a sense contrary to the inclination of your Lordship as expressed in the draft letter.

Question 7. We are of opinion that the ships of war should be allowed to communicate in the manner suggested in the question.

Question 8. Upon the answer to the 8th question we have no observation to make.

Question 9. The answer to Question 9 seems to us open to the objection that the Admiral may think the answer prohibits his acting in a hostile manner against the ships of the Sultan, unless they are breaking the blockade. We therefore suggest to your Lordship that the answer may be as follows:—"That the Admiral will be authorized to act in a hostile manner against the Sultan of Zanzibar and his dominions, and especially in maintaining the blockade."

Question 11. This 11th question we have reported upon above.

The remaining answers do not, in our opinion, require any observation from us.

Annex.

Draft of Letter to the Secretary to the Admiralty.

(As amended after reference to the Law Officers.)

Sir, Foreign Office, , 1873.

I have laid before Earl Granville your Confidential letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty would be glad to receive directions for the guidance of the Admiral Commanding Her Majesty's Naval Forces on the East India Station, with reference to the instructions conveyed to Dr. Kirk by the telegram of the 15th instant, directing a blockade of the Island of Zanzibar under certain contingencies.

The points upon which their Lordships ask for instructions are—

1. Whether the establishment of a blockade is to be considered as an act of war, and whether, if their Lordships are right in thinking that it would be so, the existing Treaty of 1845 with Zanzibar would be ipso facto at an end.

2. Their Lordships assume that, after the declaration of a blockade, vessels under the Zanzibar flag carrying slaves would be seized as prizes belonging to an enemy, and not under the Treaty of 1845, which would have lapsed, owing to an act of war.

3. Their Lordships ask what notice is to be given of the establishment of the blockade, and in what manner.

4. Whether all vessels under any colours are to be warned off, and their papers endorsed.

5. What time is to be given for neutral vessels to leave the port of Zanzibar, and whether they are to be allowed to bring out cargo.

6. Whether the mail-steamers are to be allowed to enter or depart, and whether any steamers requiring coal to prosecute a voyage are to be permitted to enter the blockaded port for the purpose of obtaining a supply.

7. Whether foreign ships of war, say American or French, will be allowed to pass to communicate with their Consuls, as English ships did in the southern ports of the United States during the last American war.

8. Their Lordships further call Lord Granville's attention to the point that the blockade being established a question will arise as to our ships obtaining coal and supplies, the present depôt being at Zanzibar, as England being at war with Zanzibar through such blockade, would be excluded from the island, except by use of force or possession; and their Lordships presume that the Admiral would be at liberty to insure supplies by landing men, or by such other means as he may deem expedient.

9. Their Lordships ask generally whether the Admiral will be authorized to act in a hostile manner against the Sultan of Zanzibar and his dominions.

10. Their Lordships presume that, as regards the extent of the blockade, the Admiral will have to exercise his own judgment. They observe that the island is 47 miles long, and that though vessels could scarcely land on the eastern side, owing to the absence of harbours, they do not think it would be advisable to declare the blockade on that side.

Their Lordships are of opinion that it would be advisable to limit the blockade to the port of Zanzibar and 5 miles on each side, and also that the Admiral should be directed to declare so much of the island blockaded as he can efficiently deal with with the forces at his command.

11. Their Lordships further state their opinion that instructions should be sent to the Admiral as to the condemnation of prizes, and as to the disposal of liberated slaves, observing that if the new Treaty is signed captured dhows, it is presumed, would be taken as hitherto before the Vice-Admiralty Court at Zanzibar, but their Lordships ask, should captured slaves be landed at Zanzibar as formerly.

And if the Treaty is not signed, how are slaves taken in captured ships to be dealt with.

Their Lordships state that a decision on this point is indispensable, observing that the slaves would have to be landed and fed somewhere, and that difficulty would be found during the south-west monsoon in sending them to Johanna, whilst there may be hundreds to provide for.

As regards the first and second points, I am to state that, as a question of law, there can be no doubt that the establishment of a blockade is an act of war which would annul the existing Treaty, and that, therefore, vessels under the Zanzibar flag carrying slaves would be seized as prizes of war, and not under the Treaty of 1845.

In reply to the third, fourth, and fifth queries, I am to state that the Admiral should proceed in the usual manner, and in the most lenient way in regard to the time to be given to neutral vessels to leave the port of Zanzibar and to bring out cargo.

I am to add that as soon as the result of the demand, if unfavourable, is known, a public notification of war will be issued, accompanied with a notification of blockade But no de facto blockade should be established before the notification.

Sixth.—Upon the question raised as to whether mail-steamers are to be allowed to enter and depart, and whether steamers requiring coal to prosecute a voyage are to be permitted to enter for the purpose of procuring coal, I am to state that the blockade, to be legal, must be total and not partial, and that, consequently, no mail-steamer should be allowed to enter or depart from a blockaded port, nor are steamers requiring coal to prosecute a voyage to be permitted to enter the blockaded port for the purpose of obtaining coal.

The seventh question is one of discretion, and not of law, but Lord Granville is of opinion that the ships of war should be allowed to communicate with their Consuls, as suggested in your question.

The eighth question, Lord Granville is of opinion, must be answered in the affirmative.

In reply to the ninth query, Lord Granville is of opinion that the Admiral should be authorized to act in a hostile manner against the Sultan of Zanzibar and his dominions, and especially in maintaining the blockade, and that unless in case of necessity the Admiral should confine his action to a blockade.

The points suggested in the tenth query, I am to state, must be left to the discretion of the Admiral.

Eleventh.—Upon the question as to whether a Prize Court can be held at Zanzibar whilst at war with the Sultan, I am to state that the Admiralty Court established at Zanzibar cannot lawfully continue to be held there whilst Great Britain is at war with the Sultan.

As regards the question of the disposal of captured slaves, I am to state that this matter might, in Lord Granville's opinion, be left to the discretion of the Admiral and of Dr. Kirk, who will be better able on the spot than the authorities in this country to come to a decision as to the manner in which these slaves should be dealt with.

I am, in conclusion, to state, that the above replies to the questions contained in yours of the 17th instant, are in conformity with the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, who have been consulted in this matter.

I am, &c.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 20 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 16, 1874 | On subject of the arrest of Mr. W. Hyde, master of the British mail packet "Tacna," in the harbour of Lota, and the protest of Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago on the ground of the arrest being made beyond Chilian jurisdiction, and as a violation of the privileges usually accorded to that class of vessels. Mr. Hyde's arrest was not illegal; but his trial before the Chilian Tribunals should be watched | 16 |
| 21 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 13, | Further respecting the case of the British vessel "Tacna," and the arrest of Mr. W. Hyde, the master, by the Chilian authorities at Santiago. Further particulars should be obtained before Her Majesty's Government pronounce a decided opinion on the subject | 17 |
| 22 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | Further respecting the case of the "Tacua," and the arrest of the master, Mr. W. Hyde. As he was arrested on the high seas, he was illegally arrested, and the Chilian Courts have now so decided. Her Majesty's Government should demand an apology and ample compensation to be made to Captain Hyde for his arrest and imprisonment | 18 |
| 23 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 13, | Further respecting the case of the arrest of Mr. W. Hyde, master of the "Tacna." Approves proposed despatches to Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago and to the Board of Trade | 18 |
| 24 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 24, | On request of Messrs. Parker, Lee, and Haddock, Solicitors to M. |---|---|---|---|---|
| 30 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Jan. 12, 1874 | As to the instructions to Mr. Wade for withdrawal of the regulations which had been issued by him for the management of the prison at Shanghae, and the insertions in the revised Order in Council of provisions for enforcement of new rules. Want further information on the subject of deportation before approving the draft. Suggesting Amendments in draft Order in Council | 23 |
| 31 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 30, | Order in Council constituting Shanghae as a port of registry for British shipping under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1873, might properly be issued | 24 |
| 32 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 23, | As to the legality of the detention of a person on board a British ship on the high seas, deported from China or Japan, under the Revised Order in Council. Agree with late Law Officers and Mr. Reilly that it is illegal, and the course proposed to be adopted by the latter should be followed | 24 |
| 33 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 21, | The Supreme Court and British Consular Offices at Shanghae are liable to the payment of municipal rates levied under the land regulations and bye-laws of the foreign Settlement there. Agree with the expediency of not claiming exemption | 25 |
| 34 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 16, | As to the instructions to be given to the Governor of Hong Kong on request of the Chinese Viceroy at Canton, to allow the passage of Chinese troops, enlisted for service in Formosa, through British waters. Cannot be allowed in event of war between China and Japan | 25 |
| 35 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 2, | With respect to the execution of a warrant for the apprehension of Walter Jackson at Shanghae, which had been issued at Hong Kong. The Shanghae police could not act on a telegram from Hong Kong, and could not arrest a felon until the warrant arrived. A foreigner arriving at a Treaty-port charged with an offence on board a British ship can be dealt with under "The Merchant Shipping Act, 1854," with the consent of his own country, and a citizen of the United States could not be given up by the American Consul at a Treaty-port under the Extradition Act of 1842 | 26 |
| 36 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | Further on the subject of the passage of troops for Formosa through Hong Kong waters in event of war between China and Japan. The waters of that part of Kowloon ceded to Great Britain are exclusively under British jurisdiction | 26 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 38 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 12, 1874 | On proposal of the St. Mark's Building Association at Alexandria for the extension of the lease under which they hold a portion of the land for the British Church there. Inexpediency of vesting the land in question in the hands of British Representatives as trustees for any religious denomination | 27 |
| 39 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 11, | Approves draft Order in Council to enable the Judge of the British Consular Court at Alexandria to hold rank of Consul, which he was precluded from doing under the Levant Order in Council of December 1873 | 28 |
| 40 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 26, | As to the authority of Mr. Borg, Acting British Vice-Consul at Cairo, to solemnize marriages there under the warrant granted to Mr. Rogers, Her Majesty's Consul | 28 |
| 40* | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 25, | Egyptian Government justified in levying 8 per cent. duty on coals imported at Port Saïd for steamers passing through the Suez Canal, provided the subjects of other States have to pay it | 29 |
| 41 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 4, | No reason to alter opinion given by their predecessors respecting the claim of the Alexandria and Ramlé Railway Company to right over certain lands ceded to the Company by Mustapha Pasha, but which is denied by the present Khedive | 29 |

FRANCE.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 42 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 13, 1874 | On claim of Mr. Wilson to share in a contract with the French Government during the late war between France and Germany, by a French subject named Ferrand. He must surrender himself to the French Tribunals before protection of Her Majesty's Government can be granted | 30 |
| 43 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | As to the law issued by the French Assembly providing for the increase of certain indirect taxes, especially affecting mineral oils. The complaint of Messrs. Young that this Bill will be contrary to the IVth Article of the Treaty of Commerce with Great Britain is reasonable, but the question might be more satisfactorily disposed of by the Board of Trade | 30 |
| 44 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | As to the Decree of the Cour de Cassation in Paris, which reverses the decision of the Courts of Réunion giving the wages of labourers a preference over other claims. Her Majesty's Government should not make any representation to the French Government on the subject upon the materials furnished by the Secretary of State for India | 31 |
| 45 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Further relative to the claims of the Mineral Oil Companies before the Mixed Commission at Paris, and their intention to hold Her Majesty's Government liable if their claims are rejected. Course Her Majesty's Government should pursue | 31 |
| 46 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Complaint of M. Alexandre Dumas that an attempt had been made to pirate a drama of which he was the author. Her Majesty's Government cannot act in the matter, and M. Dumas must apply to the proper Court for protection | 32 |

1874

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 47 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 3, 1874 | Further relative to the French law imposing excise duties on French mineral oils on the provisions of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873. The law is not inconsistent with Article IV of the Treaty, unless the British importer is subject to a differential duty. In that case the attention of the French Government might be called to the injurious effect of the new law | 33 |
| 48 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 4, | Bill before the French Chamber on the liability of sons of foreigners to military service in France, and the modifications proposed in the Bill. As to the course Her Majesty's Government should pursue | 33 |
| 49 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 6, | On interpretation placed by the French Government on the word "value" in the IVth Article of the Treaty with France of the 23rd January. Adhere to former opinion as to the word "value" meaning the time when the goods were supplied by the manufacturer in England, and not the English value at the time of import into France. Agree with French Government with respect to the words "admission effective" in Article V | 34 |
| 50 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | Further relative to the case of Mr. James Wilson. Supplies of goods at Nantes during war between France and Germany. Instructions that should be sent to Captain Clipperton, Her Majesty's Consul at Nantes | 35 |
| 51 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | French Government desire to know whether there was anything incompatible with the Treaty engagements between France and foreign Powers relative to the "surtaxe de pavillon" in a law granting to shipbuilders a premium of so much per ton for each ton built. Payment of bounties would not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Treaties of 1860 and 1873 provided they were paid from national sources | 35 |
| 52 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | On claim of the owners of the "Lochinvar" against the French Government on account of the collison with the French vessel "Loiret." Representations might be made to the French Government on the subject of the trial on a point of injustice | 36 |
| 53 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 4, | On request of Mr. Elmore, Her Majesty's Consul at Nice, to know if he could celebrate marriages at his new Consulate to which he is appointed. He must have a fresh warrant before he can do so | 36 |
| 54 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | A person acting for a British Vice-Consul furnished with a marriage warrant cannot legally celebrate marriages unless he has one himself | 37 |
| 55 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | It is expedient that Consul Elmore should not celebrate marriages at Nice any longer, as he has been appointed to a new post, although he is still acting as Her Majesty's Consul at Nice | 37 |
| 56 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 9, | On the escape of Rochfort and other Communist prisoners from New Caledonia and their arrival at Sydney. As to the course to be pursued in case the French Government demanded the surrender of these persons | 38 |
| 57 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | As to a case at St. Pierre des Calais of claim for exemption from military service in France, and the Bill of M. de Rotour before the Chambers should not be publicly noticed in this country as proposed by Mr. Treitt. In any particular cases occurring redress should be sought for from the proper French authorities | 38 |
| 58 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | As to the question of military conscription at St. Pierre des Calais. No reason for altering opinion already given | 40 |
| 59 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 5, | On the proposals submitted to the French National Assembly for imposing duties on gas, threads of cotton, jute, &c., and coals and coke. Duties are already levied on salted provisions. It is a question whether these duties are contrary to the Treaties of Commerce with England of 1860, 1873, and 1874 | 40 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 60 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 6, 1874 | As to the extra duties to be levied on salted meats imported into France from other countries. The French Government is entitled to do this under Article III of the Convention of 1860 | 41 |
| 61 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 23, | On claims by French Government to property of Mr. Cleave, formerly British Chaplain at Ajaccio. Her Majesty's Government should not take any steps in the matter, as it must be decided by either the French or the Corsican Tribunals | 42 |
| 62 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | Further relative to the compensatory duties on import of salted meats into France. The French Government has not the right to levy these duties on imports from this country | 42 |
| 63 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | Further relative to the duties newly levied on the import of burning oils into France, and the statement of the Scotch Mineral Oil Association. No reason to alter opinion that the French Government were justified in levying the duties | 42 |
| 64 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 2, | Complaint of Mr. Clements on the detention of his daughter in France by his wife. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere, and he must appeal to the proper legal Tribunals in France | 43 |
| 65 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | , | Trial of the crew of the "Mongol" at Rouen and conviction of eight British seamen for mutiny on board. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further than to desire Lord Lyons to ask the French Foreign Minister to use his good offices to obtain their release as soon as the law would allow | 43 |
| 66 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | Reply to be given to Mr. E. Blount on the French law relative to the succession duty to be levied on property held out of France by foreigners domiciled in that country. Her Majesty's Government cannot properly take exception to the law passed in 1871, and Mr. Blount might be told so, and no instructions need be given to Lord Lyons | 44 |
| 67 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | Further relative to the question of succession duty on property held out of France by foreigners domiciled in that country, and Report of Mr. Treitt, Counsel to British Embassy in Paris, referring to a Convention between France and Russia for regulating the administration of property of deceased persons. This Convention does not affect the question of succession duties imposed by the French law | 45 |
| 68 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 25, | Further relative to the liability of foreigners to military service in France. Modifications in the law made on the representations of Lord Lyons. Approves his intention not to make further objection | 45 |
| 69 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | On certain judgments pronounced by the Court of Appeal in Paris relative to suits brought against the exporters of mineral oils in France, whose claims had formed the subject of discussion in the Mixed Commission in Paris. Case of Namshauer v. Young's Mineral Oil Company. All cases decided by the Commission should not be reopened | 46 |
| 70 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further relative to the compensatory duty levied on salted meats imported into France, and observations having reference to the duties levied under the Franco-Portuguese Treaty. The argument of the Duc Decazes, that the duties levied by the Law of the 21st March, 1874, are made applicable to all nations alike, and therefore excluding the "most-favoured-nation" clause, cannot be maintained | 47 |
| 71 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 6, | As to the proposal for the British Consular Office at Nice or Marseilles to become ex officio the trustee of the British Church Establishment there. Reply that should be sent to the Committee is, that Her Majesty's Government is unable to assent to the nomination of any Consular Officer as trustee | 48 |

| 72 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 15, 1874 | Reply that should be given to the represention of Mr. Maude on behalf of Major Blood for compensation to be obtained for the loss of property through his forcible removal from Paris. No sufficient ground for complaint on the part of Her Majesty's Government | 48 |
| 73 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 9, | On question of ship brokerage in France, and the practice adopted by the Customs authorities at Bordeaux on the subject, and the Treaties between France and foreign Powers on the subject. The Treaty position of this country depends on the construction of Articles I and II of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873. Before representation is made to French Government, should know what are the official duties of French Government brokers on a British ship entering a French port in distress obliged to discharge her cargo | 49 |

| 85 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 6, 1874 | An English or Irish Roman Catholic Archbishop or Bishop is not entitled in his episcopal capacity to hold real property in the United Kingdom, but only as a layman as he is not like the prelates of the established Church, a Corporation sole | 61 |
| 86 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. , | On steps taken by the Italian Government to levy income tax on the profits of certain British steamers. Though not satisfactory to British shipowners, they should act under legal advice as to their position | 62 |
| 87 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 13, | On claim of Mr. Mercer for compensation on account of his arrest by Italian carabinieri and torture at Castlemare. He should apply to the Italian Courts for redress | 62 |
| 88 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | On the case of collision between the English vessel "Oberon" and the Italian ship "Chiavari," when the latter was sunk in the Irish Channel. Insufficient sentence against the captain of the "Oberon," and the captain should be further prosecuted as he proceeded on his course without ascertaining the damage done to the Italian vessel | 63 |
| 89 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further relative to the income tax levied by the Italian Government on British steamers trading with Italian ports. The Liverpool Association cannot be supported, as the Italian Government have the right to impose any tax on those who resort to their ports for the purposes of trade | 64 |
| 90 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 15, | On the application of the Italian Consul at Malta for the extradition of an Italian subject named Mendolia, accused of having committed homicide in 1864, who, though had been admitted to bail not putting in an appearance, was sentenced in contumaciâ to imprisonment. The Malta Ordinance should be amended, but the Italian Government should come under reciprocal obligations | 65 |
| 91 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 30, | Further relative to the case of Mr. Mercer, arrested in Italy by carabinieri, tortured, and subjected to legal proceedings. No reason to alter former opinion on the subject | 66 |
| 92 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 12, | As to the claim of the Rev. E. Douglas on the Italian Government for the expropriation of his property at Rome. Her Majesty's Government cannot properly support the claim; but a leading Italian lawyer might be consulted as to the law Italy on the subject of the purchase of the Villa Caserta estate | 66 |
| 93 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Want further information before deciding on subject of the bequest made by M. Gerolamo Ponti to the Acadamica delle Scienze di Londra. As there is no Society known by that name, had better advertise the gift publicly, and inform the Italian Legation what has been done | 68 |
| 94 | Attorney-General. | Sept. 15, | Further relative to the will of M. Gerolamo Ponti of Milan. Approves draft notice to public papers with respect to the legacy to Academy of Science of London | 69 |
| 95 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | Further relative to the application for the extradition of an Italian accused of homicide in 1864, which was refused by the Malta authorities. Law of extradition in this country. The Malta Ordinance not in conformity with the Extradition Act of 1870 and Treaty with Italy, and question whether it should not be altered | 69 |

| 96 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 25, 1874 | Further relative to the income tax charged on the profits of British shipping in Italian ports, and question whether the most-favoured-nation clause would not exempt British vessels from this charge, as Austrian Shipping Companies are exempt from this tax .. .. .. .. | 72 |
| 97 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | Further relative to income tax charged on British Shipping Companies in Italy. No reason to modify views already expressed on the subject .. .. .. .. | 73 |
| 98 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 6, | Complaint of Messrs. Newman, Dale, and Shetton on behalf of an English Mining Company at Val Barbina, North Italy, for losses alleged to have been inflicted on them by the Council and Prefect of Novara in prohibiting the smelting of ores in that neighbourhood. Works reopened, but compensation demanded on the illegality of the proceeding. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere in the matter .. .. .. .. .. .. | 73 |
| 99 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | On application of M. de Rosaz for permission to see documents in Foreign Office relative to the property of Antonio Mangini from 1781 to 1862. He may be supplied with this information .. .. .. .. .. | 74 |
| 100 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 20, | Further relative to the claim of the Italian Revenue authorities to tax the profits of freights on the British Navigation Companies, although the Court of Appeal had given an adverse decision; but the Provincial Court of Genoa had decided against the French Company and other Court had reversed the decisions of Courts in favour of the Companies. No reason therefore to alter former opinions .. .. | 74 |
| 101 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further relative to the application of M. de Rosaz for information with respect to the property of the late Antonio Mangini. No objection for him to see the correspondence in question .. .. .. .. .. | 75 |
| 102 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 7, | As to claims of certain religious establishments (English, Scotch, and Irish Colleges) in Rome to protection of Her Majesty's Government on being threatened with expropriation. These colleges cannot claim greater privileges than accorded to purely Italian establishments .. .. | 75 |
| 103 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | Further relative to the case of Mr. Mercer, arrested by Italian carabineiri. The Italian Advocate's opinion is no doubt well founded upon the facts as given to him, and Her Majesty's Government cannot well bring the case again before the Italian Government .. .. .. | 78 |

Claim of Netherlands Minister for exemption of income tax on moveable property in England, and income tax on dividends on his shares in the Dunaberg and Wipetsk Railway. Ministers are not entitled to exemption from property arising from a trading Company | 92 |
| 124 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 3, | British Church Establishment at Rotterdam, and the grant of Queen Anne's Bounty towards its expenses, which was surrendered for the benefit of the Consular Act, and claim for restoration of the grant on the withdrawal of support of Her Majesty's Government to churches abroad. That Church Establishment has no equitable claim to compensation | 93 |
| 125 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 14, | As to the mode of the working of the Prize Law by the Netherlands authorities in Batavia in cases of vessels charged with breach of blockade of the ports of Acheen. Complaint on the detention of vessels and delays in settling the trials. A representation might be made to the Dutch Government on the subject, but a belligerent has the right to detain for a reasonable time neutrals captured accused of breach of blockade | 94 |

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 126 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 18, 1874 | Proposed new laws for the Navigators' Islands, and as to the opposition of a British subject to them and proceedings of Commander Goodenough on the communication of those laws by the Governors of the Samoan Islands to the foreign Consuls. Not expedient for Her Majesty's Government to approve them. Britith subjects may be told Her Majesty's Government will not support them in resisting them. The Consul should report from time to time | 95 |

PERSIA.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 127 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 5, 1874 | As to request of the India Office for the reconsideration of the decision come to by Her Majesty's Government not to demand compensation from the Persian Government for the murder of Sergeant Collins near Shiraz in 1872. Instructions might be sent to Mr. Thomson to urge the Persian Government to obtain compensation from the Kushkai Chief, but not as a claim by right | 96 |
| 128 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 28, | On request of Mr. Hill, executor to the property of the late Mr. Alison, that Mr. Thomson might act as Special Commissioner to the Court of Chancery, and examine witnesses at Tehran in the case of Hill v. Ongley. May act unofficially | 96 |
| 129 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 9, | On the alleged ill-treatment of Mr. Oswald, agent to the British Indian Steam Navigation Company at Bunder Abbas by certain pilgrims, and a counter complaint. Mutiny on board the "Patna." The Persian Government cannot be held responsible, and they or the pilgrims are entitled to the compensation, but Mr. Oswald was entitled to protection | 97 |

PERU.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 130 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 9, 1874 | As to the right of the Peruvian Government to establish a monopoly in the sale of nitrate of soda, and request of Messrs. Dawson, Bryant, and Co., for reconsideration of the decision against the complaint of Messrs. Clark, Eck, and Co. No reason to alter former Report. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere with the legislation of a foreign country | 98 |
| 131 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 11, | On the subject of the claim of Mr. Watson against the Peruvian Government for arrest and imprisonment as the bearer of letters for conspirators against the Peruvian Government. His imprisonment was justifiable, and his claim cannot be supported | 99 |
| 131* | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 27, | Case of Swann v. Vines. No reason for further investigation of the case of the latter, as he resigned when his commission was about to cancelled | 99 |
| 132 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 4, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. F. Watson against the Peruvian Government for imprisonment. Nothing to induce them to alter former opinion on the subject | 100 |
| 133 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Case of Lawrence Higginson, who was taken out of the steamer "Santiago," in the Bay of Callao, by order of the Captain of the Port, and thrown into prison, and approval of steps taken by Mr. Nugent to obtain his release, as it was a gross outrage towards Mr. Higginson, and remonstrance should be made and compensation demanded | 100 |
| 134 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 6, | Case of Captain Hall, commander of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamer "Arequipa," arrested on a charge of murder. Peruvian Government have jurisdiction in the case, and although delay has occured Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere | 101 |

PORTUGAL.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 135 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 3, 1874 | No authority could be given to Her Majesty's Consul at Lisbon to arrest an alleged fugitive criminal on board a British ship. If it was a ship of war no surrender could take place in Portugal, but the fugitive (German swindler) might be brought to England and tried under the Extradition Acts. If a merchant-ship, the public authorities must act on their own responsibility, and the British Consul must not interfere | 102 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 136 | Dr. Deane .. | Feb. 4, 1874 | As to the offer of Mr. H. Nourse to place in the hands of Her Majesty's Government his uncle's journal of entries relating to Delagoa Bay. No necessity to accept the offer, as the information is detailed in Captain Owen's work in two volumes | 102 |
| 137 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | On the question of the taxation of British subjects in Portugal. The Decima Industriel in 1842 modified by Law of 1860. Want further information respecting the terms of the law before giving opinion | 103 |
| 138 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | On letters from Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Payne on the claim of the Presbyterian community in Madeira to receive a portion of the funds of the British cemetery when the British Church Establishment ceased to be supported by Her Majesty's Government. Objections to distribute the fund rateably among particular denominations. Suggestions as to the appropriation of the burial fees | 103 |
| 139 | Dr. Deane .. | Mar. 10, | An offer of Mr. Thompson to communicate information relative to the disputed claim of Delagoa Bay. Will be glad to meet him | 104 |
| 140 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 20, | Further on subject of the industriel tax levied upon British subjects in Portugal. It is the same as that levied under the Treaty of 1842. British subjects are, therefore, entitled to limit their contributions to that Tariff. Sir C. Murray should be instructed to state that Her Majesty's Government cannot agree to the interpretation put on the Treaty of 1842 by the Portuguese Government | 104 |
| 141 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 15, | On the alleged infraction of Article XIII of the Anglo-Portuguese Treaty through the exaction of duties on English bonded goods at the Cape de Verde Islands. Words of the Article not very clear. Sir C. Murray should mention what is the construction put on the Article by the British Customs authorities | 105 |
| 142 | Dr. Deane .. | June 6, | Suggesting alterations in the French translation of British Counter-Case in the Delagoa question | 105 |
| 143 | Dr. Deane .. | 30, | On despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris relative to the French translation of the British Counter-Case of the Delagoa question. Suggest another alteration, and that the Case be printed | 106 |
| 144 | Dr. Deane .. | July 13, | The Delagoa Bay question. Despatch from Governor of Cape of Good Hope on the subject, and other papers were given to him for preparation of the Case. Remarks on the position of the claim. If the Portuguese wanted to purchase in 1870 the Island of Inyack it is important, and he was wrong in not having relied on that fact | 106 |
| 145 | Dr. Deane .. | 29, | The Delagoa question. The fact of the Portuguese Government wishing to purchase the Island of Inyack from the native Chief, as well as the occupation by Mr. Straker and Mr. Corkingdale, might be of use, but should not be used in support of the British Case | 107 |
| 146 | Dr. Deane .. | Aug. 11, | Delagoa Bay question. The Counter-Case ready to be forwarded to Paris | 107 |
| 147 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 19, | Further relative to the question of taxation of British subjects in Portugal. The right interpretation has been put on the Treaty in the draft of the 15th July. British subjects cannot be taxed beyond 20 per cent., though Portuguese subjects may be. Question might be considered in any new Commercial Treaty with Portugal | 108 |

RUSSIA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 148 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 17, 1874 | On request of Mr. H. C. Lawton to be furnished with a certified copy of a contract between Mr. Baxter and himself in 1865 in the hands of Messrs. Easton and Amos. Consul Stephens, of Nicolaieff, should inform Mr. Lawton of the Act 19 and 20 Vict., cap. 113 | 108 |
| 149 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 24, | As to further intervention in favour of Messrs. Fenwick and Co., who complain of the inadequacy of the award granted by the Russian Government for services to a Russian gunboat by the British steamer "Ernest." As a salvage award it was insufficient, but they are bound to accept it, as it was left to the generosity of the Russian Government | 109 |
| 150 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 14, | As to the mode of dealing with the estates of British subjects dying intestate in Russia, and proposed Convention for a reciprocal arrangement on the subject. The Vth Article of the proposed Consular Convention with the United States might serve as a model. Draft of amended Article | 109 |

SPAIN.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 151 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 6, 1874 | Case of the "Virginius." As to satisfactory statement of Señor Carvajal relative to the action of the Jamaica authorities, but no reason to alter former opinion given | 111 |
| 152 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | As to the seizure of arms and ammunition found on board the "Village Bride" by the Jamaica authorities. The case in some way connected with that of the "Virginius." The difficulty has arisen from the issue of the Proclamation forbidding the export of arms from a British Colony, contrary to the rule for the United Kingdom. The Proclamation should either be withdrawn by the Jamaica authorities or no licence should be given to M. de Cordova, the consignee | 111 |
| 153 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | Further relative to the case of the "Virginius." Expected arrival of Henry King, the engineer, in London. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in taking any action on that account in the matter | 112 |
| 154 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | On the suspected expedition of the British vessels "Deerhound" and "Edith" against the de facto Government of Spain, and Her Majesty's Customs authorities informed not sufficient reason at present to detain these vessels, but they should be watched and proceeded against, if necessary, under the Foreign Enlistment Act | 113 |
| 155 | Solicitor-General and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the proceedings of the Spanish authorities at Sulu and the captures of the German vessels "Marie Louise" and "Gazelle." Treatment of British subjects on board the former a question for consideration. Demand should be made for reparation, and a protest made against authorities at Manila | 113 |
| 156 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to instructions to be given to Mr. Layard on the expected condemnation to death of Peters, the Englishman who was concerned in the insurrection at Carthagena. Request should be made to Spanish Government to grant him the means of defence | 115 |
| 157 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | On accusation of Mr. Palmer, who states he is an Agent of the Spanish Government, against certain persons said to be Carlist agents, who are conspiring to obtain by fraud a British register for the French brig "Malfilâtre," so that they might ship arms, &c., on board for the Carlists. No steps should be taken, but the vessel might be watched | 115 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 158 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 4, 1874 | Further relative to the case of the "Malfilâtre," and the arms, &c., at Newport, said to be for the use of the Carlists, and offer of Mr. Palmer to give evidence against the suspected agents. No reason to alter former opinion .. | 116 |
| 159 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 5, | Further relative to the case of the "Malfilâtre" and arms at Newport suspected for the Carlists. Although the Board of Trade will not prosecute the suspected parties, the Foreign Office need not take any further steps in the matter at present. Mr. Palmer to be informed any further communications he may send will be considered .. .. | 116 |
| 160 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 6, | On the blockade of the north coast of Spain, so as to prevent supplies reaching the Carlists by sea, and the course Her Majesty's Government should pursue, the Carlists not having been acknowledged as belligerents. The Madrid Government could not establish a municipal blockade of its own ports or coast. Such a course must lead to the issuing of a Proclamation of neutrality by the Spanish Government .. .. .. .. .. | 117 |
| 161 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | , | Further relative to the British vessels "Deerhound" and "Edith," suspected for use of the Carlists. The vessels should be watched by the Customs authorities, and should act under the 24th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, if found necessary .. .. .. .. .. | 117 |
| 162 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | On further communication from Mr. Palmer relative to the "Malfilâtre" and arms, &c., at Newport, suspected of being intended for the Carlists. No reason to alter former opinion, but any further communication from him should be made through the Spanish Minister, as no reliance can be placed on his statements .. .. .. .. | 118 |
| 163 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | As to the conduct of the authorities at Manila on the imprisonment of a British subject, Michie, a seaman, without the intervention of Her Majesty's Consul, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in demanding the Spanish Government to order the British seaman to be handed over to the British Consul. No complaint against Spanish authorities for the detention of Michie at the request of the captain of the British vessel, but he should have been given up to the Consul when his release was demanded .. .. | 118 |
| 164 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | Further relative to the case of the "Virginius," and as to the right of Her Majesty's Government to claim compensation for the families of the British subjects executed at Santiago de Cuba. Not to ground the complaint on the seizure of the vessel or the detention of the passengers, but the illegal execution of British subjects after an irregular court-martial .. .. .. .. | 119 |
| 165 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | Further relative to the blockade of the north coast of Spain and Regulations issued by the Spanish Government in 1864. No objection to them if the Carlists are to be considered as belligerents by a declaration of belligerent blockade; but other points should be protested against, such as the re-capture of neutral vessels from the enemy, and that relating to contraband, as well as the claim to condemn the ship and cargo on the ground of carriage of official despatches .. .. .. .. .. | 120 |
| 166 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | On complaint of the late Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs against the British High Court of Admiralty having taken cognizance of the suit instituted against the "Murillo" by owners of the "Northfleet." Reply that should be sent to Señor Sagasta .. .. .. .. .. | 121 |
| 167 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | On claims of Messrs. Ruthven, Whitman, and Co., against the Government of Cuba. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere, although Mr. Whitman seems to have been greatly prejudiced by suspension of payment of specie by the bank .. .. .. .. .. | 121 |
| 168 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 31, 1874 | On the claim of Mr. Kynock, agent of Figueredo Brothers, against the Spanish Government for compensation on account of the seizure of his property arising out of the Cuban insurrection. Doubtful whether Her Majesty's Government should interfere, except, as Consul Dunlop states, American claims under similar circumstances have been settled. Case of Messrs. Baring referred to .. | 121 |
| 169 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 10, | As to steps to be taken relative to the murder of James Roberts, a British subject at Huelva. Her Majesty's Government should not demand compensation for the widow on account of her sufferings and poverty .. .. | 122 |
| 170 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | Further relative to the case of the "Virginius." Report of the Governor of Jamaica on the subject connected with the "Edgar Stuart." The case one of great suspicion, but had the "Virginius" been arrested a conviction could not have been obtained. The Governor's conduct should be approved .. .. .. .. .. .. | 123 |
| 171 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to the claim of Pedro Cazacaro against the Spanish Government on account of double duty charged on some silver lead which he paid to the late revolutionary Junta at Carthagena. Her Majesty's Government should not support the claim, as the payment appears for permission to remove his property from one place to another .. .. | 123 |
| 172 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | Instructions might be sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to bring the case of the "Conflict," wrecked on the coast of Mindanao in 1864, before the Spanish Government, but cannot make a claim on that Government for restoration of the merchandize in Custom-houses of Manila and Langoa .. .. .. .. .. | 124 |
| 173 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 8, | Complaint against the Spanish authorities at Porman for sending the British steamer "Robert Ingham" to Port Mahon to perform quarantine, although provided with a clean bill of health. Her Majesty's Government should claim compensation on account of her detention and the misconduct of the Spanish officials .. .. .. | 125 |
| 174 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | As to the claims of British subjects arising out of the recent bombardment of Carthagena. Her Majesty's Government cannot represent the case of British subjects in a more favourable light for compensation than Spanish subjects similarly situated. No Government can be held responsible for injuries to persons and property of foreigners resident in the country during insurrection .. .. .. | 125 |
| 175 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further relative to claims of British subjects against the Spanish Government on account of losses during the insurrection at Carthagena, and of those made by German and Italian subjects. No reason to alter former opinion, although the claims of the German and Italian subjects have been recognized by the Spanish Government .. .. | 126 |
| 176 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | On the seizure and detention of arms, &c., found on board the "Village Bride" by the authorities at Jamaica. The conduct of the Governor of Jamaica should be approved .. | 126 |
| 177 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the proceedings of Spanish revenue vessels and officers at Gibraltar, and orders of Spanish Government relative to seizure of vessels suspected of smuggling. Cases of the "Sol" and "Jesu Nazareno," and "Fuen Santa." Remarks on the course pursued by the Spanish Government on the various recent claims of owners of British vessels brought before them, and the position of such. The "Deerhound," "Virginius," "Marie Louise," and "Gazelle" .. .. .. .. .. | 127 |
| 178 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | On the claim of Messrs. Pirie, Foote, and Co., for compensation for seizure and condemnation of certain goods belonging to them shipped on board the "Sol," seized near Gibraltar suspected of smuggling. The vessel was a Spanish vessel, and was captured outside British waters, and affords no ground of complaint against the Spanish Government .. .. .. .. .. | 129 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 179 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 26, 1874 | As to the claims of Spain to sovereignty over the Sulu Archipelago, and various questions arising out of the claim, such as the prohibition to British and German vessels engaged in trade there. Her Majesty's Government justified in taking steps to secure protection for persons and property of British subjects | 129 |
| 180 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 1, | Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid might be instructed to protest against the liability of British subjects being called on to pay over again to the Republican Government taxes and contributions already exacted by the Carlists, but not to resist those cases of voluntary payment or where no protest was made against conduct of the Carlists | 131 |
| 181 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 5, | On request of Mr. McLachlan to be furnished with copies of despatches received at the Foreign Office from Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao relative to disturbance affecting trade there. Her Majesty's Government should not so serve private interests as to comply with his request, as being prejudicial to the public service | 132 |
| 182 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | As to the seizure and condemnation of the British trading vessel "Maria Tadeo" by Spanish authorities at Algeciras. Conduct of Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid should be approved | 132 |
| 183 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 4, | Approves draft instruction to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid relative to the proceedings of Spanish Customs cruizers near Gibraltar. Case of the "Volta," and claim to the right of searching vessels of any nationality within 7½ miles from the Spanish coast | 132 |
| 184 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 4, | Further relative to the case of the "Jesu Nazareno." The representation made by Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid on the question should be approved | 133 |
| 185 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 10, | Further relative to the case of the "Sol," and reply that should be sent to Messrs. Pirie, Foote, and Co., to whom their former Report was communicated. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere in their behalf, as the ship was a Spanish ship and beyond British waters at the time of seizure | 133 |
| 186 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | On claim of Messrs. Beynon and Co. on Spanish Government for value of coal shipped on board the Spanish vessel "Teresita," bound from Cardiff to Barcelona. It should not be supported by Her Majesty's Government | 134 |
| 187 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | Further relative to the case of the murder of Mr. J. F. Roberts at Huelva. Her Majesty's Government should take no further steps in the matter | 134 |
| 188 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 6, | On claim of Mr. Marcella, owner of the British vessel "Criticado," captured off Cadiz in 1860, and accused of being engaged in an illegal enterprize. No representation should be made in this case to the Spanish Government, but instructions should be sent to Mr. Layard to state to the Spanish Government that Her Majesty's Government will be compelled to secure a proper indemnity in every case where a British vessel has been illegally seized on the high seas | 135 |
| 189 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Pedro Cazacaro to be reimbursed the export duty levied on cargo of lead shipped by him from Escomberras, which was already paid to the Carthagena insurgents. The attention of the Spanish Government might be called to the claim, so as to know on what grounds the duty was levied a second time | 136 |
| 190 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Kynoch on the Government of Cuba, and Report of Her Majesty's Consul-General at the Havana on the subject. Her Majesty's Government may properly support this claim | 137 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 191 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 14, 1874 | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Beynon and Co. on the Spanish Government, on account of goods shipped by them in the "Teresita" being seized by Carlists at Bermeo, on coast of Biscay. Approves proposed reply to Messrs. Beynon and Co., on grounds of refusal to entertain this claim | 138 |
| 192 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | As to the proceedings of the Spanish Customs authorities near Gibraltar, in searching British vessels beyond the recognized limits of 3 miles from the Spanish coast, and their claim to search vessels within the distance of 6 miles. Her Majesty's Government should refuse to recognize such a right of maritime jurisdiction, and if still persisted in, and a British vessel be seized beyond the 3-miles limit, orders should be given for the seizure and detention of Spanish vessels wherever found, until full compensation be made for the insult to the British flag, and compensation be granted to the owners of the British vessels | 138 |
| 193 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 25, | On certain Consular fees levied by Spanish Consular Agents in England on export of British merchandize to Spain. The Spanish Government has the right to require certificates for goods shipped from England to Spain, and to demand a fee which should not be confounded with a tax on exports. The question might be brought unofficially to the notice of the Spanish Government, and to point out the impolicy of the proceeding. Parties might be told the question will be inquired into | 140 |
| 194 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Pirie, Foote, and Co., on account of condemnation of their goods shipped on board the Spanish vessel "Sol." Approves draft reply to them on the ground of refusal to support their claim | 141 |
| 195 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 5, | On the alleged statement of Mr. Palmer that the vessel "Notre Dame de Fourvières" is sailing under a false register with a cargo of arms, &c., for the Carlist forces in Spain. There is not sufficient evidence to prove the vessel not being entitled to a British register, but Her Majesty's Consuls and naval officers might be instructed to watch her proceedings | 141 |
| 196 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | Further relative to the claims of British subjects arising out of the proceedings of the Carthagena insurgents, and the desire of the Spanish Government to settle them. The payment should be calculated on similar principles as granted to Italian and German subjects | 142 |
| 197 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | Further relative to the vessel "Notre Dame de Fourvières" and claim of Mr. Wigdahl, the alleged owner, for her detention at Southend. The Admiralty to be informed his claim will be considered on proof of ownership and the vessel being entitled to a British register | 142 |
| 198 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 2, | On question raised by Mr. Ricketts, Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, as to the validity of the will of Mr. Honiss, a British subject. It would not be valid unless he had an English domicile at the time of his decease. As to his property in Manila, question of domicile would have to be decided by the Spanish Courts, but if he had no personal property in England Probate in an English Court would be useless. Consul Ricketts' letter to Mrs. Gee might properly be sent to her | 143 |
| 199 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 7, | On complaint of Mr. W. H. Ross relative to certain taxes levied in Island of Cuba for the purpose of suppressing the insurrection there, and claim of British subjects to exemption from them. These taxes cannot be considered as a forced loan or war contribution, and all inhabitants being equally liable to them, British subjects cannot claim exemption | 143 |
| 200 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further relative to the vessel "Notre Dame de Fourvières" and landing of arms on the coast of Spain for the use of the Carlists. No sufficient evidence produced that would justify the prosecution ot the registered owner of the vessel | 144 |

| 211 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 24, | On subject of the overcrowding of the pilgrim ships at the port of Alexandria, and the views of Consul Stanley as to the legal powers of Her Majesty's Consuls under "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1843," "The Passengers' Acts, 1855 and 1863," and Order in Council relative to Consular Jurisdiction. To detain British vessels on that account. The measures adopted by the Board of Trade of more efficacy to prevent the evil .. .. .. .. | 152 |
| 212 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 9, | As to the proposed scheme for judicial reform in Tunis, and reply to be given to the Italian Chargé d'Affaires on the question of the rights of territorial jurisdiction .. .. | 153 |

TURKEY.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 213 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 5, 1874 | Claim of Mr. Sailor against the Egyptian Government for money due to him for salary. Her Majesty's Consul-General should give his good offices, but not demand the payment for Mr. Sailor .. .. .. .. | 154 |
| 214 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 19, | As to the expulsion of G. P. Costello, a Maltese subject, from the Ottoman dominions by order of the Consular Court at Alexandria, and whether the order should be maintained or rescinded according to the opinion of Sir P. Francis. Do not agree with him that Her Majesty's Government have no power to relax the sentence. Effect may be given to the opinion of Mr. Lane. Serious questions often arise as to the legality of deportation .. .. . | 154 |
| 215 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 4, | On letter from Lord Henry Scott relative to the claim of Miss Harriss for compensation for damage to her house by the explosion of gun cotton stored by the authorities at Alexandria. Opinion given in 1871 on the similar claim of Mr. Wilson. Her Majesty's Consul-General may present Miss Harriss's petition unofficially for favourable consideration .. .. .. .. .. .. | 155 |
| 216 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | As to the fees payable in the Consular Courts in the Levant, and memorandum on the subject by Mr. Reilly. Suggests alteration of the fees by Order in Council, but cannot dispense with them altogether after an Order in Council has been issued. With respect to marriage and other fees. Want further Minute on those questions .. .. | 155 |
| 217 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | On the proposed imposition of a stamp duty in Turkey, and if in contravention to stipulations of the Treaty with Great Britain. It would not be so if levied equally on the subjects of other countries and on English subjects.. .. | 156 |
| 218 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 25, | On request of the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador for information as to the course adopted by captains of British vessels relative to the payment of Suez Canal dues. Instructions should be given to the captains of Her Majesty's ships, in the event of any opposition to their transit through the Canal, except on payment of dues on the gross tonnage. They should not pay the dues under protest unless the vessel is compelled to continue her voyage. Notification should be made to British vessels as to the dues fixed by the International Commission .. . | 156 |

| 219 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 25, 1874 | As to the decision of the International Tonnage Commission with respect to the Suez Canal dues, and whether Captains of Her Majesty's ships could claim from the Company the sums paid under protest on the gross tonnage on passing through the Canal. Captains of Her Majesty's ships could claim from the Company the dues paid under protest from the date when the dues were first raised; but if the Company oppose the transit of their ships, except on payment of the dues, the Captains should not force the passage, but immediately communicate with Her Majesty's Consul-General | 157 |
| 220 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | On the threat of M. de Lesseps to render the passage of the Suez Canal unpracticable should the International Commission's decision be enforced. If he were to carry out his threat, it would be a violation of the terms of his concession, and the Khedive might assume the management of the Canal, as he would have the right to do if the Canal was not in good repair and working order | 158 |
| 221 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | On the letter of Mr. Turner, inclosing the petition of Mrs. Madeleine Rassam, for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government, relative to her alleged divorce from, and relative to the estate of her late husband. The case is one in which the rights of Turkish subjects are concerned, and Mrs. Rassam is about to take legal proceedings in the case, so that no diplomatic aid should be given, but the case might be watched by Her Majesty's Consul, though Mrs. Rassam is a Turkish subject | 158 |
| 222 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 27, | As to the claim of Captain Vella against the Egyptian Government for alleged wrongful dismissal from his employment. Her Majesty's Government should not support this claim, as, by the terms of his contract, he was subject to immediate dismissal | 159 |
| 223 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 4, | On charges levied by the Suez Canal Company on certain vessels employed as tenders to Indian troop-ships passing through the Canal, assuming that they were used as tugs. The Company had no right to levy a toll on the tenders "Prompt" and "Hasty" above 10 francs a ton | 159 |
| 224 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | Proceedings of the Suez Canal Company on the new Tariff issued by the recommendation of the International Tonnage Commission. They insist on measuring the vessels instead of taking the ships' registers as a basis for calculating the dues. The tonnage certificates delivered by the competent Government authorities should be the guide; if not provided with these the ships' papers showing the net tonnage would be sufficient. Approves draft instructions to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople | 160 |
| 225 | Dr. Deane | 19, | The Attorney- and Solicitor-General agree with him that the Suez Canal Company is not entitled to re-measure ships passing through the Canal when the ships are regularly certified to and in accordance with the country to which the ship belongs | 161 |
| 226 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt relative to the trial against the Suez Canal Company on account of overcharges by them, and to which tribunal the suit should be taken. The Civil Court of Egypt would be the right Court. If any difficulty might arise General Stanton should inform Her Majesty's Government and suggest a remedy | 161 |
| 227 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 10, | As to the piratical attack at Bussorah on the steamer "Cashmere," and request of Mr. W. Bradford, an officer belonging to that vessel, for a reconsideration of his claim to compensation. No reason to alter opinion of former Law Officers in 1873 | 162 |
| 228 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | As to further instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople relative to the recent action of the Porte towards the Danube and Black Sea Railway and Kustendje Harbour Company. The case should be offered to arbitration, or a Mixed Commission to settle the point in dispute with regard to the Convention of 1870 | 162 |
| 229 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 13, 1874 | As to the effect on the export trade by the new regulations in Turkey respecting the manufacture and sale of tobacco, and whether any claim could be made for restoration of the duty levied on the manufacture. The duty is not within the Anglo-Turkish Treaty, therefore cannot be claimed | 163 |
| 230 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | On proposals made for the settlement of outstanding claims against the Egyptian Government. Her Majesty's Government should accede to the proposal | 163 |
| 231 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 25, | As to the project of the Ottoman Government for imposing a tax on trading licences. Agree with Sir P. Francis that this would be under the Capitulations an infraction of the Treaty rights of Great Britain | 164 |
| 232 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | As to the instructions to be given to Sir Philip Francis relative to the fee levied on the personal estate of the late Mr. C. J. Hanson. The fee on probate or letters of administration under the Order in Council is not a tax or duty, the stamp duty in England being merely for the purpose of fixing the amount of the fee | 164 |
| 233 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | On the amended scale of fees leviable in the Consular Courts in the Levant as proposed by Sir J. Francis may be properly adopted | 165 |
| 234 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 25, | Further relative to the Danube and Black Sea Railway Company, and observations on the points at issue with the Porte. Offered to arbitration. The new points of difference cannot prejudice the rights of the company to a settlement of the former questions | 165 |
| 235 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 6, | Further relative to the case of the "Cashmere" and request of the British Indian Steam Navigation Company for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government to recover from the Porte the value of the portion of the property stolen on the occasion of the piratical attack on the vessel at Bussorah. Her Majesty's Government cannot make this claim, but instructions might be given to express a hope that the unrecovered amount may be obtained | 166 |
| 236 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 6, | Further relative to the proposed tax on trading licences in Turkey, and the observations of the Italian Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople on the subject. Sir H. Elliot agrees that it would be an infraction of the Treaty obligations with England. Her Majesty's Government should not make any counter-proposition | 166 |
| 237 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | On the suppression by the Turkish Government of the "Levant Times," an English newspaper published at Constantinople. Her Majesty's Government should not take any steps in the matter. As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople for the order to be rescinded | 167 |
| 238 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 14, | Further relative to the Amended Table of Fees to be substituted for the one in the Order in Council of 12th December last. As to the charges on grant of probate or letters of administration by the Consular Courts in the Levant. Do not quite agree to Mr. Reilly's proposal as to the limitations of the fees. Think it will be too favourable to larger estates and act unfairly to smaller properties | 167 |
| 239 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Dec. 5, | As to the detention of the British vessel "Mesopotamia" by the officials of the Suez Canal Company. Approve instructions proposed to be sent to Consul-General Stanton | 168 |
| 240 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | As to the claim of an English woman, married to a Roumanian, but divorced from him according to the Roumanian law, to British protection on the plea of returning to her original nationality. She has no right to claim British protection, but Mr. Vivian, Her Majesty's Consul-General at Bucharest, may afford her unofficial protection | 169 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 241 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 16, 1874 | On subject of the sale of the British burial ground at Smyrna and the removal of the remains to the new burial ground granted by the Turkish Government. As British subjects resident there object to sale of the old cemetery, want to know if they have any lien upon the property. They have no right to interfere as they have not contributed either to the old or new cemetery, and as the cemetery was ceded to Her Majesty's Government by the Levant Company .. | 169 |

UNITED STATES.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 242 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 9, 1874 | On the proposed reciprocal arrangement between the Government of Canada and the United States' authorities in Montana for crossing their territories in pursuit of the murderers of certain Assiniboine Indians, and as to the expediency of inserting a clause in the proposed Extradition Treaty with the United States for carrying out the wishes of the Canadian Government. Not advisable to accede to the proposal of the Governor-General of Canada, which would give permission for American forces to enter British territory. Have not, therefore, drawn a clause to be inserted in the draft Treaty .. .. .. .. | 170 |
| 243 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Feb. 4, | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Wilson put forward by Messrs. Whitley and Maddock. The parties should be informed there is no prospect of success in making a representation to the United States' Government, as they have delayed for five years bringing their claim to the notice of Her Majesty's Government or bringing it before the Mixed Commission .. .. .. .. | 170 |
| 244 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | Further relative to Messrs. Wilson's claim. Messrs. Whitley and Maddock should be informed Her Majesty's Government cannot support the claim, but they can bring it before the Court of Claims, if the President of the United States, with the concurrence of Congress, adopt his proposal .. | 171 |
| 245 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 28, | On claims of certain British subjects for compensation for losses sustained by them through the acts of the "Alabama" and other Confederate cruizers. Agree with late Law Officers that Her Majesty's Government are not liable to British subjects for those acts . .. .. | 171 |
| 246 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 27, | As to the observations of Mr. Carlisle, the Legal Adviser to the British Legation at Washington, with respect to the British settlers in the Island of San Juan. Agree with him that the island formed part of the United States previous to the Award of the Emperor of Germany, and Sir E. Thornton should be instructed to urge the case of British subjects who had settled there to protection .. .. | 172 |
| 247 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 21, | On the proposed Consular Convention with the United States, and proposed Act of Parliament relating to foreign Consuls in Great Britain. The Act should not extend to India or the British Colonies. Further suggestions for consideration .. .. .. .. .. .. | 172 |
| 248 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 23, | On the proposed draft of a Reciprocity Treaty to be submitted to the United States' Government by Sir E. Thornton and Mr. Brown of Canada. Suggestion with respect to Articles VII and XIV .. .. .. .. | 173 |
| 249 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | Further relative to the proposed Treaty of Reciprocity with the United States, and the form that Mr. Fish proposes to submit it to the Senate of the United States. Objections to the draft Treaty, and suggestions for consideration .. | 174 |
| 250 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 7, | On the complaint of the Exchequer Gold and Silver Mining Company of the effect on their interests by the laws of the United States relating to the tenure of mining property, and wish of Mr. Chalmers for a change in the law of the United States of 1872. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere, but Mr. Chalmers' case might be brought to the notice of the United States' Government .. .. | 175 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 251 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 17, 1874 | As to the treatment of the British vessel "Grace" by the United States' authorities at Darien, Georgia. No reason to alter opinion given by the late Law Officers in 1873 .. | 175 |
| 252 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 27, | Further relative to the Bill Her Majesty's Government desired to propose to Parliament relative to foreign Consuls in this country, and suggestions for removing the difficulties relative to the jurisdiction of the British Local Courts in dealing with offences committed on the high seas .. | 176 |
| 253 | Attorney-General | Sept. 8, | On claim of Mr. Gerard under the Washington Arbitration. The amount of the award since assigned over by him to Mr. Whitworth, but on what grounds is unknown. A cautious reply should therefore be sent to him, as the sum in question is large, and Mr. Howard should be well assured of the right party to receive it .. .. .. | 177 |
| 254 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 8, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Gerard brought before the Claims' Commission, and as to the delay in the payment of the awards under the XVth Article of the Treaty of Washington. Mr. Howard must not pay any portion of the award to Mr. Whitworth, the Assignee, without the assent of all the Insurance Companies and others for whom Mr. Gerard was the trustee, but suggest the expediency of an arrangement between the parties for the fund to be remitted to this country for distribution .. .. .. | 177 |
| 255 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to the extradition of a man named Robbins, claimed by, and admitted to belong to, Her Majesty's authorities of New Brunswick and the State of Maine respectively. His extradition should be demanded if he be not tried, or there be a failure of justice on his trial in Maine .. .. | 178 |
| 256 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 8, | On claim of Mr. David Calderwood against the United States' Government for damages for his imprisonment under an order of the County Court of San Francisco, which was declared void by the Supreme Court of California. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere in the case, although he has suffered from an error in judgment of the Judges of a United States' Court .. .. .. .. | 179 |
| 257 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | As to instructions to be sent to H. Howard relative to the claim of the heirs of the late John Purvis to receive the amount of the award of the Claims' Commission. The amount due may be paid to Mr. King without any further proof .. .. .. .. .. .. | 179 |
| 258 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 9, | As to instructions to be sent to Mr. H. Howard relative to the claim of Mr. John Haskins, a British subject, on the United States' Government. The claim of Mr. Davis is against Messrs. Denver and Peck, and he has no right to stop the payment of the award to Mr. Haskins which Mr. H. Howard may be instructed to pay .. .. | 180 |
| 259 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. David Calderwood for imprisonment by the County Court at San Francisco. Nothing in his supplemental statement to induce them to alter opinion already given .. .. .. .. | 180 |
| 260 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Further relative to the case of extradition of Robbins. Her Majesty's Government cannot further demand his extradition either on account of failure of justice on his trial for murder, or for having committed some other extraditional offence .. .. .. .. .. .. | 180 |
| 261 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 9, | On the proposed Consular Convention with the United States and Bill before Parliament, and remarks of the Board of Trade on question of reciprocity. Suggestions with regard to offences on board a foreign ship within the local jurisdiction of the country where the Consular Officer resides. Approve suggestions of the Board of Trade on question of reciprocity .. .. .. .. | 181 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 262 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Jan. 7, 1874 | As to instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Minister on losses of foreign subjects, owners of the British vessel "Ines" by the plunder of the cargo on her being wrecked in the Bay of Maracaibo. The losses having fallen on an American insurance office the owners ought not to receive further compensation, and the remedy, it any be sought, should be from the Tribunals in Venezuela, and Mr. Middleton should not further urge the claim .. .. | 182 |
| 263 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Mar. 6, | The reply of the Venezuelan Government to representation made relative to the injury to British trade by certain Articles in the Financial Code, need not be noticed until a question of injury arises .. .. .. .. | 182 |
| 264 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 21, | On refusal of the Venezuelan Government to allow interest on the amounts awarded to British claimants by a Mixed Commission which sat in 1868-69 under the Convention of 1868. In some cases interest having been awarded, further information must be obtained before deciding the question .. .. .. .. .. .. | 183 |
| 265 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Apr. 14, | On question of the seizure of the British vessel "Violet" by the police at Trinidad in 1872. Suspected of having arms and ammunition on board at a time when the export was forbidden. The claim of Messrs. Zwicher and Co. for the seizure and detention of the vessel might be paid as a favour but not as a right .. .. .. .. .. | 184 |
| 266 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | On the alleged existence of a Committee formed in the Island of Trinidad for the overthrow of the Venezuelan Government, and on the question of a conspiracy to incite a rebellion in a foreign country. Do not concur with opinion of the Acting Attorney-General in Trinidad. Views of Lord Tenterden on the subject entirely correct. The letter of the Governor of Trinidad to the Venezuelan Government might be approved.. .. .. .. .. | 184 |
| 267 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 29, | As to the claim of Mr. Agostini against the Venezuelan Government. He should be informed that his case is under consideration, or otherwise, as the case may be .. .. | 185 |
| 268 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 26, | Instructions that should be given to Mr. Middleton, Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas, with respect to certain British claims against the Venezuelan Government that were withdrawn from the consideration of the Mixed Commission of 1868-69. Those of Christopher Home and Thomas acknowledged, but the claims of Stevenson, Desuse, Award, and Romberg and Schloss and Michelsen, no further information can be obtained than by the Report of the Commission. Amount of support that should be granted by Her Majesty's Government to these claims .. | 186 |
| 269 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further relative to the question whether interest should be allowed on the amounts awarded to British claimants by Mixed Commission of 1868-69. The reason of the difficulty in deciding this has arisen from no stipulation being in the Convention as to payment of interest when the award was made, but it ought to be paid, and Her Majesty's Government would be justified in claiming it .. .. | 187 |
| 270 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 8, | As to the claims of the estate of Messrs. Gilbert, Kerr, and Co. on the Venezuelan Government. Those of John Giuseppe and Henrique Schmale embargoed by a judicial resolution communicated by the Venezuelan Government. Mr. Middleton to be instructed to state in writing to Señor Blanco that he will proceed to pay the amount of their claims, but he should inform the parties that the Venezuelan Government has stopped the payment under a process from the Venezuelan Courts by notice; and that they must endeavour to have the notice withdrawn .. .. | 188 |
| 271 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Claim of Messrs. Gilbert, Kerr, and Co, satisfactorily disposed of. The other claims mentioned in their Report of the 8th instant still unsettled .. .. .. | 18 |
| 272 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 16, 1874 | Further relative to the claims of British subjects against the Venezuelan Government. Amount of the claims of Messrs. Syers, Grup, Foote, Myer, and Co. General state of these and other claims. Her Majesty's Government should state that they will employ the means in their power to compel the Venezuelan Government to observe their obligations, and will insist on payment of the claims .. | 189 |
| 273 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 17, | On the seizure of the British vessel "Rosalina" on a charge of smuggling by the Venezuelan authorities at Ciudad, Bolivar. Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas should watch the proceedings and ascertain if the vessel is entitled to sail under the British flag having been properly transferred from her former owner .. .. .. .. | 190 |

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received August 20.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, August 20, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that he had received from the Archbishop of Canterbury the inclosed Memorial, addressed to the Queen, praying for Her Majesty's licence, under the Act 5 Vict., cap. 6, in order to enable his Grace to consecrate the Reverend E. Steere, LL.D., to be Bishop of the Church of England in Central Africa; and that he, Lord Tenterden, was also to transmit to us the draft of a licence to the effect prayed for by the Archbishop; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether there is any objection to the licence being issued.

That, as bearing upon the subject, Lord Tenterden was pleased to say that he was to refer us to two Reports addressed by Her Majesty's Law Officers to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, under date of the 5th October and 20th December, 1858, relative to the consecration of the late Bishop Mackenzie; and more especially to the Reports of Her Majesty's Law Officers to your Lordship's Department dated the 13th and 29th January, 1863, relative to the consecration of Bishop Tozer (whom Mr. Steere is to succeed) and Bishop Twells.

That your Lordship would be glad to receive our Report at our earliest convenience, as it is desired by the Archbishop that the consecration should take place on the 24th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have perused the proposed licence, and consider that it is in proper form, and that there is no objection to its being issued.

We have, &c.

No. 1.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received May 25.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, May 23, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Bourke's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers* on the subject of the position of Austrian and Italian ships in regard to the right of trading in the River Gambia, and he, Mr. Bourke, was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points raised by the Administrator of the Gambia, and by the French Minister, in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Austrian and Italian vessels would not be admitted to the Gambia navigation under a most-favoured-nation clause, nor because they happened to be chartered by French subjects.

We submit for your Lordship's consideration that it would be advisable to obtain a new Ordinance extending the right of trading in the River Gambia, and in the meanwhile to continue the use of special permits to vessels requiring such.

And that the Administrator of the River Gambia and the French Minister may properly be informed to that effect.

We have, &c.

Temple, February 4, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres, relative to the imprisonment at Mendoza, in the Argentine Confederation, of two British subjects named Dudley and Gibbs, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any, and if so, what steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government can take no further steps than to direct Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres to see that the trial is fairly conducted, and that he has proper opportunities for offering his defence.

We have, &c.

Lincoln's Inn, July 7, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd June last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Williams respecting his claim against the Argentine Government, and that he was also to transmit to us the previous papers connected with the case, and to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer upon it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the claim of Mr. Williams against the Argentine Government cannot be further urged by your Lordship.

Lincoln's Inn, October 28, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was to transmit to us a despatch from the Acting British Consul at Buenos Ayres, requesting to be informed if the local Courts of that country could claim a right to sequestrate any pension or portion of a pension granted by Her Majesty's Government, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion regarding the instructions to be given to the Acting Consul in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the local Courts of a foreign country cannot claim (in the sense of exercise and enforce) a right to sequestrate any pension, or portion of a pension, granted by Her Majesty's Government, and in the hands of the person intrusted with the payment by Her Majesty's Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received October 30.)

Lincoln's Inn, October 30, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres, with its inclosures, respecting the claim of Mr. Cranwell, a British subject established at Monte Video, against the Government of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay; and that he, Mr. Lister, was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon; and that he was, at the same time, to transmit to us the correspondence, as marked in the margin,* from which we should gather the causes which led to the suspension of diplomatic relations between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Uruguay in 1871, and which had not as yet been resumed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the circumstances upon which, according to his own statement, the claim of Mr. Cranwell is founded, and, in our opinion, the goods were voluntarily supplied by him, on credit. If this be so, it seems to us that the failure of the debtor, even though the debtor be the State, affords no reason for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.

Lincoln's Inn, December 5, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres, requesting instructions as to the claim of British subjects to exemption, under the IXth Article of the Treaty of the 2nd February, 1825, from military exactions or requisitions in the Argentine Republic.

That a copy of the Treaty was sent therewith, together with the other papers referred to in Mr. West's despatch; and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Mr. West upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the words of the last sentence in Article IX of the Treaty of the 2nd February, 1825, are express, and Her Majesty's subjects are thereby exempted from all military exactions or requisitions.

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, December 14, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, as marked in the margin,* from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres, having reference to the interference of the Local Courts in regard to a dispute as to the wages due to a seaman of a French ship by the master. A previous despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Rosario, referred to in the course of the correspondence, was likewise inclosed; and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Mr. West, in the event of interference, such as that exercised in the case of the French ship being claimed by the Local Courts over similar disputes affecting the discipline of British ships.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the Courts of the country in which the ship may be have, in the absence of any Treaty or Convention to the contrary, a jurisdiction over questions of wages on board such ships.

It has been the practice in England, where a suit for wages has been brought in the Admiralty Court by a foreign seaman against a foreign ship, to direct that notice be given to the Consul; but this has been a matter of courtesy, and not required to give the Court jurisdiction.

The law applicable to the case would, as a general rule, be the law of the country to which the ship belonged, and under which the contract for wages was made.

Apart from Treaty or Convention, we believe that a Consul has no claim to a jurisdiction over the subjects of the country whose officer he is in disputes relating to wages or affecting the ship's discipline; and that the only instructions which can properly be sent to Mr. West are that, in the event of the Local Courts claiming to interfere in disputes affecting the discipline of British ships, the exercise of that jurisdiction should be carefully watched.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville—(Received January 16.)

My Lord, Temple, January 14, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 28th November, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Vienna, No. 63, Commercial, relative to a question which has arisen before a Tribunal of that capital as to whether the name of a firm is included among the marks and designations of goods protected by Article IX of the Anglo-Austrian Treaty of the 16th December, 1865 ("Hertslet's Treaties," vol. xii, p. 169), and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

* Mr. West, No. 8, Consular, September 14; ditto, No. 10, Consular, September 15; to Mr. West, No. 4, Consular, October 28; Mr. West, No. 12, Consular, September 23, 1874; Mr. Joel, No. 7, July 8, 1872.

In a postscript Mr. Lister stated that he was further to transmit to us, for convenience of reference, copies of the German texts of the Austrian laws of the 7th December, 1858, and of the 15th June, 1865, relative to the protection of trade marks, which had been received at the Foreign Office since the foregoing letter was written.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion, so far as we are able to form an opinion upon a question of Austrian law, Messrs. Atkinson are not legally entitled to protection for their trade name, unless they proceed to register it in the manner prescribed by the Austrian Law of the 7th December, 1858, for the registration of trade marks.

That Law applied in the first instance only to natives of Austria. It provided for the protection both of trade marks ("gewerblichen marken")*, and of trade names ("bereichnungen"),† such as the name of a firm. Under its terms trade marks were required to be registered, but not trade names.

Then the Austrian Law of June 1865 provided for applying the Law of 1858 to foreigners by reciprocal Commercial Treaties, provided that the foreigners, in order to obtain protection "for their trade marks and trade names must have them registered with a Chamber of Commerce and Industry." The same words as in the Law of 1858 are used to describe trade marks and trade names respectively.

Lastly, the Treaty of 1865 provided that "the subjects of the one of the two contracting parties shall, in the dominions of the other, enjoy the same protection as native subjects in regard to the rights of property in trade marks and other trade names, as well as in patterns and designs for manufactures."

If this Treaty had stood alone, it would have warranted Messrs. Atkinson's contention; but we think that it cannot override the express requirement of registration which is contained in the Law of 1865.

The same remark applies to this case as to others in which we have observed that the legal and commercial experience available in the Board of Trade would dispose of such questions in a manner far more satisfactory than any resources at the disposal of the Law Officers can enable them to do.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received March 11.)

Temple, March 9, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Bourke's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mrs. Levy, stating that her husband was undergoing a sentence of imprisonment in Austria, and that she understood that when he was released he was to be again arrested and given up to the Italian and German Governments on other accusations, and that Mr. Bourke was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could take any action in that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that Mrs. Levy does not make out a case for interference or remonstrance upon which your Lordship could act.

Mr. Levy is undergoing sentence of imprisonment which will not expire for some time. A part of the sentence is that, at the expiration of the imprisonment, he be expelled from the Austrian dominions, and if, when carried over the frontier, he is again arrested for crimes committed within the territory in which he is found, he has no ground for complaint. It is suggested by Mrs. Levy that she hears from "undeniable sources" that an order has been given that Mr. Levy should, at the expiration of the sentence, be deported to a country in which he will at once be arrested again for offences committed in that country.

---

* e.g., Bass' red triangle.

† e.g., Bass and Co.'s Burton Ales.

1874

If such be the case we think that this cannot be made ground for remonstrance. In the execution of the sentence the Austrian Government may determine for itself into what neighbouring country the prisoner shall be taken, in order to carry into execution the decree for expulsion.

Again, Mrs. Levy suggests that if Mr. Levy should be pardoned by the Austrian Government (an event which appears to be very improbable) he is to be illegally arrested again, in order that he may be captured under authority issued from Munich.

Whether this course could be taken under any existing Treaty of Extradition between the two countries we know not, but we think that it should not be assumed that the Austrian Government is contemplating an illegal act, and that Mrs. Levy should be informed that no remonstrance can be addressed to the Austrian Government upon such representations as those contained in her letter.

The utmost that could properly be done would be to ascertain from Her Majesty's Representative at Vienna what is the true state of facts as regards this Mr. Levy, but upon such information as that furnished by Mrs. Levy, we would suggest that your Lordship may think that this is not a course which at present, at all events, should be adopted.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th of July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Vienna, together with a letter from the Board of Trade, relative to a proposal on the part of the Austrian Minister of Finance that the customs duties in that country should be paid in gold instead of silver; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to how far the substitution of a gold instead of a silver currency in payment of the customs dues was in accordance with the provisions of the Anglo-Austrian Treaty of Commerce of the 10th December, 1865.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion there is nothing in the Anglo-Austrian Treaty of Commerce of the 10th December, 1865, which is directly contrary to the proposal of the Austrian Minister of Finance.

We would, however, suggest to your Lordship that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Vienna may properly be instructed to inform you if the proposal is proceeded with, in order that Her Majesty's Government may be in a position to protect British interests if indirectly affected, either by an infraction of Article XI of the Anglo-Austrian Treaty (the most-favoured-nation clause), or by the operation of the agio on gold.

Temple, April 18, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th April instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Post Office, with its inclosures, relating to the arrest of the Belgian mail-packet "Prince Bandorn," from which we perceive that a question is raised in the letter from Mr. Knocker, which forms inclosure No. 2 in the Post Office letter, as to whether the Convention which was concluded between Her Majesty and the King of the Belgians on the 19th October, 1844, of which a copy is inclosed, overrides the statute law of the realm; and Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that we would be so good as to favour your Lordship with our opinion on the matter, and whether any legislation on the subject is desirable.

For convenience of reference Lord Tenterden was pleased to transmit the papers relating to the case of the "Prince Bandorn," as well as a Law Officers' Report which was given on a previous instance of a similar nature.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are disposed to think that if the question were solemnly discussed it might be open to grave doubt whether this ship could be considered, by reason either of her character or of the Convention, a public ship to all intents and purposes, so as to be entitled to be released in the event of her being arrested by means of process of the Admiralty Court; but we think that this question may not be one of very great importance, inasmuch as we believe that the practice followed in this case of at once releasing the ship is one that has been universally adopted by the Court of Admiralty, and, under these circumstances, we think that legislation is not necessary.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Bourke's letter of the 5th instant, stating that the Belgian Minister had, in the inclosed note, requested the Foreign Office to transmit to certain individuals in this country a sentence passed upon them by default by the Tribunal of Commerce of Antwerp, and also stating that your Lordship presumed that the Foreign Office would not be justified in serving upon British subjects sentences of foreign Tribunals; but Mr. Bourke was directed by your Lordship to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion on the point, and, further, that we would enable you to state to the Minister what is the mode of procedure that should properly be adopted by him.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the Foreign Office would not be justified in serving upon British subjects the sentences of foreign Tribunals.

The Belgian Minister may be told that the persons who have obtained the Judgment of the Belgian Court may sue upon that Judgment, in an English Court, the persons against whom they hold the Judgment, but that it does not follow necessarily that they will recover in such suit, since objections may be taken to, and

Matthews complaining of the detention of his vessel, the "Marguerite," by direction of the Belgium bankruptcy authorities, and soliciting the intervention of Her Majesty's Government; and Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with such remarks as we might have to make as to the steps, if any, which should be taken in the matter.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to forward to us a further letter, dated the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 7th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter, with its inclosures, from Mr. J. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 4.)

Lincoln's Inn, November 4, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 5th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers relative to a marriage celebrated by the British Vice-Consul at Ostend between parties who had not resided within the town of Ostend itself, though they had resided within what might have been properly considered the limits of the Consular district before the appointment of the present Vice-Consul.

That we should perceive that a question had been raised in connection with that case as to whether the Secretary of State has power, under the Consular Marriage Act, to authorize Consular Officers to celebrate marriages beyond the limits of their districts as defined in their commissions or letters of appointment.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship—(1) as to the legality of the marriage celebrated by Mr. Vice-Consul D'Arcy; (2) whether the Secretary of State could legally authorize the celebration of marriages beyond the Consular district proper; and (3), if the Secretary of State had that power, whether any, and if so what, alteration should be made in the warrant in cases where it might be considered necessary to exert that power.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That, in our opinion, as Mr. D'Arcy was appointed Vice-Consul "at Ostend" only, he had no authority to celebrate a marriage between parties resident at Furnes, a place out of his district; but although the marriage in question was, in our view, unlawfully celebrated by the Consul, still, considering the provisions of the 13th section of 12 and 13 Vic., cap. 68, we doubt whether it can now be impeached.

2. After considerable hesitation we have come to the conclusion that, by the 19th section of the above-mentioned Act, the Secretary of State may authorize the celebration of marriages beyond the Consular district proper.

Both the points just referred to, however, present so much difficulty that we are induced to suggest that, whenever a Bill is introduced in Parliament relating to Consular marriages, clauses should be inserted with a view to set at rest the questions which have arisen.

3. We think the authority to celebrate marriages out of the district proper should be conferred on the Consuls and Consular Agents by special warrants directing and authorizing them to solemnize and register marriages in certain places specified in the warrant.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received January 15.)

Temple, January 13, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that, before giving effect to the opinion of the Law Officers, signified in their Report of the 16th August last, that Consuls levying fees on behalf of Her Majesty's Government were entitled to retain marriage fees on their own account, your Lordship was anxious to submit two points for our consideration, viz.:—

1. That it was not probable that the framers of the Act 12 and 13 Vic., cap. 68, desired to attach any special significance to the word "have" therein made use of as distinguished from the word "take" used in the Order in Council of the 1st May, 1855, and the words "take, accept, and receive" employed in the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, because as late as the time when the last in point of date of those enactments was passed, and, indeed, not until some years afterwards, there was no such thing in the General Consular Service as levying fees on account of Her Majesty's Government, but that all fees whatsoever, whether shipping, notarial, or marriage fees, were had, taken, received, and retained by the Consuls as part of their emoluments. That it was not until the year 1859 that, in conformity with the recommendation of the Select Committee of the previous year on the Consular Service, the system was initiated, which had since become general, of levying fees on account of Her Majesty's Government.

That the employment of the word "have" in the Act 12 and 13 Vic. might be regarded, therefore, as purely casual; but even assuming that we did not concur in that view, and should consider that the word "have" must necessarily be understood as having had a special signification separate and distinct from the words to be found in the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, and in the Order in Council of the 1st May, 1855, Lord Tenterden was—

2. To call our attention to the terms of the letter of appointment now sent to every Consul who was instructed to collect fees on account of Her Majesty's Government. That those terms, which were very broad and comprehensive, were as follows:—"All fees by law leviable by Her Majesty's Consuls are to be collected on account of

THE OCEANA GROUP PUBLISHERS

1874

Her Majesty's Government;" and that Lord Tenterden was to inquire whether it was not open to Her Majesty's Government to make that a condition of appointment; and whether, if a Consul accepted an appointment subject to such a condition, he was not bound by it, the word "have" in the Act 12 and 13 Vic., cap. 68, notwithstanding.

That under those circumstances it would seem to be open to the Government to enforce that condition by dismissing a Consul who, after accepting an appointment subject to the condition, should refuse to be bound by it.

That the previous papers were returned therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion there is no substantial difference between the title of the Consuls to the fees leviable under 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, s. 4, and the marriage fees demandable under 12 and 13 Vic., cap. 68. Both Acts appear to us to contemplate the receipt of these fees by the Consuls for their benefit in the first instance.

But we can see no reason why the Consuls, instead of being remunerated by fees, should not be paid by salary and called upon to account for their fees to the Government. In our opinion any Consul appointed on the terms mentioned in draft appointment sent to us is bound to account for marriage as well as other fees as fees collected on account of Her Majesty's Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received May 14.)

Temple, May 12, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd March last, stating that, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the 23rd June last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro respecting the case of the Queen Insurance Company.

That he was also to transmit to us the previous correspondence connected with that case, and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the real difficulty in obtaining any compensation for the Company is correctly stated in the despatch of Mr. B. Matthews (No. 2, 8th January, 1874), that is, that the several Tribunals in Brazil have given unfavourable decisions against the Company.

This difficulty, which would in most cases be almost insuperable, is, in the case of the Company, made still more serious by the fact that the Company by its constitution in Brazil was made in Brazil subject to the law of Brazil, and the defence was entrusted to an incompetent advocate by the agent, who voluntarily absented himself during the greater part of the proceedings.

So far, therefore, as the Company is concerned, we are of opinion that the compensation and its amount must be left entirely in the hands of Mr. B. Matthews, who may be instructed to do the best he can, but officiously, with the Brazilian Government.

The opinion of the Council of State that the orders against Messrs. Taylor and Lyde were illegal and unjust, referred to in Mr. B. Matthews' despatch (No. 8, 8th January, 1874), afford, we think, a sufficient ground for instructing Mr. Matthews to press the claims of those British subjects upon the Brazilian Government.

We are unable to form any opinion upon the amount of compensation which should be asked for Messrs. Taylor and Lyde.

Possibly, if they had appeared instead of absenting themselves they might have suffered little or no inconvenience, for instance, by being admitted to bail, or possibly released at once without bail or imprisonment.

At all events the sums which they name seems to us extravagant in amount, and we see no reason to doubt the accuracy of the estimate of compensation given in all three cases by Mr. B. Matthews in his despatch No. 9, 29th January, 1874.

Mr. Taylor and Mr. Lyde should, however, be informed, before any application is made on their behalf, that Her Majesty's Government cannot urge their claims upon the Brazilian Government unless those gentlemen will bring the amount within a reasonable limit.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received September 3.)

Lincoln's Inn, August 31, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the accompanying papers* upon a question which had been long pending between this country and Brazil, relative to the claims of British subjects against Brazil and the claims of Brazilian subjects against Great Britain.

That the main points of the question are treated of in the printed papers, but the volumes of manuscripts were also sent in case we should wish to refer to any of the documents contained in them.

That we would see from the papers that both Brazilian and British claims are of long standing and of various dates; that the British claims are on account of debts due to, and injuries done to, British subjects; that they are fifty-one in number, and amounted in 1858 to 380,190*l.* 4*s.* 0½*d.* That Mr. Thornton, however, who examined these claims in 1867, did not consider that more than 47,559*l.* 17*s.* 1½*d.* ought to be paid (exclusive of interest).

That the Brazilian claims are, as far as is known (with one exception), on account of the alleged illegal capture of Brazilian vessels on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade, and the subsequent proceedings in regard to those vessels.

That they are ninety-eight in number, and amounted in 1858 to 1,500,000*l.*

That Her Majesty's Government were not in possession of a complete list of the Brazilian claims, but a full account of twenty-eight selected cases would be found in the printed Report by Messrs. Wylde and Rothery of the 8th February, 1871; that various estimates had been made as to the amount of the Brazilian claims which could be maintained; that in 1867 Mr Thornton estimated them at 300,000*l.*, but in August of the same year he received a confidential communication to the effect that the Brazilian Government were prepared to take the sum of 230,000*l.* as a basis for negotiation; that in 1870-71, however, twenty-eight of these claims were most carefully examined by Mr. Wylde and Mr. Rothery, who came to the conclusion that only five were admissible, and that the amount justly due on them was 5,082*l.* 15*s.* (exclusive of interest).

That in 1858 a Convention was concluded between Great Britain and Brazil for the settlement of these claims by a Mixed Commission, but that Commission was suspended in April 1860, in consequence of the requirement of the Brazilian Government that cases already decided by Mixed Commission Courts should again be examined, a requirement to which Her Majesty's Government declined to accede.

That in 1862, and again in 1867, attempts were made to come to an agreement upon the subject, but without success; that more recently further negotiations have taken place, the details of which would be found in the accompanying printed papers, and a definite proposal for a new Convention had been received from the Brazilian Government, which proposal was then under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

That the points in that proposal which appear to Her Majesty's Government to be objectionable are fully stated in the printed memoranda of the 16th February and the 4th March, and may be thus briefly recapitulated:—

1. The omission of any assurance that the whole of the Brazilian claims, amounting to 1,500,000*l.*, without interest, will not be again brought forward.
2. The omission of any stipulation in the Convention that the validity of the

---

* Three volumes, five printed memorandas, Aberdeen Act.

1874

Aberdeen Act shall not be called in question, and the generally unsatisfactory nature of the language used by the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs upon this point.

3. The refusal of the Brazilian Government to furnish to Her Majesty's Government, for previous investigation, a list of cases decided by British Admiralty Courts, which it is intended to submit to the proposed Commission.

4. A similar refusal in regard to cases decided by Mixed Commission Courts, and the vague and unsatisfactory terms used as to claims of this description which it is intended to bring forward.

5. The unsatisfactory explanation given as to certain old claims which it is intended to present.

6. The omission of the Brazilian Government to examine preliminarily their own claims.

7 The announcement of the intention to submit to the proposed Commission the claims unfavourably reported on by Messrs. Rothery and Wylde, without any attempt to refute the conclusions come to by those gentlemen, after the most laborious and minute investigation.

Lord Tenterden added that, under these circumstances, he was to request that we would take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion specifically upon the points above enumerated, and generally upon the whole subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have considered the several papers transmitted to us with the letter from Lord Tenterden, but, before answering the questions proposed to us in that letter, we desire to submit to your Lordship the following observations upon the proceedings under the Treaties with Brazil and the Aberdeen Act, and upon the correspondence which has passed between Her Majesty's Government and that of Brazil:—

1. As regards the proceedings under the Treaties, we are of opinion that all the decisions which have been come to by Tribunals established by, and sitting by, virtue of the Treaties (whether those decisions finally condemned or released the ships, or indemnified or refused indemnification to the owners of and others interested in those ships), should be deemed and taken to be final, and not open to a rehearing before the new Commission Court or Court of Arbitration. To allow such a rehearing would be to defeat the very object for which the two countries established the original Mixed Commission Courts, viz., that the decisions should be final and without appeal, except in very exceptional instances.

2. As regards proceedings under the Aberdeen Act (8 and 9 Vict., cap. 122), if the question were unaffected by what has passed between the two Governments, we should be inclined to agree with the view taken by Mr. Rothery, in p. 5 of his Report of the 8th February, 1871, as to decisions given by the British Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Courts, and to think that, as regards cases before those Courts in which the Brazilian owners did not submit to the jurisdiction, or were not heard in their defence by reason of their not having had opportunities of being so heard, provision should be made for revision of the Decrees, but that such revision should be granted only on the terms that the claimants who should fail to establish their claims should pay all the expenses of the investigation, and should be required to deposit a sufficient sum to answer those expenses, as a proof of their good faith.

We gather, however, from the correspondence that Her Majesty's Government were prepared to assent to a proposal made by the Brazilian Government that any case which had been decided by an Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty Court should be open to rehearing by the proposed Mixed Commission Court or Court of Arbitration, if such proposed Tribunal should think it a case proper to be reheard: provided (1) that the validity of the Aberdeen Act should in no respect be called in question; (2) that Her Majesty's Government should be provided beforehand with a complete list of all the cases which it was intended to bring before the Tribunal; and (3) that the Tribunal should be guided in its deliberations by the same Treaties and laws of the respective countries as were in force at the times when the claims were originally adjudicated upon.

We further gather from the correspondence that the Brazilian Government have in effect declined to accede to the conditions upon which alone Her Majesty's Government were prepared to assent to the proposal so made to them. We do not, however, understand that Her Majesty's Government have in any way withdrawn the conditional assent which they have so given to the proposal.

3. The correspondence on the part of the Brazilian Government is of a very unsatisfactory character, and we cannot avoid inferring from it that it has been in many respects framed with a view to ulterior objects, to which it is not at present deemed expedient by that Government to more particularly allude.

We proceed now to answer the questions more particularly indicated by Lord Tenterden.

1. We are of opinion that the Brazilian Government should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot consent to the proposed Convention unless all claims arising out of final adjudications before the Mixed Commission Courts be withdrawn, and unless the rehearing of cases decided by British Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Courts be limited, either as indicated by Mr. Rothery, in manner above mentioned, or to the cases deemed fit by the proposed Tribunal for rehearing, and that, in either case, the three conditions already insisted upon by Her Majesty's Government must be acceded to by the Brazilian Government.

If these terms are acceded to, the original claim of 1,500,000*l*. will be materially reduced, and, with submission, this course appears to us preferable to requiring a stipulation that the whole Brazilian claim shall not be again brought forward.

2. We think it essential that the Brazilian Government should in the clearest terms recognize, at any rate for the purposes of the proposed Convention, the validity of the Aberdeen Act. We think this the more important, as the language of that Government, in their later correspondence, is suggestive of an intention on their part to question the validity of that Act in every mode which is not in the most express terms provided against by the Convention. We may particularly allude to the following passage in the translation of the letter of the Visconde de Caravellas, of the 15th November, 1873, in which he refers to the Aberdeen Act as "a British law always upheld on the one side, and on the other, and even now, repelled with the deepest conviction of injustice."

3. In our opinion the Convention should not be agreed to, unless the Brazilian Government consents to furnish to Her Majesty's Government, for previous investigation, a list of the cases decided by British Admiralty Courts which it is intended to submit to the proposed Commission.

There is no inconvenience to be apprehended from this condition being satisfied; the claims must be known to the Brazilian Government, and a list of them can easily be supplied. They have, doubtless, some object which they are unwilling to avow for thus refusing to supply the list, and Her Majesty's Government may very properly take care that this object be not attained.

4. We have already observed upon the claims arising out of cases before the Mixed Commission Courts. Should your Lordship agree with the result of those observations, no case, speaking generally, can properly be brought forward under this head, and, therefore, no list will be requisite.

It has, however, been suggested, and it is possible that there may have been cases before the Mixed Commission Courts in which there has been a failure of justice, or an actual injustice, so great that the persons injured may have a claim to a rehearing, which Her Majesty's Government could not well refuse to acknowledge. In such extreme cases, therefore, and they must be very few, we think a rehearing before the new Mixed Court or Court of Arbitration might be properly granted; but as this concession would be entirely ex gratiâ and a matter of favour, we are of opinion that, almost as a matter of necessity, a list of the cases should be submitted to Her Majesty's Government for previous investigation.

5. It seems to us that a limit should be fixed beyond which old claims should not be allowed to be brought forward. Probably, however, this condition will be unnecessary if the lists of claims are obtained.

6. So, if the lists are obtained, the Brazilian Government will, to some extent at least, be obliged to examine, preliminarily, their own claims.

7. We think the Brazilian Government were quite at liberty to bring forward again the claims unfavourably reported on by Messrs. Rothery and Wylde. Those gentlemen were acting on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, and, however conclusive their reasoning may be, the Brazilian Government was not called upon to argue the matter, still less to agree with the result to which those gentlemen, as it seems to us, most properly came.

Upon the whole subject we are of opinion that, whether the proposed Convention be desirable or not, the terms should be stated upon the points which we have noticed, in the most clear, precise, and definite language, and nothing left to inference.

We presume that the nature of the Court, if established, and the places of sitting and other matters of procedure need not now be reported upon by us.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th April ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Honduras Minister at this Court, in reply to one addressed to him by Earl Granville, under the advice of the late Law Officers of the Crown, on the 31st December last, upon the subject of the bombardment, in August last, of the Castle of Omoa, in the Republic of Honduras, by Her Majesty's ship "Niobe," Commander Sir Lambton Loraine; and Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to transmit to us the previous correspondence upon the subject, and the draft of the answer which your Lordship proposes to return to Señor Gutierrez; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proposed answer is a proper one.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the same into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proposed answer of your Lordship to the letter of Señor Gutierrez is a proper one.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying statement which had been forwarded to your Lordship by the Honduras Inter-Oceanic Railway Company, Limited, setting forth the grounds upon which they considered themselves entitled to the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in obtaining information respecting the expenditure of the proceeds of certain loans, amounting to 7,000,000*l.* or 8,000,000*l.* sterling, raised by the Honduras Government for the ostensible purpose of constructing the railway, but a large portion of the proceeds of which the Company believed to have been misappropriated.

That Lord Tenterden was also to inclose previous correspondence, showing the course that had hitherto been followed by Her Majesty's Government with regard to the Honduras Railway; and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in giving the Company the assistance they required.

Annex to Law Officers' Report of May 1874 (No. 17).

Draft of Letter to Señor Gutierrez.

Foreign Office, , 1874.

M. le Ministre,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 30th March, in which you express your regret that Her Majesty's Government should have approved the conduct of Sir Lambton Loraine, Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Niobe," in bombarding the Castle of Omoa in August last. You cite various cases as precedents with the view of showing that Sir L. Loraine acted wrongly, and you urge that the matter should be submitted to arbitration.

In reply, I have the honour to state to you, M. le Ministre, that Her Majesty's present Government, after careful consideration, entirely concur with their predecessors in approving the conduct of Sir L. Loraine, and they do not consider that the case is one that can properly be referred to arbitration.

With regard to the cases cited by you as precedents, they appear to me to be of so totally different a character from the one now under discussion that I must beg you to excuse me from making further reference to them.

With regard to your arguments upon the question at issue, they appear to be—

1. That the alleged ill-treatment of British subjects, and robbery of British property at Omoa by General Streber and the troops under his command, which led to the acts of which you complain, rest upon statements made by interested persons, whose evidence is untrustworthy; and

2. That even supposing the statements in question to have been well founded, redress should have been sought through Her Majesty's Minister in Central America, instead of being extorted by force. In support of this latter argument you quote the instructions to Her Majesty's Consuls, as given in the "Règlements Consulaires des principaux États Maritimes de l'Europe et de l'Amérique," by De Cussey.*

In reply to the first of these arguments it will be sufficient for me to point out that even your own letter,† to which I have now the honour to reply, shows that there was ample evidence of the ill-treatment of British subjects, and the destruction of British property, and, moreover, that there was good reason to fear further outrages. This evidence consists of the formal declarations of several citizens of Honduras, and of letters from British merchants and from the Consular officers of Spain and Portugal. You allege that all these persons were interested and their evidence untrustworthy, but where there is such a concurrence of testimony from different sources, Her Majesty's Government must hold that that testimony cannot be discredited without direct and conclusive proof of its untrustworthiness, and no such proof has as yet been brought before them.

With regard to your second argument, M. le Ministre, I have the honour to state that, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, the proceedings of Sir L. Loraine were fully justified by the exceptional nature of the case. Those proceedings were rendered necessary not only by the past acts of General Streber but by the immediate apprehension of further acts of the same nature, and it is manifest that, in view of the distance from Guatemala, where Her Majesty's Minister resides, and the difficulty of communication caused by the disturbed state of the country, to have waited for the action of the Central Government would have been to expose British subjects and property to the most imminent danger. Regulations such as those which you quote are intended for peaceful times and normal circumstances, and for countries under firmly established Governments, who can be appealed to without difficulty; they cannot always be strictly followed in times of civil war, and when communication with the Central Government is practically impossible. In such circumstances, the lives and property of British subjects being in serious and immediate danger, it becomes the duty of Her Majesty's officers to take such steps as may be in their power to protect them.

* This passage quoted is a fair translation of paragraph 10 of the Consular Instructions.

† See 8vo., 1636, Foreign Office Library.

1874

You have already been made aware, M. le Ministre, by Earl Granville's letter of the 31st December last, that the Guatemalan Government have also complained of the proceedings of Sir Lambton Loraine in bombarding the Castle of Omoa, and you have been furnished with a copy of the reply which was returned to the Guatemalan Minister at this Court upon the subject.

I have now the honour to inform you that, in a despatch dated the 21st February, Her Majesty's Minister in Central America reports that the views of the Guatemalan Government in regard to this affair have been materially altered in consequence of the light he has been able to throw upon the conduct of General Streber at Omoa, with which they were very inaccurately acquainted, and also since they have received, from their own sources of information, reports of General Streber's proceedings, enlightening them as to his true character and conduct. The Guatemalan Government have accordingly determined not to pursue the matter further.

Allow me to express the hope that your Government, after careful investigation, will form a similar opinion on the conduct of General Streber.

In conclusion I have the honour to repeat that Her Majesty's Government can see nothing in your letter which would induce them to differ from the view taken by their predecessors—that the proceedings of Sir Lambton Loraine in bombarding the Castle of Omoa were fully justified by the circumstances—and that they must hold the Government of Honduras bound to pay the compensation to British subjects stipulated for in the bond given to Sir L. Loraine by General Streber.

I have, &c.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the case of the Honduras Inter-Oceanic Railway Company, so far as the circumstances of the case appear upon the papers before us, which distinguishes it from that of other companies or individuals who have, upon speculation, advanced their money upon foreign undertakings; and we are not aware of any similar case in which, since the memorandum of Lord Palmerston, when Foreign Secretary, Her Majesty's Government has interfered.

We are therefore of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot properly give the Company the assistance which they require.

We have, &c.

Lincoln's Inn, October 20, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 7th September ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 27th August, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further papers* which had been communicated to him by the solicitor to the Honduras Railway Company, relative to the wish of that Company to obtain the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in certain proceedings connected with the Honduras Railway and Honduras Loans.

That he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether there is anything in the inclosed papers which would induce us to modify the opinion expressed in our above-mentioned Report.

That the previous papers† were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the inclosed further papers which induces us to modify the opinion which we expressed in our Report of the 27th August.

The matter at issue lies between certain British subjects and either the Honduras Government or the agents of the Honduras Government. Your Lordship is asked to bring a pressure upon the Honduras Government in order to obtain an account from that Government, or from its agents who received the funds for the speculation, or from both, of the way in which the moneys subscribed have been expended.

This request we are of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly comply with. The speculation in a foreign undertaking has, we believe, according to the rule adopted by the Foreign Office, no (even "moral") right to receive the assistance of Her Majesty's Government, if from mischance or fraud the speculation fails.

Should the Honduras Government ignore or refuse to yield to the pressure which your Lordship is asked to apply, Her Majesty's Government could not properly make the refusal a ground for measures of compulsion, and would therefore be in a very undignified position.

The Treaty has nothing to do with the matter. It guarantees the neutrality of the line when completed, and guarantees no more.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received May 17.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 16, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 14th May instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers, as marked in the margin,* relative to the arrest on board a British mail-steamer, in the Chilean harbour of Lota, of Mr. William Hyde, master of the steam-ship "Tacna," which vessel foundered at sea off the coast of Chile on the 8th March last.

That we would see from the papers that Mr. Rumbold, Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago, has protested against the arrest of Mr. Hyde, and had demanded his release on the ground, first, that the loss of the "Tacna" took place out of Chilean jurisdiction, and that the master is therefore not amenable to a Chilean Court on any charge connected with her loss; and, secondly, that the arrest on board a British mail-steamer was a violation of the privileges usually accorded to vessels of that class. Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the legality of the arrest of Mr. Hyde, and with any observations we might have to offer upon the case.

That the question of the privileges of mail-steamers had been on several occasions referred to the Law Officers of the Crown, whose Reports thereon would be found at the places marked in the accompanying volumes.†

Copies were also inclosed of the Treaty of 1864 between Great Britain and Chile, and of the Instructions to Her Majesty's Consuls issued by the Board of Trade and by the Foreign Office.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion there is nothing, either in the Treaty between Great Britain and Chile, or in the general principles of international law, which would make the arrest of Mr. Hyde on board a British mail-steamer in a Chilean harbour illegal, assuming Mr. Hyde to have committed within Chilean jurisdiction any act for which he would be amenable to Chilean law.

It appears from the papers that the British Naval Court, duly constituted for that purpose, found that the loss of the ship "Tacna" was due to excessive loading of her decks, and that Mr. Hyde, the master of the ship, was primarily responsible for such overloading.

It further appears that the ship was loaded in a Chilean port, and bound from Valparaiso to another Chilean port, and that several Chilean subjects lost their lives through her foundering.

It is probable also that there may have been at the same time a considerable loss of Chilean property.

It also appears that the Chilean authorities, with the consent of the British Consul, made some preliminary inquiry into the facts, and that proceedings were consequently taken. Whether the consent of the Consul was necessary or not is immaterial to the present consideration. Under these circumstances we are of opinion that, if the loss of the "Tacna," consequent upon her overloading, had taken place within Chilean waters, no doubt could have been entertained as to the right of the Chilean Government to arrest Mr. Hyde. Whether, having regard to the fact of the loss of the ship having occurred outside Chilean waters, any offence has been committed by Mr. Hyde of which the Chilean Courts have cognizance, is a question dependent upon the state of the Chilean law upon the subject; but, in the absence of more information than we at present possess as to the precise nature of the charge against him, we are unable to say that his arrest to answer such charge was illegal, and necessarily called for the intervention of the Consul. Under these circumstances we respectfully suggest to your Lordship that Mr. Rumbold should be instructed to watch the proceedings against Mr. Hyde with the greatest care, and to enter his protest against any attempt to prosecute Mr. Hyde in respect of any matter not properly cognizable by the Chilean Tribunals.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship' commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 29th May ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th May ultimo, respecting the case of the British vessel "Tacna," Mr. Lister was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers,* the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister resident in Chile upon the same subject.†

Mr. Lister was also to transmit to us a letter of the 29th May ultimo received from the Board of Trade in regard to this case; and Mr. Lister was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with any observations we may have to offer thereupon, and as to whether the steps taken by Mr. Rumbold in the matter may properly be approved.

We are also honoured with a letter from Lord Tenterden of the 9th June instant, stating that, with reference to Mr. Lister's letter of the 29th May ultimo, Lord Tenterden was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Admiralty, forwarding a report from the Captain of Her Majesty's ship "Scout," in regard to the arrest by the Chilean authorities of Captain Hyde, of the British vessel "Tacna;" and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take these further papers into our consideration, together with those now before us, relating to the same subject.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden of the 11th June instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 9th instant, Lord Tenterden was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago, reporting the further proceedings that have taken place with regard to the case of Captain Hyde, of the "Tacna," and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, together with the papers already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Rumbold appears to have acted with great energy and decision in reference to the arrest of Captain Hyde; but, notwithstanding his very able reply to the Chilean Minister, and the great success with which his proceedings have been apparently attended, we think it desirable that any decided expression of opinion on the part of your Lordship as to those proceedings should be postponed until your Lordship is in possession of the full particulars, which Mr. Rumbold has stated his intention of forwarding by the mail of the 2nd May, and the receipt of which may be expected in the course of the next few days.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 15th June instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 13th instant, upon the subject of the arrest in Chile of Mr. Hyde, late master of the "Tacna," Lord Tenterden was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further correspondence, as marked in the margin,* relative to the same subject.

The previous papers were also inclosed,† and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the steps that should now be taken in the matter to which they relate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly instruct Mr. Rumbold to inform M. Ibanez that Her Majesty's Government is willing to believe in the friendly sentiments of the Chilean Government, and in the existence of the earnest desire of the Chilean Government to draw together more and more the good relations which unite Her Majesty's Government and that of Chile.

That those friendly sentiments and earnest desires, however, can only be shown by a due regard to the strict observance of the laws which prescribe the obligations and duties of the one country towards the other, and by a strict compliance with the rules adopted by civilized nations in questions of international law.

That Her Majesty's Government regrets that, in the case of the British subject, Captain Hyde, the Chilean Government has broken the universally recognized rule of international law, which says that a country has no jurisdiction over a foreign ship on the high seas, and has illegally permitted the arrest and trial of the British subject, Captain Hyde, for an act which from the first the Chilean Government must have known was committed on the high seas.

So long as a doubt could possibly exist anywhere, either as to the facts or the law, Her Majesty's Government was unwilling to press the matter upon the Chilean Government.

Since the highest Tribunal in Chile has now found, both on the facts and the law, that Captain Hyde was never amenable to Chilean jurisdiction, Her Majesty's Government cannot be satisfied with a mere assurance of friendly sentiments and the expression of a wish for the maintenance of good relations between the respective countries. Her Majesty's Government is bound by every obligation of self-respect and a sense of the duty of protection which it owes to British subjects, to insist upon an apology being made to Her Majesty's Government for the institution of proceedings against one of Her Majesty's subjects for his alleged conduct on board a ship under the British flag, and on the high seas, out of Chilean jurisdiction; and Her Majesty's Government further requires that ample compensation be made to Captain Hyde for his illegal arrest and imprisonment.

Your Lordship may, we respectfully submit, now approve of the conduct of Mr. Rumbold in this matter of the "Tacna."

Lincoln's Inn, July 24, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers, as marked in the margin,* relative to the request of Messrs. Parker, Lee, and Haddock, Solicitors to M. Mannequin, to be furnished with certain original documents which are required in connection with a suit in Chancery to which M. Mannequin is a party.

We see that certain documents, which appear to be those required by Messrs. Parker and Co., have been forwarded privately by Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago to Her Majesty's Consul at Paris, who has transmitted them through Her Majesty's Ambassador to the Foreign Office.

It does not appear from Messrs. Parker and Co.'s letter what right they have to demand the surrender to them of the original documents for which they ask; and as it is the custom of the Foreign Office to avoid giving to one party in a suit information which is not also given to the other party, Lord Tenterden stated that your Lordship proposes to inform Messrs. Parker and Co. that certain papers, which appear to be those for which they have applied, have now been received, but that they can only be given up on an Order from the Court of Chancery, or on a subpœna duces decum.

Before sending this answer, Lord Tenterden stated that your Lordship will be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we do not understand how the papers in question are officially in the possession of the Foreign Office; they seem to us to be affidavits made in a cause between two private individuals, and sworn before the British Consul, whose official concern with them ceased when he had administered the oath.

We think that, as they have by some means reached the Foreign Office, Messrs. Parker may properly be answered that they can only be given up on an Order from the Court of Chancery, or produced to the Court on a subpœna duces tecum.

Parker, Lee, and Haddock, that certain affidavits in possession of the Foreign Office, connected with the Chancery suit of "De Mora v. Concha," might be given up to them, or sent to the Record and Writ Clerks' Office, to be filed. That the previous papers were also sent therewith,† and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Messrs. Parker, Lee, and Haddock's last application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have considered the letters of Messrs. Parker, Lee, and Haddock, and see no reason to alter the opinion expressed by us in our Report of the 24th ultimo. We are still of opinion that, as a general rule, affidavits which have, even by misapprehension, reached the Foreign Office, should not be given up on the application of either party interested in the subject-matter of such affidavits, nor should the Foreign Office transmit such affidavits to the Record and Writ Clerks' Office.

In the present case, however, as it now appears that all parties consent to the affidavits being delivered to Messrs. Parker, we see no objection to that course being adopted.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received September 7.)

Lincoln's Inn, September 4, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 7th August ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us herewith a correspondence with the Board of Trade,‡ from which we see that the Solicitor to the Treasury having been requested by that Department to advise whether proceedings could be taken against Mr. Hyde, master of the "Tacna," for the loss of that vessel, a case has been submitted by the solicitor for the opinion of Mr. Poland, who advises that no such proceedings could be successfully instituted.

Lord Tenterden stated that it appears to your Lordship that, looking to the finding of the Naval Court held at Santiago, of which a copy is inclosed in Mr. Rumbold's despatch No. 12, Commercial, of the 26th March, it would be a failure of justice if, while Her Majesty's Government protested against the Government of Chile taking cognizance of Mr. Hyde's conduct, they were themselves not to attempt any proceedings in the matter.

Lord Tenterden stated that your Lordship therefore requests that we would be good enough to take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether we concur in the opinion held by Mr. Poland.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think it probable that Captain Hyde may not be convicted. But, on the other hand, the view which your Lordship takes of the case, as between this country and Chile, is, in our opinion, if we may say so, correct; and, although we agree with Mr. Poland in the general view of the case taken by him, we are of opinion that the Government of Chile would have reason to complain of Her Majesty's Government if Captain Hyde's conduct were not in some manner inquired into. We would, however, suggest that it might, perhaps, be more desirable to institute an inquiry under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (see sections 432-438), than to proceed against Captain Hyde in a Criminal Court.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister Resident in Chile* respecting the circumstances connected with the forcible removal from the British vessel "Alacama" of two of her crew by the Chilean authorities at Valparaiso, and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the case into our consideration and favour your Lordship with any observations we may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that one at least of the persons required as witnesses refused to leave the ship unless he were taken by force.

The whole transaction, from the murder down to the arrest and release of the witnesses, and of the man suspected of the murder, took place in Chilean territory; and, in our opinion, no further notice, beyond approving of Mr. Rumbold's conduct, need be taken of the matter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th September, respecting the case of the "Tacna," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which had been received from the Lords of the Privy Council for Trade, to whom our Report was referred, with respect to proceedings being taken against Captain Hyde; and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we adhere to the opinion expressed by us in our Report of the 4th September, that the Government of Chile would have reason to complain if the conduct of the master of the "Tacna" were not, in some manner, inquired into in this country.

As the Board of Trade (for reasons with which we are unable to concur (decline, under the circumstances, to institute an inquiry under the provisions of Part VIII of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854," it appears to us that no course remains open to the Government except to prefer an indictment, either for manslaughter at common law, or for neglect of duty tending to the destruction of the ship, under section 239

Lincoln's Inn, December 19, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd November ultimo, stating that, on receipt of our Report of June last, he addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago a despatch,[*] draft of which was inclosed, instructing him as to the reparation which Her Majesty's Government expected from that of Chile, on account of the arrest and detention of Captain Hyde, of the "Tacna," and that he, Lord Tenterden, was then to transmit to us a letter from the Chilean Minister at this Court,[†] containing arguments in justification of the proceedings of the Chilian authorities in the matter, tendering a modified expression of regret, and expressing a hope that the statements contained in his letter would induce Her Majesty's Government to modify their resolution with regard to the claim for indemnity.

Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to request that we would take Señor Blest Gana's letter into our consideration,[‡] together with the former papers, which were also inclosed, and that we would favour your Lordship with any remarks we might have to make thereon, and with our opinion as to the extent to which the claim for indemnity should be insisted on.

We were also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden of the 24th December instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 23rd ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister in Chile,[§] respecting the case of the "Tacna," and that he was to request that we would take these further papers into our consideration, together with those now before us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have read and considered the letter of Señor Blest Gana, and also that addressed by Señor Ibanez to Mr. Rumbold, under date the 3rd October last, and are of opinion that the circumstances of the case, even as explained in these letters, fully justify the very moderate suggestion made by your Lordship in your despatch to Mr. Rumbold on the 14th July, and that as those suggestions, so far as compensation to Captain Hyde is concerned, have not been acceded to, your Lordship would be fully justified in pressing the matter further upon the Chilean Government.

The expressions of regret which have been tendered by Señor Blest Gana will probably be accepted by your Lordship as sufficient.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received January 16.)

Temple, January 12, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 26th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to inclose, for our information, the draft of a despatch which your Lordship had addressed to Mr. Wade, instructing him to withdraw the Regulations which had been issued for the management of the prison at Shanghae.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion whether Her Majesty should be advised to give her assent to those Regulations, and, if so, that we would prepare a clause making express provision for the enforcement of Rules 40, 41, and 42, for insertion in the revised Order in Council.

That the former papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have prepared amendments in the draft Order in Council making express provision for the enforcement of Rules 39, 40, 41, and 42 for the Shanghae prison.

The clause annexed to Mr. Medhurst's letter of the 12th August, 1873, providing for the appointment of visiting Justices, should be inserted in the Prison Rules, after Rule 74, and the consequential alterations noted in the last page annexed to the draft Rules should be inserted in the text of the different Rules to which they refer.

Having regard to the observation made by Mr. Wade in his letter of the 3rd September to Mr. Medhurst, we think that in Rule 59 the words "to the Coroner of the district to which the prisoner belongs, and" should be omitted.

Before, however, finally approving this draft, we should like to be further informed as to the authority upon which the powers of deportation contained in cap. 14 are considered to be founded, and whether there is any other authority than that conferred by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 94, and the Chinese Act 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 80. As we consider it very doubtful whether these Acts would justify the detention on board an English ship of any person on the high seas, we should be glad to be furnished with any opinions of the Law Officers which have previously been given on this point, particularly as we observe that similar Regulations are contained in Order in Council of 1864, applicable to the Ottoman Empire.

We inclose the amendments on a separate paper.

We have, &c.

Suggested Amendments in Draft Order in Council.

Section 85 (p. 80), after "friendly relations between British subjects and Chinese subjects and authorities," insert—

"And for the governance, visitation, care, and superintendence of prisons in any Consular district in China, and for the infliction of corporal or other punishment upon prisoners guilty of offences against the rules or discipline of any such prison."

Same section, at the end, add as a new paragraph—

So much of this section as defines the penalties for offences, and the provisions of the two following sections relating to the printing, publication, and sale of regulations, shall not apply to regulations to be made respecting prisons and offences by prisoners.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 24.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, July 23, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an extract from a Report by the late Law Officers of the Crown, suggesting doubts as to the legality of the detention on board a British ship on the high seas of any person who might be deported from China or Japan under the provisions of a revised Order in Council which was submitted to them for their approval.

That the provisions in question, which we should find in chapter 14 of the draft Order in Council transmitted therewith, were similar to those contained in the Order in Council for China and Japan of 1865, which is now in force, and in the following Orders in Council:—

Africa, 27th February, 1872; Madagascar, 4th February, 1869; Morocco, August 27th, 1857; Muscat, 4th November, 1867; Siam, 28th July, 1856, and 12th September, 1863; Zanzibar, 9th August, 1866.

That a Report on the subject had, at the request of your Lordship, been drawn up by Mr. F. S. Reilly, who had been employed on several occasions in the preparation of various Orders in Council, and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to transmit to us his Report, and to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship whether we agreed with the late Law Officers and Mr. Reilly as to the illegality of the system of deportation, and, if so, what steps we would advise should be taken for placing it upon a legal footing.

That copies of the Orders in Council referred to above were inclosed for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we agree with the late Law Officers and Mr. Reilly as to the illegality of the system of deportation and the detention on board a British ship on the high seas of any person who may have been put on board such ship, under the Orders in Council referred to in Lord Tenterden's letter, for the purpose of being deported.

We think that the best means of supplying the defect which there now is in the powers of the Crown, and for placing the system of deportation upon a sound and legal footing, will be to adopt, as regards the past, the course indicated by Mr. Reilly in paragraph 13 of his memorandum, and, as regards the future, the first of the four forms of legislation suggested by him in paragraph 16 of his memorandum.

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, August 21, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 27th July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence relative to the municipal rates levied under the Land Regulations and Bye-laws of the foreign settlement at Shanghae upon the Supreme Court and British Consular offices at that port;* and Lord Tenterden was to request us to take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the buildings in question, not being residences nor places of trade, are liable to assessment by the Municipal Council under the 9th section of the Land Regulations, of which a copy is inclosed in Mr. Medhurst's despatch No. 4 of the 11th March. We would find in the 8th inclosure in the same despatch the observations of Her Majesty's Minister at Peking on the subject, and in the 1st and 2nd inclosures in Mr. Medhurst's No. 6, the view taken of the question by Mr. Boyce, who is employed by the Office of Works to superintend the Consular buildings in China, and by Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the buildings of the Supreme Court and British Consular offices at Shanghae are liable to the payment of municipal rates.

We have not been able to find anything in section 9 of the Land Regulations and Bye-laws which would guide our opinion upon this subject; but whilst we find no express exemptions of public buildings from the payment of municipal rates, we think that section 1 of the Land Regulations must be taken to show that such buildings as those of the Supreme Court and Consular offices shall be subject to their share of the public burden and municipal taxes.

We agree also with that part of the correspondence which suggests the expediency of not claiming the exemption.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 3.)

Lincoln's Inn, November 2, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 10th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, requesting that certain points which had been raised by the Attorney-General of Hong Kong in regard to the execution at Shanghae, under the Order in Council for China and Japan, of a warrant issued at Hong Kong for the arrest of a sailor named Walter Jackson, might be referred to us.

That Mr. Lister was accordingly to request that we would take that letter, with the accompanying Report from the Attorney-General of Hong Kong, into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion on the questions raised therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, a telegram from the Hong Kong police to the Shanghae police, directing the latter to apprehend a felon or misdemeanant, is not "a warrant or order of arrest issued by a competent authority in Her Majesty's dominions," within the meaning of the 66th section of the Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865.

We are further of opinion that a telegram, conveying information that a felony has been committed and that a person indicated is suspected, would be in law sufficient to justify a British constable, or other officer of a British Court of Justice having the powers of a constable, in apprehending the alleged offender, and detaining him until the arrival of a proper warrant.

We agree with the Attorney-General of Hong Kong in thinking that, in the case of a foreign national, who arrives at a Treaty port, and is there charged with an offence committed on board a British ship, the British Consul can deal with it, under the 268th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, provided such procedure shall be with the express or implied sanction of the Government to which such foreign national shall belong.

We further agree with him in the opinion that a citizen of the United States could not be surrendered to the Hong Kong authorities by an American Consul at a Treaty port under the Extradition Treaty of 1842; and we think that his view of the application of this principle to the case of Walter Jackson is correct. It does not appear to us that the particular case is affected by the distinction between "piracy jure gentium" and piracy by the law of any particular State.

We agree with the views expressed by the Attorney-General of Hong Kong in his Supplemental Report on the case of Walter Jackson, but with this limitation, that the crime with the commission of which the fugitive is charged shall have been committed within the jurisdiction of the United States.

That the last paper gave the history of the tenure of the land in question, and that to avoid future complications when the time arose for severing the connection of Her Majesty's Government with British Church Establishments abroad, Mr. Lister was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, in view of the manner in which the land was conveyed to trustees for the benefit of the British community, trustees other than British Representatives could properly hold the land.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Clerk of the Assembly for the time being, we presume that a similar arrangement would be legal in the case of the English community.

As a question of policy, we think that there are serious objections to any plan of permanently vesting the land in question in the British Representatives as trustees for any religious denomination.

A so-called Church of England congregation in Alexandria would not be bound by any ecclesiastical laws or customs in force in this country, or by the decisions of any Tribunal of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and in our opinion it is undesirable that the British Representatives should permanently accept a trust which may involve the determination by them, or by the Consular Court, or possibly even by an Ottoman Tribunal, of the question which of two contending theological parties is entitled to be considered as representing in Egypt the Church of England, and we therefore think that the necessary steps should be taken for vesting the land in question in private trustees.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, assuming Mr. Rogers was authorized to solemnize marriages under the 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, we are of opinion that Mr. Borg, who is acting and who is legally authorized to act (see draft of the 15th May, 1874) as Her Majesty's Consul, may, under 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 61, sec. 3, legally solemnize marriages at Cairo, and that General Stanton may be informed to that effect.

That the claim appeared to be one to recover the right over certain lands ceded to the Company by Mustapha Pasha for the purpose of rectifying an obnoxious curve in the line of railroad, the right over which land had been denied by the present Khedive.

That this case, although pending since 1860, only came to the notice of Her Majesty's Government in 1873, and was then laid before the Law Officers of the late Government, whose Report we would find in p. 4 of the inclosed print. That in that Report we would perceive that the Law Officers decided that Her Majesty's Consular Court had no jurisdiction in the matter, and that General Stanton could not officially deal with the case.

Lord Tenterden was pleased further to say that he was now to request that we would take Mr. Tinney's further statement into our consideration, and report whether we see reason to differ from the opinion previously pronounced on the case, and that the previous papers were annexed for reference if required.

Temple, January 13, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the despatches, noted in the margin,* from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, together with their inclosures, relative to a law which had been passed by the French Assembly, providing for the increase of certain indirect taxes; and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, together with the inclosed further despatch from Lord Lyons, and letter from the agent of Young's Paraffin Oil Company and the Coatbridge Oil Company, with especial reference to that part of the law which affects mineral oils; and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was anything in the law in question which was in contravention of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, of which a copy was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That, in our opinion, the Bill of the 29th December, 1873, if not necessarily inconsistent with the IVth Article of the Treaty, is at any rate capable of being applied so as to defeat the purpose of the Treaty, and that explanations should be sought on this question, especially with reference to the 3rd Article of the Bill.

The contention of the Messrs. Young appears to us to be substantially correct. At the time when the Treaty was framed, it must be assumed to have been known that the mineral oils imported into France from England are imported not as crude but as refined oil. In this state they will necessarily be subject to the higher rate of excise. The privilege, therefore, which is given to the French manufacturers to pay the excise on the French oil whilst it is in the crude state, and so subject to the proposed lower duty, will almost necessarily operate as a penalty on the importation of refined oil.

2. With respect to the Bill of the 30th December, 1873, we are unable, upon the information before us, to determine whether the customs duties as fixed by Article IV, would or would not exceed the limit of 5 per cent. ad valorem which is prescribed by the Treaty.

3. With respect to the Decree of the 30th December, 1873, limiting the ports for the importation of mineral oils, we cannot say whether the Decree affords any ground for remonstrance. It appears to us to be a question of fact whether the limitation to particular ports will materially check the importation of mineral oils without any substantial justification on the ground of fiscal convenience.

We have answered the questions asked of us to the best of our ability, but the matters inclosed are not questions of law. They are such as, we venture to submit, would be far more satisfactorily dealt with by the Board of Trade, who are really conversant with the subject, on which the Law Officers have no means of information.

We have, &c.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, inclosing a letter from the Colonial Office regarding a recent Decree of the "Cour de Cassation" in Paris, reversing decisions of the Courts of Réunion, which gave the wages of Indian labourers a preference over other claims on estates, and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be borne out in making that matter the subject of a representation to the French Government.

That the copy of the Convention of 1861, relative to the emigration of Indian coolies to French Colonies, was inclosed for reference if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would not be borne out in making this matter the subject of a representation to the French Government upon the materials furnished by the Secretary of State for India.

Assuming that Mr. Gorrie correctly describes what has taken place, it appears that the first ground of the judgment of the "Cour de Cassation" was that the Court at Réunion had not ascertained the facts to which the law was to be applied. The French Government might therefore properly answer that it cannot consider the necessity for altering the law until the effect of the law has been determined.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received January 19.)

Temple, January 17, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the claims preferred by Mineral Oils Companies before the Mixed Commission at Paris, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two letters from the

1874

Coatbridge Oil Company announcing their intention to hold Her Majesty's Government responsible for the satisfaction of such claims as might remain unsatisfied or might be rejected by the Commission; and alleging that certain claims might be so rejected, not on account of insufficient proof of the existence of the contracts, but because proceedings had not been initiated against the Company.

That as regarding the question of the responsibility of Her Majesty's Government in regard to those claims, Mr. Lister was also to call our attention to the concluding paragraph of the letter from Young's Paraffin Oil Company (therewith inclosed) to which reference was made in our Report of the 12th ultimo.

That Mr. Lister inclosed at the same time despatches, as noted in the margin, from Mr. Kennedy, reporting the proceedings of the Commission in regard to those claims, together with a copy of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873; and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the above-mentioned Companies, or to other parties who might be desirous of fixing responsibility upon Her Majesty's Government for the non-satisfaction of claims in respect of mineral oil contracts.

That Mr. Lister was moreover to request that we would take into our consideration the statement contained in the Coatbridge Oil Company's letter of the 31st ultimo, as to the reason for which certain claims might be rejected by the Commission; and having regard to the Report contained in Mr. Kennedy's despatch No. 149 of the 26th ultimo, of the proceedings of the Commission with respect to claims which had not yet formed the subject of legal proceedings, that we would report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the letters from the Coatbridge Oil Company and Young's Paraffin Oil Company may properly be answered by a mere acknowledgment of their receipt. And it would not be expedient on the part of Her Majesty's Government to enter now into any explanation or defence of the line of conduct in respect to any claims of those Companies taken by the Commission.

In reference to the despatch No. 149 from Mr. Kennedy of the proceedings of the Commission with respect to claims which have not yet formed the subject of legal proceedings, we are of opinion that the basis of awards of "dommages-intérêts" given by the French Tribunal, before which Tribunals the proceedings would probably if not necessarily be brought, was the proper rule to adopt.

Further, the decision of the Commission in respect to evidence, under the operation of which rule one claim of Young's Company and eight claims of the Coatbridge Company were disallowed, seems to us the right decision, for the notice of the 7th November, 1873, invited further representations, and those persons who did not, for the reasons stated by the agent of the Coatbridge Company or for any other reason, avail themselves of the opportunity put before them, must take the consequence of being without proper evidence in support of their claims.

Again, as in seven out of the eight instances brought forward by the Coatbridge Company, mere statements were made in the certificates, and no claim made nor interest alleged to exist on the part of the French purchaser, the decision under that head appears to us right.

My Lord, Temple, January 17, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris,* relating to an application which had been addressed to his Excellency by M. Alexandre Dumas respecting an alleged attempt to pirate in this country a drama of which he was the author, and he (Lord Enfield) was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Lord Lyons in regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Lord Lyons may properly be instructed to inform M. A. Dumas that Her Majesty's Government cannot take any step to prevent the attempt to pirate his drama, and that M. A. Dumas must apply to the proper Court for protection.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received February 5.)

My Lord, Temple, February 3, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd January ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 18th of that month, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, relative to the bearing of the new French law imposing excise duties on French mineral oils upon the provisions of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873.

Mr. Lister also stated that the former papers on the subject were likewise inclosed, and that he was to request that we would take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with such further observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the new French law does not in terms appear to us contrary to or inconsistent with Article IV of the Treaty.

If, however, as Mr. Kennedy suggests in his letters of the 6th and 17th instant, the practical result of the working of this law will be to impose upon the British importer a differential duty, this result will, in our opinion, be so contrary to the true spirit and intent of Article IV that your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly call the attention of the French Government to the injurious effect of the new law as pointed out by Mr. Kennedy, and request from that Government either an explanation of the working of the new law if Mr. Kennedy is wrong, or a modification of the law if Mr. Kennedy is right, so that the Treaty may have a true application.

No. 48.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received February 5.)

My Lord, Temple, February 4, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 29th January, stating that, on the 15th July last, we favoured your Lordship with our Report on certain matters connected with M. de Rotour's Bill on military service in France, as affecting the liability of sons born in France of foreign parents to such service, and an instruction in conformity with our opinion on this subject was addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, having reference to the question of the privileges to be accorded to British subjects born in France to divest themselves of their French nationality.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was now to transmit to us a further despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing a copy of the Report of the Committee on M. de Rotour's Bill, from which we would see that the Committee suggest as a modification of the original scheme of the Bill that the presumption that the sons born in France of foreign parents are Frenchmen shall be limited, as it is at present, to the second generation, that is to say, to the sons born in France of fathers also born in France, and they set aside altogether the proposal to require proof that the obligations of foreign recruiting laws have been fulfilled.

Lord Tenterden further stated that it appears to your Lordship that, in view of the modifications which the Committee propose to introduce into the new law, the same grounds for remonstrance do not now exist as were suggested by the law in its original form, as the present measure is only an amendment of the Law of 1851 requiring proof of the nationality of origin with the power to select French nationality during minority.

Lord Tenterden also stated that it would be observed, however, that the new law only gives a power of choosing the nationality of origin "devant l'autorité municipale du lieu de sa résidence," whereas the law of this country confers a power of declaring alienage both at home and abroad. In the case of a young man having a double nationality contemplated by the French law, he could apparently only make his declaration of alienage in France, and supposing, therefore, that he were in any distant country at the time of attaining his majority, there would be no means of his getting rid of his French nationality, and in the event of his coming to France again he might be claimed as a Frenchman, and might even be held to be a Frenchman in other countries.

Lord Tenterden also stated that this objection, it appears to your Lordship, might be remedied at once by authorizing the declaration to be made also at the various French Consulates abroad.

Lord Tenterden further stated that he was now to request that we would take Lord Lyons' despatch, together with the previous papers which are annexed, into our consideration, and that we would inform your Lordship whether we are of opinion that in the altered circumstances of the case it is still desirable that Lord Lyons should make the representation suggested in your Report of the 15th July last, and which has for the time been suspended; and, secondly, whether we consider that it would be useful or desirable that his Excellency should point out to the French Government the difficulty above referred to in the matter of declaration of alienage.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly instruct Lord Lyons to represent to the French Government, but unofficially, the great inconvenience which may result if the declaration claiming foreign or rather British nationality should in future be required to be made before the French municipal authorities exclusively, and that out of France power should be given to make such declaration before the French Diplomatic or Consular Agents.

In other respects we are of opinion that no representations should be made to the French Government on any of the alterations now contemplated.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received February 7.)

My Lord,

Temple, February 6, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 31st ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris,* relative to the interpretation placed by the French Government on the meaning of the word "value" in the IVth Article of the Treaty of the 23rd January.

Mr. Lister further stated that a copy of the Treaty in question was likewise inclosed, together with the previous papers on this subject, and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we adhere to the opinion expressed in our former Report that the value intended by Article IV of the Treaty is the English value at the time when the goods are supplied in England by the manufacturer, and not the English value at the time of importation into France. We agree with M. Ozenne that Article IV of the Supplementary Convention is not conclusive on this point, but we think that it confirms what appears to us to be the natural interpretation of the Treaty itself, for the manufacturer's invoice price is relevant to an inquiry to the value of the goods when supplied by the manufacturer, though it would but slightly affect an inquiry as to their value at some subsequent and uncertain time when they are imported.

If M. Ozenne's contention were correct, it would have been more natural to have required the manufacturer's price current at the time of importation than his invoice price.

Upon the second part submitted to us, it seems that the difficulty arises from the use of the words "admission effective" in Article V of the Convention of the 12th October, 1860, translated by the words "actual entry;" and inconvenient as it may be to have one test of value on goods not warehoused, and another test of value on goods warehoused, we are of opinion that there is no escape from that inconvenience, which is the clear result of the wording of Article V, that Article appearing to have been framed for the very purpose of making the distinction. We are unable, therefore, to advise your Lordship that the construction of the French Government is wrong; on the contrary, we think it right.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, containing an opinion by the legal adviser of the British Embassy with reference to the case of Mr. James Wilson, which formed the subject of our Report of the 13th ultimo.

He also inclosed the draft of a despatch which, upon the receipt of our Report, your Lordship caused to be addressed on the subject to Her Majesty's Consul at Nantes; and he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, together with Mr. Consul Clipperton's despatch, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with such further observations as we may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, it may properly be further intimated to Consul Clipperton, with a view of preventing misapprehension, that it will not be in the power of Her Majesty's Government to protect Mr. Wilson from any of the proceedings or inconveniences to which he might be subjected in France, according to the regular course of criminal procedure in that country.

My Lord,

Temple, February 11, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, relative to an inquiry on the part of the French Government as to whether there would be anything incompatible with the Treaty engagements between France and foreign Powers with regard to the

1874

"surtaxe de pavillon" in a law granting to French shipbuilders a premium of so much per ton for each ship built.

That Mr. Lister also transmitted to us a letter from the Board of Trade on that subject, together with a copy of the Anglo-French Treaty of July 1873; and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the payment of bounties by the French Government to French shipbuilders would not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Treaties of 1860 and 1873, provided the payment is made from national sources, and is not either directly or indirectly a mere return of sums levied on the French shipbuilders with the intention or understanding that they should be returned.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers relative to the claim of the owners of the steamer "Lochinvar" against the French Government, on account of the collision of that vessel with the French war-steamer "Loiret"; and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Lord Lyons in that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Lord Lyons should be instructed to press for a favourable and immediate answer to the request for copies of the documents in question, or, in the alternative, for permission for a duly authorized person not only to inspect them but to take copies of them and obtain an official authentication of the copies.

It may be represented to the French Government that the inquiry in France was so conducted as to allow the English owners no opportunity of contradicting or even cross-examining upon the evidence adduced by the French officers, and replying to the arguments on which the decision of the French Admiralty was founded.

That the judgment of the Court of Inquiry admits that there is a conflict of evidence on the most material points; and that under these circumstances a continued refusal or delay on the part of the French Government to give proper facilities for consideration by the claimants of all the evidence on which the opinien of the Court of Inquiry was founded would amount to a denial of justice.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take that matter into our early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as soon as practicable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Bourke's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 4th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to explain that the question upon which your Lordship asked to be favoured with our opinion was whether Mr. Elmore, who held the appointment of Her Majesty's Consul at Nice, and who has been gazetted to a new post, but who has not yet left Nice, can celebrate a marriage there under the warrant he held as Her Majesty's Consul at Nice, notwithstanding his having been gazetted to another post.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That although it is not, perhaps, quite clear that Mr. Elmore has under the circumstances legally ceased to be Consul at Nice (the new Commission signed by Her Majesty not having, as we understand, been formally notified to him in accordance with the usual course and practice of the Foreign Office, and not having been delivered to him), still there is quite sufficient doubt upon the subject to render it inexpedient that he should any longer celebrate a marriage at Nice.

We regret that we misunderstood the question put to us in Mr. Lister's letter of the 27th ultimo.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd April instant, stating that he was directed by you to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of Reuter's telegram announcing the escape from New Caledonia and arrival at Sydney of Rochefort and other late Communist prisoners, who, it is reported, intend to proceed immediately to Europe; and

That the Secretary of State for the Colonies, as we would perceive, was desirous that Her Majesty's Government should at once consider what course they ought to pursue in the event of the French Government making a demand for the surrender of those persons on the ground of their having been guilty of other than political offences, or of the Colonial Government taking steps with a view to their removal from the Colony.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers in our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in the event of the French Government making a demand for the surrender of these persons, it will be necessary that evidence should be furnished to Her Majesty's Government that a specific crime has been committed within the Extradition Treaty (and not being a political offence) for which extradition is demanded (33 and 34 Vict., cap. 52, sec. 3, sub-sec. 1); and by sub-section 2, the fugitive criminal is not to be surrendered to a foreign State unless provision is made by the law of that State, or by arrangement, that the fugitive criminal shall not, until he is restored or had an opportunity of returning to Her Majesty's dominions, be detained or tried in the foreign State for any offence committed prior to his surrender other than the extradition crime proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded. (See also secs. 9 and 19 of same Act.)

Should the persons in question, therefore, come to this country, and be demanded by the French Government, it will of course be the duty of Her Majesty's Government to see clearly that the demand is one made in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty and Act, and in the event of arrest the accused will have the opportunity of proving to the magistrate, or to the Court on Habeas Corpus, that the demand has been made with a view to punishment for an offence of a political character.

The facts of the case, as well as the results of Lord Lyons' representations to the French Government, are fully stated in these papers, but Lord Tenterden was pleased to request our attention especially to his Excellency's recent despatches Nos. 260 and 261 of the 10th ultimo and their inclosures.

It may be observed generally, with reference to the question of military service in France, that by the Code Napoléon of 1803 the child born in France of an alien is held to be an alien unless he elects French nationality within the year after he attains his majority.

By the Law of 1851 the child born in France of an alien born in France is held to be French, unless he shall elect to be an alien within the year after attaining majority.

By a Bill of M. de Rotour's, however, which is now before the French Assembly, it is proposed to abrogate the Article in the Code Napoléon altogether, and to make the Law of 1851 apply to the first, instead of, as it now does, only to the second generation, which would constitute the child born in France of an alien a Frenchman, unless he claims alien nationality within the year following his majority. A copy of this Bill we find inclosed in Lord Lyons' No. 1069 of the 24th November, 1872.

This Bill having been referred to a Committee of the Assembly, they have reported against the proposed alteration of the existing law, but the form in which the Bill may be ultimately adopted is not yet made known.

So far as concerns the individual cases referred to in this correspondence, your Lordship is of opinion that Lord Lyons has done all that he properly could to place the British youths in a proper position in regard to the question of conscription, but as we observe, from Inclosure No. 8 in Lord Lyons' No. 260, the question has been raised by the Counsel attached to the Embassy, whether it would be expedient that notice should be given to British subjects residing in France of the necessity of a strict compliance with the Law of 1851, if they and their children who may come within its provisions desire to retain their English nationality, against which course Lord Lyons states certain reasons (No. 261 of the 10th March), advising that, at any rate, it would be advisable to await the result of the Bill now before the Assembly before issuing any such notice.

Lord Tenterden was further pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether we concur in the general principles laid down by Lord Lyons in his despatch No. 260 of the 10th ultimo; and, secondly, with our opinion on M. Treitt's suggestion above referred to, as to the publication of a notice respecting liability to military service; and in the event of our concurring in such a course, notwithstanding Lord Lyons' observations, your Lordship requested to be informed whether we consider that the notice should be issued at once, or delayed until the final adoption, or otherwise, of M. de Rotour's Bill, and if at once, in what terms we consider that it should be drawn up.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to observe, in conclusion, that the fact of these cases under the Law of 1851 occurring in various parts of France would in itself probably go far to call attention to the requirements of the law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the correspondence forwarded to us with Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant.

In our opinion, no further action should be taken on the general question of the liability of British subjects in France to military service in that country.

And in any particular cases, such as those referred to in Mr. Consul Hotham's letter of the 29th January, 1874, on the cases at Nice and elsewhere, redress should be sought for by immediate application to the proper French authorities.

We entirely agree with Lord Lyons that great inconvenience might follow the publication of any notice on the matter of liability to military service being made to British subjects in France at the present time, and even if M. de Rotour's Bill be adopted, we think that it should not be publicly noticed as proposed, and we therefore advise your Lordship not to adopt the suggestion made by M. Treitt.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received May 7.)

Temple, May 5, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 25th March last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons* reporting certain proposals which had been submitted to the French National Assembly for imposing taxes on gas, on threads of cotton, jute, wool, flax, hemp, or silk, and on coals and coke.

That Mr. Lister also inclosed a further despatch† containing additional particulars in regard to the above-mentioned proposals, and reporting that the law imposing duties on salted provisions imported into France, which formed the subject of his letter of the 21st instant, had been put into force.

That Mr. Lister was now to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the several proposals above referred to are within the stipulations of the Commercial Treaties of 1860, 1873, and 1874 between this country and France, of which copies were therewith inclosed.

That the Treaty of 1872, which was mentioned in those papers, was not ratified; the Tariff annexed to it, at the date of signature, was revised by the Mixed Commission appointed under that Treaty, and this revised Tariff was adopted by the two Governments in lieu of that which was first signed by their Plenipotentiaries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Treaties leave to the Contracting Parties the right of imposing an inland duty or excise tax upon any article of home production or manufacture. No limit is placed on the amount of this tax or duty.

And whenever such tax or duty is imposed by one of the Contracting Parties on any article of home production or manufacture, an equivalent compensatory duty may be imposed on similar articles the production or manufacture of the other Contracting Party.

We state this principle in the Treaty, because it seems probable that the French Government will impose many new taxes on articles of French production and manufacture, and, in each instance, will have the right to exact on importation an equivalent compensatory duty from similar British articles.

In each case, the question will be, first, whether the article on which the duty on importation is proposed is similar to the French article on which the inland duty has been put; and, secondly, whether the compensatory duty is the true equivalent of the inland duty.

These questions will, as a rule, be either for persons acquainted with the particular produce or manufacture to answer them for us, who have no means of knowledge on on the subject.

In answer, however, to your Lordship's questions arising out of the despatch of Lord Lyons, we beg to state that, in our opinion, the French Assembly will not be necessarily acting in contravention of the Treaties of 1860, 1873, and 1874, should they impose excise and customs duties upon the several articles referred to in the despatch, though they will be acting in contravention of such Treaties should the customs duties which they impose upon any of such articles on their importation from foreign countries exceed the fair equivalent of the excise duties which they impose upon similar articles of home manufacture.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 21st March last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons* relative to a supplementary import duty which it appeared that the French Government were about to impose on salted meats imported from abroad; and

That the previous correspondence referred to by Lord Lyons, and copies of the Treaties of 1860, 1873, and 1874 between this country and France were therewith inclosed; and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the extra duty in question can, under the terms of the Treaties, be levied on British goods.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the French Government is entitled, under Article III of the Convention of the 16th November, 1860 (which, notwithstanding the Act of Denunciation of the 15th March, 1872, is again put in force by the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873), and under Article I of the Convention of the 24th January, 1874, to impose a compensatory additional duty on salted provisions imported into France from other countries equivalent to any drawback granted to salted provisions of French manufacture or to any excise duty imposed, subsequently to the date of the Convention, on salted provisions manufactured in France, or on the salt used in the manufacture of salted provisions in France.

It would appear from the Reports in the copies of the "Journal Officiel" before us, that the French Chamber has resolved upon an additional customs duty upon salted provisions imported into France from other countries, but we are unable to gather from the Reports whether any additional drawbacks have been granted to exported salted provisions of French manufacture, or whether any additional excise tax has been imposed on salted provisions manufactured in France, or upon the salt employed in such manufacture, or whether, if any such drawback or excise duty has been granted, the amount thereof is equivalent to the additional duty imposed upon imported salted provisions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the question raised in the letter from the Scotch Mineral Oil Association, as to the relative amount of duties imposed upon French and British oils, is one upon which we think that some gentleman familiar with the manufacture of oils would form a sounder opinion than we can; but, so far as we are able to advise your Lordship upon the information now and previously afforded to us, we see no reason to dissent from or to modify the opinion expressed by us in reply to Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th April last, to the effect that the French Government were under the Treaty justified in putting the duties upon British oils as we understand that Government to have done or proposed doing.

As regards that portion of the same letter which has reference to an award made by a Mixed French and British Commission, alleged to have been appointed to indemnify British mineral oil manufacturers for losses sustained by them by reason of the violation, in July 1871, of a then existing Treaty, we have no materials before us to enable us to advise your Lordship on the matter.

became, as part of their contract, amenable to French discipline, and liable, for any breach of that discipline or misconduct, to be tried and punished by French law.

The trial seems—but the information supplied to us on that point is very slight—to have been regularly conducted; the accused were, no doubt, ably defended by a competent advocate, and the jury deliberated for nearly two hours before they gave their verdict of guilty with extenuating circumstances.

One incident of the trial was that two of the accused gave false evidence.

In this state of things it is very difficult to say that Her Majesty's Government can properly take any steps in the matter.

The most which your Lordship could, in our opinion, do would be to desire Lord Lyons to take some opportunity of speaking privately to the French Foreign Minister, and asking him to use his good offices, so that the utmost effect be given to the extenuating circumstances found by the jury, and the men be released as soon, and treated as leniently, as may be compatible with French law.

Lincoln's Inn, June 26, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th June instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. E. Blount,* calling attention to a law passed in France in August 1871, under which, when a person who has been domiciled in France dies, the personal property which he held at the time of his death, not only in France, but in any other country, is liable to succession duty; and to inclose a despatch† which your Lordship addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, calling for a Report on the subject, together with Lord Lyons' reply,‡ in which his Excellency incloses a Report by M. Treitt, the legal adviser of Her Majesty's Embassy.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to say that he was further to inclose the correspondence which took place in 1872, relative to the case of Mr. John Bass, which is referred to in these despatches, and to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to Mr. Blount, and also as to the instructions, if any, which should be given to Lord Lyons in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Law of 1871 adopts and follows out a principle which gives the rule of succession in all cases of personal property. That principle is, that personal property has no locality of its own, but follows the domicil of its possessor, and that rule is that the law of the domicil governs the succession, and all that is connected with and dependent upon the succession.

The law of England recognizes this principle, and acts upon this rule.

The question which arises in cases where this matter of law may be discussed is simply what was the domicil of the deceased.

It appears from the Report of M. Treitt (paragraph 8) that the French Legislature in passing the Law of 1871 accepted this construction, which, indeed, the terms of the law directly imply.

We are therefore of opinion that the French Law of August 1871 is not to be excepted to, and that Mr. Blount may properly be answered that your Lordship can make no representations to the French Government in order to obtain any modification of the law.

We are also of opinion that no general instructions should be given to Lord Lyons in respect to this matter, which is one fit for the decision of the French Tribunals, precisely as in the case of a Frenchman dying in England, and a question arising as to his domicil, and the duties consequently payable on his personal property wherever situate, the English Courts would decide the points.

That his Excellency inclosed a copy of the Supplementary Report of the Committee on M. de Rotour's Bill on this subject, and that we would perceive that, as it now stands, the proposed Bill appears to be divested of all that Her Majesty's Government considered they could reasonably object to in the measure as at first brought forward.

That, however, as the matter is one of extreme importance to British subjects resident in France, your Lordship requested that we would take the case again into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our early convenience, whether it will be proper to approve Lord Lyons' intention not to make any further representation to the French Government on the subject.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 8th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch,* with its inclosure, from Mr. Kennedy relative to certain Judgments which had been pronounced by the Court of Appeal in Paris in regard to suits brought against exporters of mineral oils to France whose claims for compensation had formed the subject of discussion by the Mixed Commission at Paris.

That the previous papers bearing on the question were inclosed; and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Kennedy with respect to the various points referred to in his despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Kennedy, in his letter of the 3rd July, 1874, has suggested two questions as arising out of the Judgment recently pronounced by the Court of Appeal in Paris in the action of Namshauer against Young's Mineral Oil Company. The first question so suggested is, whether the Commission, in dealing with Namshauer's case, the consideration of which was reserved by them until after the Judgment of the Court of Appeal should have been pronounced, should now award the full amount allowed by the Court without deduction for duties. The second question is, whether those cases which have been already decided by the Commission, but in which, by reason of the difference between the amounts awarded by the Commission and those decreed by the French Courts, Young's Mineral Oil Company will be losers to the amount of the duties allowed to the French Government by the Commission, ought to be reopened. Having regard to the views expressed by Lord Granville in his letter to Mr. Kennedy of the 15th December, 1873 (No. 126, p. 92 of printed Correspondence), and to the fact that those views were acted upon by the Commissioners in dealing with the cases included in their Award, in which there had been previous Judgments of competent Courts (see Mr. Kennedy's letter to Lord Granville of the 23rd December, 1873, No. 158, p. 107), and to the general approval expressed by Lord Granville of the settlement made by the Award (see his letters of the 20th January, 1874, to Mr. Kennedy, Nos. 240 and 241, p. 180), we are of opinion that the amount of the duties, viz., 5 per cent. ad valorem and 6 fr. or 9 fr. 60 c. excise duties (including "décimes"—as to which see letters No. 158, p. 107, and No. 208, p. 156), may properly be deducted from the full amount allowed by the Court of Appeal in Namshauer's case. So far as we can judge of the circumstances of this case, there is nothing in it which can distinguish it in principle from the cases which were disposed of by the Commission by their Award of the 5th January, 1874, and the only apparent reason for the decision of the Commission in respect of Namshauer's case being postponed was the fact that the Court of First Instance had taken a different view of the circumstances of that case from that which had been taken in other cases, but which view has been since held by the Court of Appeal to have been erroneous.

For the like reasons we are of opinion that the cases referred to in Mr. Kennedy's second question should not be reopened.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 2nd July ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 26th May last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a copy of the note which his Excellency had addressed to the French Government on the subject of the compensatory duty levied upon salted meats imported into France, and containing observations with respect to the bearing upon that duty of the Franco-Portuguese Treaty of the 11th July, 1866.

That Mr. Lister also inclosed, together with previous papers, a private letter from Her Majesty's Ambassador, containing further explanations as to the Treaty rights of Great Britain as regarded the duty in question; and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to the letter from the Foreign Office of the 2nd July ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch, with its inclosure, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, containing the answer which had been returned by the French Government to the representations addressed to them by his Excellency with respect to the new import duties on salted meats; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, together with the correspondence on that subject which was then before us, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Duc Decazes, in his reply of the 31st July, 1874, to Lord Lyons' letter of the 13th June, urges that salted meats are not included in the Tariffs annexed to the Commercial Treaties, and that it is only by virtue of the "most-favoured" clause (Article XIX) in the Treaty of the 23rd January, 1860, that the importation of salted meats from Great Britain could be treated as subject to a Conventional Tariff; and he further urges that, inasmuch as the Law of the 21st March, 1874, establishing a surtax of 4 fr. upon such articles, was applicable to all nations alike, Great Britain could found no claim under the "most-favoured-nation" clause.

Now it is to be observed that, although the IXth Article of the Treaty of the 23rd January, 1860, which provides for the imposition of compensatory import duties where new inland duties are imposed, is limited to the articles previously enumerated, the Ist Article of the Convention of the 24th January, 1874, which contains a similar provision, is, in its terms, not so limited, but is perfectly general in its application. It certainly would have strengthened the argument on behalf of Her Majesty's Government if a negative clause had been in each case introduced providing that an additional import duty should not be imposed except in cases in which there had been an imposition of additional inland duty; but we think that such a negative provision is fairly to be implied in both cases, and particularly in the Convention of January 1874, where there is a further provision for the reduction of import duty equivalent to any reduction that may be made in the inland duty. The effect of the Article I of the Convention of January 1874 appears to have been entirely overlooked by the Duc Decazes.

We doubt also whether the contention of the Duc Decazes, based upon the Law of the 21st March, 1874, being made applicable to all nations alike, and therefore excluding the operation of the "most-favoured-nation" clause, can be maintained. At the date of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, the existing duty on salted meats was fixed, as regards Portugal, at 60 c. by virtue of the Treaty between France and Portugal of the 11th February, 1866; and it is at least open to question whether the effect of the Ist Article of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, taken in connection with the Ist Article of the Convention of the 24th February, 1874, was not to fix the duty upon salted meats imported from Great Britain at the amount above mentioned, subject, however, to be increased or diminished in proportion to any increased or diminished inland duty upon the same article.

Lincoln's Inn, October 6, 1874.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 14th September ultimo, stating that, in consequence of the cessation at the end of this year of all connection between Her Majesty's Government and the British Church at Nice, and the necessity which had arisen for electing new trustees, the Committee of that Church Establishment had, in the inclosed letter (August 24), requested your Lordship to allow the Consular officer at Nice or Marseilles to become ex officio a trustee of the Church Establishment.

That your Lordship saw many objections to that proposal; and that he (Mr. Lister) was accordingly directed to request that we would take the letter of the trustees into our consideration, together with the accompanying draft of a letter to which it was a reply, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any better plan could be devised to help the trustees in the difficulty in which they now find themselves placed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, your Lordship cannot properly go further towards helping the Committee of the British Church Establishment at Nice than you have done in the letter of the 8th August, the draft of which has been transmitted to us.

We observe that, in this letter of the 8th August, your Lordship says that you will authorize the British Vice-Consul at Nice to continue his good offices to the Church Establishment, and to give every assistance in his power towards the settlement of its affairs, so far as he can do so without involving Her Majesty's Government in any responsibility, and that the Committee in their answer (24th August) inquire whether your Lordship would entertain any objection to the nomination as trustee or trustees of any party or parties in the Consular Department, such as the Consul at Marseilles or the Vice-Consul at Nice.

This question may, in your Lordship's opinion, require a direct answer, going beyond your Lordship's former answer, and we think the safer course would be to reply that, as one of the objects of the Committee is to vest the trust property and the control of the same in some official party or parties and their successors, your Lordship is unable to assent to the nomination of any Consular officer as a trustee.

We have, &c.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 26th September ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence* with Mr. Maude respecting the case of Major Blood, on whose behalf he applied for the support of Her Majesty's Government in recovering compensation for alleged loss of property sustained through the proceedings of the French authorities in causing his removal from Paris, as well as for the treatment which he had received at their hands, together with a despatch from Lord Lytton (No. 953), Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, to whom Mr. Maude's letter of the 24th August and its inclosures were referred.

That he (Mr. Lister) was also to inclose several despatches received last year from Lord Lyons and Lord Lytton,† reporting on that person's proceedings, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Maude.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Maude may properly be answered that the alleged loss of Major Blood's property is a matter in which Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere; and that the other matters involved in the statement forwarded by Mr. Maude do not afford sufficient ground for any representation or complaint on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 9.)

Lincoln's Inn, November 9, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 25th September ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship was desirous of obtaining our opinion on certain points connected with ship brokerage in France.

That a general statement on the subject was contained in Mr. Kennedy's despatch No. 35 of the 17th April last (Inclosure 1), and that his further despatch No. 47 of the 30th of that month (Inclosure 2) referred to Treaties between France and foreign Powers which Mr. Hunt, Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux, considered to bear on the question, and also referred to the practice of the Customs authorities at Bordeaux in the matter.

That copies of those Treaties would be found in the accompanying volume of Treaties of Commerce between France and foreign Powers.

That he (Mr. Lister) likewise inclosed the following papers:—A Circular despatch to Her Majesty's Consuls at ports in France, transmitting, for their observations, a copy of Mr. Kennedy's despatch No. 35 (Inclosure 4); their Reports in reply to that instruction (Inclosure 5); correspondence relative to complaints addressed to Her Majesty's Government on the system of ship brokerage in France (Inclosure 6), including despatches from Lord Lyons referred to in that correspondence relative to recent commercial arrangements between France and Russia.

That your Lordship caused the question of ship brokerage in France to be brought forward in the Mixed Commission appointed under the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between this country and France of the 23rd July, 1873. The representations made on the part of Her Majesty's Government were contained in the final statement, dated the 2nd July last (Inclosure 7), a copy of which, and of the replies returned on the part of the French Government (Inclosure 8), together with Reports from certain of Her Majesty's Consuls in France on those replies, were also therewith inclosed (Reports from Bordeaux, Havre, and Marseilles, Inclosure 9).

That we would perceive from the Ist Article of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, that brokerage was one of the matters in regard to which most-favoured-nation treatment was stipulated, and that by the IInd Article ships and their cargoes were placed on national footing.

That as bearing upon the point of Consular intervention in regard to brokerage, he (Mr. Lister) was to inform us that the provisions contained in Article III, relative to Consular attributions, was not carried into effect in the Supplementary Convention which was signed in pursuance of that Article on the 24th January last; that the two Governments had not as yet been able to come to an understanding on the subject, which it was decided last January should stand over for future consideration.

That under the circumstances above stated the principal points to be considered appeared to be—

(1.) What is the Treaty position of this country in connection with ship brokerage in France? and (2) if this country does not possess the right to claim exemption from employment of French ship brokers, is the existing French system of ship brokerage contrary to international comity, or does it impose a burden on British shipping against which complaint can properly be made?

That he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the question into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the above points, as well as on any other which might occur to us in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Treaty position of this country in connection with ship brokerage in 1874

France depends, in our opinion, upon the construction, first of Article II of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, and secondly, upon the construction of Article I of the same Treaty.

The French answer to Mr. Kennedy's final statement shows the sense in which the French Government is prepared to construe the Article II above referred to. That answer (D 1) states that French and English subjects are on precisely the same footing, and French and English ships are entitled to precisely the same treatment with respect to ship's brokerage. That the employment of a broker is merely a matter of necessity or convenience, and that a Frenchman who cannot speak and write French must employ a broker like an Englishman who is unable to speak and write French, so that both French and English are compelled to, or relieved from, the employment of a broker according to his knowledge or ignorance of the French language. We cannot regard this reasoning as satisfactory. There is, however, more reason to acquiesce in the argument that where brokers are necessary they should be Government officials, and so far responsible persons.

And, if the Treaty position of this country in the matter of ship's brokerage in France depended only on Article II of the Treaty of 1873, we should advise your Lordship to let the question rest as it stands upon Mr. Kennedy's statement and the answer.

Article I, however, of the Treaty contains the word "courtage," and provides that, in all that relates to brokerage (that is "courtage") and customs formalities, British subjects shall enjoy the treatment of the most favoured nation.

By reference to the context, "courtage," as used in this Article, must comprise, if it does not apply solely to, ship's brokerage. So the question immediately arises whether any nation is by Treaty with France exempt from ship's brokerage.

(a.) The Treaty with Bolivia, Article II (p. 168 of Treaties, "France and Foreign Powers, 1749 to 1868"), provides expressly that the subjects of either country "shall be at full liberty to transact their business in person, principally to present in the custom-houses their proper declarations, or to cause themselves to be represented by whomsoever they may deem fit, whether factors, agents, consignees, or interpreters, without being called upon, as foreigners, to pay any augmentation of charge or contribution."

The provision in the following paragraph (p. 169) of the same Article, "subject always to the laws and regulations of the country," applies only to purchases, sales, and prices.

(b.) The Treaty with Chile, Article II (at p. 1061 of the same volume), is somewhat more limited, since the employment of agents (as brokers) is confined to Consular Agents. If other persons are employed, then the laws of the country are to be followed; so that a Chilean would not be obliged to employ an official broker, if he obtained the assistance of a Chilean Consular Agent.

(c.) The Treaty with the Republic of the Equator, Article II (at p. 684), is in the widest possible terms, and no restriction whatever is imposed.

(d.) So also with Guatemala (p. 1365) and Nicaragua (p. 364).

(e.) The Treaty with Peru (pp. 122 and 123) is open to some doubt on the subject, as also is the Treaty with Salvador (p. 389), whilst the Treaty with the Sandwich Islands (p. 379) gives full power to dispense with the employment of the official broker, and so does the Treaty with Venezuela (p. 695).

We are therefore of opinion that, under the most-favoured-nation clause in the Treaty of 1873, this country is entitled to claim exemption from ship brokerage in France.

The employment of such officials, however, is so consistent, we believe, with French habits and practice, and the question of their suppression was so recently as 1866 discussed and negatived, that probably Her Majesty's Government would find it a most difficult task to bring the French Government to view the matter in the light in which it appears to us.

We are not aware how far the final statements of Mr. Kennedy and the French answer are definitive, but if they are not, we submit to your Lordship's consideration that the attention of the French Government might properly be called to the bearing of the Treaties above referred to upon the question, and some modification at least be obtained.

In answer to the second question put to us in Mr. Lister's letter, we cannot say that the existing French system of ship brokerage is contrary to international comity, but we think it imposes a burden on British shipping inconsistent with Treaty rights, and against which complaint can properly be made on that ground.

The final statement of Mr. Kennedy refers to other matters of detail in connection with the working of the French system of ship's brokerage with great accuracy as we gather from the several papers transmitted to us, and we have no further point upon which we desire to offer an opinion to your Lordship.

Since the above Report was drawn, we have been favoured with three letters, of the 1st, 8th, and 20th October, from Mr. Lister, transmitting documents relating to the question referred to and reported on by us.

Upon the documents transmitted with the first two letters we have no observations to offer.

But the despatch of Mr. Rainals sent with the letter of the 20th ultimo contains statements which, if accurate, afford a ground for representation to the French Government, and we think that the facts represented by Mr. Rainals on the case of vessels in distress might properly be brought to the notice of the French Government, with a view to arrangements being made under which either the Government broker shall be charged with the duty of acting in all matters of business for vessels in distress at a fixed tariff, or the employment of a Government broker in such cases be altogether dispensed with.

There is, however, as it seems to us, some obscurity in Mr. Rainals' despatch, and we are not sure whether he means that the Government broker is officially not allowed to attend the discharge or shipment of cargo, or merely that he is prevented the trouble of performing this duty by the private agents of the ship and cargo.

And the meaning of Mr. Rainals is made more uncertain, because he suggests that it would be "beneficial if regulations were issued establishing a fixed charge as brokerage for the entrance and clearance of vessels entering French ports in distress and for repairs, leaving the established charges for translations of documents, &c., as they are; but at the same time owners or masters of ships should be at liberty to engage private agents for other business."

Comparing Mr. Rainals' despatch with the despatches on the same subject from other Consular officers, we think it possible that Mr. Rainals may be under two mistakes: one that the tariff applicable to ships entering French ports covers the case of ships in distress whose cargo is discharged and reshipped in a French port.

The other that the employment of private agents is voluntary on the part of the masters or owners of the ships, and that the Government brokers are content not to interfere.

Therefore, before making any representation to the French Government as Mr. Rainals suggests, your Lordship would probably wait to know exactly from him and other Consuls what the real practice is, and what are the imposed official duties of French Government brokers in the case of a British ship entering a French port in distress and obliged to discharge cargo there.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received March 4.)

Temple, March 3, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with Lord Granville's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 16th January last, stating that he was directed by his Lordship again to request our attention to the subject of the marriages abroad of naturalized British subjects, which formed the subject of our Report of the 5th November last, herewith inclosed.

1874

That, in framing that opinion, we would appear to have had before us for consideration the circumstances of persons naturalized under the Naturalization Act of 1870 without reference to those naturalized under previous legislation.

That from the inclosed Report of the Royal Commission on Naturalization and Allegiance (pp. 8, 9, 10), it appeared that before 1850 no restriction was put on the place of residence of a naturalized alien, but between 1850 and 1858 the form of certificates of nationality was changed from time to time, and between 1858 and 1870 the form adopted was as in the inclosed paper marked (A.)

That the words underlined in that paper were inserted in naturalization certificates after 1850 on account of the inconvenience experienced from persons applying for naturalization in order to get British protection abroad for political and other purposes, while the clause making it necessary for a naturalized British subject to get leave of absence if he required to stay abroad more than six months was added in July 1858.

That the naturalization certificate given under the Act of 1870 was according to the form of the inclosed paper marked (B), and followed the wording of the 3rd paragraph of the 7th section of the Act of 1870.

That Lord Enfield was to request that we would take into our consideration those papers, together with those which had already been sent to us, and which were now again inclosed, and report to Lord Granville our opinion on the following points:—

1. Whether, in view of the words underlined in the paper marked (A), any person naturalized as a British subject between 1850 and 1870 could demand to be married at a British Embassy or Legation, under the Act of 4 Geo. IV., cap. 91, or at a British Consulate, under the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68.

2. Whether, in view of the words in the paper marked (B), "shall in the United Kingdom be entitled," &c., a person naturalized under the Act of 1870 can claim under either of the above-mentioned Acts a privilege which, if granted at all, must necessarily be granted out of the United Kingdom.

3. That, supposing any of the persons enumerated under the foregoing heads to be married abroad under either of the Foreign Marriage Acts, whether such marriages are legal in this country.

4. Whether, in the event of it subsequently appearing that, by absence of more than six months without leave, a naturalized person had forfeited his or her certificate previously to marriage under one of the above-named Acts, such marriage would thereby be invalidated in this country, and if so, whether any and what precautions should be taken at Her Majesty's Legations and Consulates to guard against this by requiring proof of residence within the United Kingdom or otherwise.

That Lord Enfield was to take that opportunity of pointing out to us what appeared to be an oversight in our Report of the 5th November, in which we said that a naturalized British subject might, under certain restrictions, claim to be married under the Consular Marriage Act at Berne or elsewhere. As there was no British Consulate at Berne, it was presumed that British subjects must be married there under the Act 4 Geo. IV., cap. 91, and that the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, was only available where a Consular officer was stationed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That with regard to the marriages at Embassies and Consulates of persons naturalized between 1850 and 1870 there is, in our opinion, so much doubt that further legislation is necessary both as to past and future marriages, and for the reasons stated in our answer to Lord Granville's 4th question, we think that, pending such legislation, such marriages should not be performed.

2. That, as we have already informed Lord Granville in our opinion of the 5th November, 1873, persons naturalized under the Act of 1870 appear to us to be entitled to the benefits of the Statutes in question, subject to the restrictions stated in that opinion.

That construction is based upon the plain intention of the Act (section 7) that the naturalized subject shall have the rights of an English subject in all foreign countries except his former country; but since it involves the rejection of the natural sense of the words "in the United Kingdom" in section 7, it will, in our opinion, be prudent to include a determination of the point in any future legislation upon the subject of foreign marriages.

3. That, even assuming that the Consular Marriage Acts may extend to persons naturalized between 1858 and 1870, the marriage at an Embassy or Consulate would, in our opinion, be void under the circumstances suggested, unless, independently of English Statutes, it were valid by the law of the country in which it is performed.

We are unable to suggest any satisfactory mode of meeting the difficulty without fresh legislation.

We have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received April 9.)

My Lord, Temple, April 9, 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Bourke's letter of the 20th March ultimo, stating that he was directed to request that we would give our careful attention to the following question, which your Lordship considers to be one of really pressing importance.

Mr. Bourke was also pleased to direct our attention to an Act of Parliament passed on the 28th July, 1849 (12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68), for facilitating the marriage of British subjects resident in foreign countries.

The objects of that Act were twofold:—

First, to remove doubts as to the validity of certain marriages which had been previously solemnized abroad; and, secondly, to confer power on Her Majesty's Consuls to solemnize marriages in cases in which one or both of the parties were British subjects.

This Act, upon the whole, has been found to work well, but misapprehensions have from time to time arisen as to the proper interpretation to be given to some of its clauses, and where the marriages have been found to have been illegally solemnized, special Acts of Parliament have been passed to remove doubts as to their validity.

A copy of each of these Acts were inclosed for our information.*

But since the passing of these Acts irregularities have been committed at other Consulates, and doubts having again arisen as to their validity, your Lordship is of opinion that, with a view of anticipating any question of legitimacy or of right of inheritance to property which might, in consequence, arise, a short Bill should be introduced into Parliament early in the present Session to declare such marriages to be valid.

Mr. Bourke was also pleased to state that we should find the cases in question described in accompanying memoranda marked (A) and (B); he was also to add that although these memoranda touch upon a variety of points, your Lordship is not prepared to recommend that an attempt should be made to pass a Marriage Act Amendment Bill this Session. In face of the many difficulties with which that question is surrounded, more especially that of the interpretation to be put upon the laws of foreign countries bearing on the question of mixed marriages, still your Lordship considers that in passing a short Act to legalize the irregular marriages which have taken place, advantage might be taken to introduce into the Bill a clause modifying the Act of 1849 so far as regards marriage warrants.

At present the warrant is made personal to each Consul, and as this has occasioned many of the difficulties which have arisen, it is proposed that it should no longer be addressed to the Consul by name, but should be addressed to each Consul or Vice-Consul in his official capacity, so as to be capable of being used by his deputy or successor.

In transmitting to us the various papers bearing on the subject of these irregular marriages,† Mr. Bourke was to request that we would take this question into our early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it would be very desirable, in our opinion, to introduce into the Act giving validity to certain Consular marriages of the validity of which doubts may exist, a clause modifying 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, sec. 19, so that the warrant may not be

---

* Acts of 1823–68.

† See List.

1874

personal, but applicable to the Consular officer in his official capacity, and capable of being used by his deputy or successor.

We would submit to your Lordship that in drawing the Bill provision might be made to enable the deputy or appointee of a Consul to act even after the death or supersession of the appointor, until a new Consul is appointed and capable of acting, or until notification to desist from acting is given by a Secretary of State; and the case which occurred at Nice a short time ago, raising doubts as to whether a Consul appointed to a new post, but still being in residence at the old Consulate, might, until his departure or until the new Consul could legally begin to act validly, solemnize a marriage, might be provided for.

Lincoln's Inn, May , 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th April ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Druce and Jackson,* in which, with reference to the refusal of the Foreign Office to grant a passport to their client, M. Uhthoff, on the ground of his having been born in Mexico, his father having been only naturalized in this country in 1857, and consequently under the Naturalization Act of 1844, Messrs. Druce and Jackson submit their reasons for considering that the Acts of 1844 and 1870 should be taken and read together, from which your Lordship concludes that Messrs. Druce and Jackson intend to convey that their client has acquired the rights of a British subject naturalized under the Act of 1870, and as such is entitled to a Foreign Office passport; and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

Copies were inclosed of the correspondence with Messrs. Druce and Jackson, of the Naturalization Acts of 1844 and 1870, and of the regulations governing the issue of Foreign Office passports, together with the draft of the despatch to Lord Odo Russell bearing on this subject, and the Report of the Royal Committee of Naturalization therein referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the certificate of naturalization referred to in 33 Vict., cap. 14, sec. 10, sub-sec. 5, is a certificate granted under that Act, and the provisions of that sub-section do not apply to a certificate under 7 and 8 Vict., cap. 66. This latter Act is wholly repealed, and cannot be read with the 33 Vict., cap. 14.

Your Lordship may therefore, in our opinion, direct that Messrs. Druce and Jackson be answered that, since the case of their client is not within the Act of 1870, the Foreign Office passport cannot be granted to him on the grounds which they put the claim upon.

Whether your Lordship will think it right that Messrs. Druce and Jackson be informed that their client may be entitled to ask for naturalization under the Act of 1870 is for your Lordship's consideration.

My Lord,

Foreign recruiting in British Colonies.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence* which had passed between the Foreign Office and the Colonial Office on the subject of an Act passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, entitled, "An Act to control Recruiting in British India for the service of foreign States," the Colonial Office being, as we should perceive, of opinion that it would be desirable that the Governors of British Colonies should take steps for securing the enactment of laws similar to the Indian Act.

That your Lordship, as we should further perceive, was inclined to question whether such a measure might not have the effect of weakening the force of the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870, which it appeared to your Lordship was already sufficient for the purpose in view; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether there was any objection to the legislation proposed by the Colonial Office, keeping in view the fact that the provision which it was contemplated to introduce into the Colonial Acts of meeting cases of recruiting for the service of foreign States at peace with other foreign States was advisably omitted on the revision of the old Foreign Enlistment Act.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No objection to proposed legislation, which will not weaken the Foreign Enlistment Act.

That events may take place on which it will be very desirable that the Governors of Colonies should have the power of controlling or stopping altogether the recruiting or enlisting of persons for foreign service in times of general peace.

"The Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," is in its operation confined to a time of hostility.

We do not therefore apprehend that the India Act or similar Colonial Acts would weaken "The Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," and we therefore see no objection to the course proposed by the Colonial Office.

The Attorney-General and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 22.)

Lincoln's Inn, July 22, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th instant, upon some drafts submitted to us in his letter of the 30th ultimo, upon the subject of the proposed Conference at Brussels to discuss the rules of military warfare, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh, containing the reply of the Russian Government to the notification which Lord Augustus Loftus was instructed to make to that Government in regard to the conditions upon which Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to send a Delegate to the Conference; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that despatch, together with M. de Westmann's note, into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether the assurance then given by the Russian Government as to the nature of the subjects to be discussed at, or excluded from, the deliberations of the Conference might be accepted as sufficient.

That as it was proposed that the Conference should meet on the 27th instant, the question then submitted to us was, as we should perceive, one of much urgency.

That the draft to Lord A. Loftus, to which his present despatch was the reply, was therewith annexed in print for our convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the note of M. de Westmann to Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh leaves everything open.

The project is described as a "point de départ" qui "pourra être amendé au cours des délibérations," and the only limit to this amendment or extension is the understanding that neither maritime operations, nor naval warfare, nor the relations of belligerents at sea, nor in general the recognized principles of international law, shall be made the subject of discussion "par nous"—by the Russian Government or Russian Delegates.

Then follows the general reservation for a future completion of this work of humanity, according to the progress of ideas, customs, and interests.

We have thought it our duty to place these views of the note before your Lordship, and not to stop with a mere expression of our opinion whether the assurance given by the Russian Government as to the nature of the subjects to be discussed at or excluded from, the deliberations of the Conference might be accepted as sufficient or not.

1874

Your Lordship will see from what we have written that the assurance given by the Russian Government is, in our opinion, too vague to be satisfactory, but as your Lordship's intention is to send only a military Delegate to the Conference, and the powers of that Delegate will, we believe, be very small, and his action almost immediately under the eye of the Government, we think your Lordship may properly treat the Russian assurance as sufficient, and not press for further explanations.

We have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 24.)

Lincoln's Inn, July 24, 1874.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 4th and 20th instant, on the subject of the proposed Conference at Brussels on the rules of military warfare, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying drafts to Major-General Sir Alfred Horsford, informing him of his having been appointed to attend the Conference as Delegate on the part of Great Britain, and furnishing him with instructions for his guidance in that capacity.

That he was to request that we would take the drafts into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whethe they are right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the drafts submitted appear to be proper in all respects.

We have, &c.
(Signed) RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
